The manufacture of woollen articles was one of the historic industries of Ireland. The detailed regulations of the Brehon Laws, 438 A.D. regarding the colours to be used by the different classes, and the description of ornamental textures in early literature show a considerable development of the craft. In later years an export trade developed both to England and the Continent An kallan writer in the 14th century mentions a white serge which was much esteemed and called "Sain d'Irlando " After the 14th century the woollen trade attained such dimensions that it aroused the lealousy of English rivals with the result that legislation was enacted in 1698 ultimately causing its destruction 3

Linen weaving, however, was allowed to expand Flax culture and linen weaving had already been in existence in Ireland from earliest times, but it was not until the destruction of the woollen trade that linen weaving assumed importance in the country In 1697 William III invited Louis Crommelia and other Hugeunots from Holland to develop the industry in the North of Ireland, with the result that Irish Linen and Damasks are world renowned Poplin owes its origin in Ireland also to Huguenotti who settled in Dublin in 1693 Though most of the silk used is foreign, Dublin weavers succeed life making it a distinct fabric of unrivalled softness of texture and brilliance of colouring

SUGAR RATIONING NOTICE TO DOMESTIC CONSUMERS HEADS OF INSTITUTIONS, MANUFAGTURERS, CATERERS, WHOLESALERS AND RETAILERS

The Minister for Industry and Commerce desires to announce that the distribution of brown sugar to the wholesale and retail trades will be discontinued with effect as from 1st August 1947 Sufficient white sugar is now available to enable current rations to be met fully in that form when the stocks of brown sugar held by traders have been liquidated and arrangements are being made accordingly. It is not possible however to increase the domestic ration above lb weekly or to increase the quantity of sugar which may be obtained on foot of permits held in any case As from the ration week commencing on Saturday 2nd August 1947 therefore retail traders having only stocks of white sugar on hands should supply the full $\frac{1}{4}$ lb weekly domestic ration to their registered customers in that form Retail traders having stocks of brown sugar on hands may continue to supply a proportion not exceeding ONE-THIRD of the weekly domestic ration to their customers in the form of brown sugar until the stocks have been liquidated. The sugar coupon applicable to the ration week commencing on 2nd August 1947 is coupon No 10, lettered "M" from page 34 of the General Ration Book (1944 issue)

Heads of institutions manufacturers caterers and other persons holding sugar permits will not be required to accept any portion of their quotas in the form of brown sugar after 31st July 1947 Deliveries of white sugar to their suppliers are being adjusted to enable the full quotas to be met in the form of white sugar as from the month of August

An Order entitled Emergency Powers (Sugar) Order, 1943 (Exchange Value of Sugar Coupons) Order, 1947 (Amendment) Order 1947 has been made by the Minister to effect the necessary changes in accordance with the foregoing arrangements

Another One—Another chapter of those contemptible adumbrating-descriptions of life in Eire has been written by yet another one of our ten-day English towists. lish tourists in which Lismore Cathedral is referred to as 'that horrible monstrosity'

Just what this gentleman's conception of architectural sublimity is I can't even guess Perhaps he has gazed too long at picture postcards of Westminster. House or at the ducal man-sions of his country's aristocrats, or maybe his particular phobia is a Catholic Church, but certainly his ignorance of architecture is in proportion to his bigoted injustice to a land which offered hospitality to him and others like him And yes! he was so fled at the sight of it that he left the town Pity that we could not build a replica at our immigration ports
