(To The Editor) Dear Sir -I have read with interest your article on the wreck of the "Moresby" and as was born in The-Rectory Dungarvan the residence grandfather the late Rev John Bain MA who was the Church of Ireland Rector and was res-ponsible for the burials, assisted by the then Methodist Minister, motor Broker—New, and members are requested to at by the then Methodist Minister, tend Deputy Sean Ormond will I have often heard the story The crew were buried in one large grave, Capt Comer his wife and child in another and two cadets in another I could still pick out the graves in St ceased seamen etc, who came over from England The late Mr Miller and Mr Ruddel also showed great binduces for the deshowed great kindness to the relatives Mr Ruddel had a cross erected to the two cadets at the request of their parents the third cadet was taken to Eng-and for burial I may mention that some years ago about 1913 my father (the late Capt Biggs) and I erected a Pitch Pine Tablet set on a concrete base over the large grave, containing all the names but last time I was in the churchyard I noticed this has disappeared and would be interested to know where it now is? As regards the coloured cook (Hunter) I believe the last act of his was to go on deck and give the crew hot drinks and Christmas pudding—he then jumped overboard This was told by one of the survivors -
