Southpaw Flu, has put me down for a count of ten week I have a grand story which gives joy to the writer and wil I hope give joy to the readers as well We will call it The Grandfather Clock" It records an instance by no means rear. in which charitable protest ants risked their very lives to save a Catholic priest glass and it all happened some time early in the last century.

In a mansion now ruined which stood on 'The Lawn there lived a family of reckless young men Drinking gambling. ests in life One bright evening three of these young bucks, saw a monk crossing their property Tired of harmless sport one of them suggested tormenting the holy man He placed a sprong in a hole in the ground, its chaff and derision for his bro-thers who called on him to Jump the sprong himself In rage he tried to do so but to the horror of his brothers he feil on the points and died in terrible agony Seeing this the monk took to his heels It was well he did so for the enraged brothers snatched up a rope swearing that they would hang him on "The Hangman's Tree' The "The Hangman's Tree' The monk rushed into a hearby house and asked to be sheltered Robert and Jane Willis were Protestants but they did not hesitate to help one in danger They hid the hunted priest be-hind a grandfather clock a grandfather clock the nre-place The yelling hunters were quickly the scene and they asked it the Monk had passed by Quiet trathfully Robert Willis stated that no such person had passed by his door bullles set off in the direction of Tallow Blessing the brave charitable couples the good Monk made off in safety We must reflect here, that had the young villians made a search found the Monk, the man and his wife would undoubtedly have met the same fate as the one they had sheltered grandfather clock was in its corner until 1922. Nobody seems to know where it went to after that The brave Robert and his wife Jane are buried in Mogeely Robert was great-grandfather to the present Willis boys

The father of the rakes men-tioned above was a Magistrate Going to Tallow one evening to pass sentence on a Croppy his horse took fright and the rider was pitched to the ground man rushed to assist him but it was too late the horseman's neck was broken The Magistrate's only daughter awaiting Ir you meet me in the garden her father's return, dressed for dinner donning for the occasion a new flimsey dress Standing Now her parents they con-by the kitchen fire for the sented and we're blessed admiration of her fawning ser-
