BALANCES

I promised a course of Hand-Balancing and as I was asked during the week to begin it soon Rural Science—Denis Hayes
Seamus Power and Martin Quinlan

I will start this week with the preliminary work. The elbow balance is a necessary preliminary to the hand-balance firstly it will give you a keen sense of balance secondly, if you fall you cannot hurt yourself as you are close to the ground and thirdly it can be used as a beginning for other balances It is very easy to master just follow instructions and keep practising until it comes easy to you Here is the best method for performing the balance You first of n-charge) addressing to the said be over-estimated

Mr Sean Baston (Teacher-lour head well back easy but tricky A little practice is necessary so do not be discouraged if you fail the first time—keep trying Next week we will have the Head Balance A word of advice it is a good thing to have some one with you when performing balances In this way your mistakes can be spotted easily Physical Culture Personalities Maurice (Monnie) Fraher The Frahers of Dungarvan have always been connected with sport, and the name of the late Daniel Fraher winner of Irish titles at running jumping Tallow one of the successful veight-throwing will live forcandidates and past-pupil replied on behalf of the students achievements of the late Daniel Fraher in the athletic arena as ne was mostly before the public during his athletic career Not so fortunate was his son Maurice (Monnie) Fraher who although winning a name that will forever stay in the minds Culturists remained unknown to his own townsmen and indeed to the majority of his countrymen For this reason I now rerecall the record of one of Ire land's greatest strong men and one of the first men to introduce the Iron Game' to the Emerald

Contrary to expectations Monme Fraher did not continue to keep the family name in the forefront of Irish athletics His mind turned to the much-envied strong men of that period and he decided to train to surpass their 'impossible-to-beat" feats One can only judge how well he succeeded by recalling the poundages he raised when competing against England's finest weight-lifters These men were at that time amongst the best in the world It was against the powerful and muscular phenomenon Charlie V Wheeler in a match in London that Monnie Fraher startled the PC World with a remarkable showing These two battled for victory on the two lifts known as the righthand-swing and two hands dead-lift Wheeler beat Fraher in the swing by the small margin of 🕏 It must be remembered that Wheeler was a fully trained lifter while Fraher could be Hatcheries or at any of our Later on Wheeler created a World record on this lift—a feat that has never since been surpassed since it was made over thirty years ago This should give readers some idea of what Fraher was up against In the second lift both men succeeded in Dead-Lifting 530 lbs each A truly marvellous feat of strength Read next week how Monnie Fraher was proclaimed a worldbeater and how he gave up the chance of being a world cham-

Nacancies ARMY

FOR SKILLED AND UNSKILLED MEN

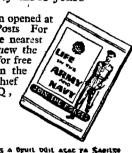

To young men between the ages of eighteen and twenty-eight years who are undecided about their future or who are unemployed at the moment, the Army offers a splendid opportunity of acquiring a career

Whatever your bent you will find an occupation to suit you in the Army You will be given specialist training in the most up-todate Military equipment, or if you are a skilled tradesman you will be employed at your own trade. Even a short term of service with the Forces will give you training and experience which will be invaluable to you in later life

The new higher rates of pay are now in operation Added to the cash value of the food, clothing and accommodation which the soldier receives free, these rates compare very favourably with wages in civilian occupations

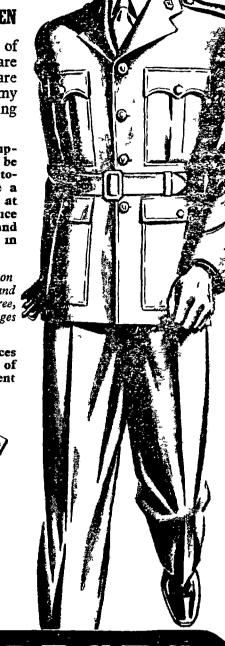

If you have had previous service in the Forces you can now rejoin for a further term of service The upper age limit for re-enlistment has been raised to thirty-three years

Recruiting Centres have been opened at all Military Barracks and Posts For further particulars call to the nearest Military Barracks and interview the Recruiting Officer, or write for free illustrated booklet "Life in the Army and Navy" to the Chief Recruiting Officer, Dublin GHQ,

In life's dim day through pain to God Praise to the Father and the Holy Ghost the three in One O grant her grace in heaven's reign, Through Margaret's prayers and daily pain

It was just at evetide when all was still God gave his great command And took that bright and sinless soul. Unto His own great land

She had the nature of heart so loving A heart that was purer than And to those who knew and loved her. Her memory shall never grow

The weary hours and days of Her troubled nights are passed That ever-patient worn out Has found sweet rest at last We miss her kind and generous hand, Her fond and anxious care Her home is sad without her,

She is missed now everywhere No pen can write, no tongue can tell.

How we all do feel her loss,
