HIDDEN TREASURE-7.

The 'Lutine' Treasure

an Autumn day in 1799 a captured French frigate Luline, left England for the Continent with a large consignment of gold and silver bullion That night she went to pieces off the coast of Holland, during a heavy gale taking down with her almost the whole of her crew. There were only two survivors. The valuable cargo was insured by Lloyd's and since then several attempts have been made by their Agents to recover it. One interesting relic brought to the surface was the Lutine's Bell. This now hangs in Lloyd's offices in London and is rung whenever an announcement of special importance is to be made
