URBAN COMMENTARY

Dungarvan Urban Council have practically "talked-out," lavatory, and the famous round-his wife at the house of his about at the Square, as these brother Joe items have been on the agenda for the past three or four suc-cessive meetings So far no de-lan who emigrated to the cisions have been made The United States in 1927 Since last meeting of the Council then he has carved out a most rate intering of the country are the last carved out a most rate and ered on for almost three successful career for himself hours and most of the discushours are merely revisions of way around the world via the things which had come up on Pacific. He is attached to the previous occasions. I would like fiscal side of one of the major

THE WATER SUPPLY

Grave complaints have been lodged against the towns water intelligent approach to life, and supply which cost the ratepayers thousands of pounds a little over a decade of years ago I remember when the Deelish scheme was completed we were told that we have to leave us as their energy and was to leave us as their energy and there would be enough water to mitiative would be a definite grown the town—where has it gone to, I wonder—there s not a sup in the upper reaches of the we have such ambassadors as he town now.

and the warnings shouted from who frequent Croke Park but the dark streets on the previous what is not well-known is that night that taps in Abbeyside the Home receives no State aid would be dry on Sunday even-ing I found that the warning public for its very existence was without foundation. When I turned on the cold tap in the kitchen at 3 pm on Sunday evening the water gushed out just as it had before the Coun-il's warning was issued ' The whole matter has been the cause of much adverse comment and if taken as a straw it Angels are coming to watch over certainly shows what way the wind is blowing as to the way So list to the wind coming over the town is being run

TRAFFIC ON THE SQUARE My attention has been drawn to a most detailed illustration in ll colour drawn by Councillor D Moloney and displayed in a frame in the window of Messrs Moloney & Sons, Ltd., which lows Councillor Moloney's ideas of how traffic should be re gulated at the Square Coun-cillor Moloney must certainly believe in these ideas most firmly as he forthrightly calls his illustration a design for 'A Crash Proof Square" Apparently he is even ruling out the out in the blue human element or perhaps he is Laden with herrin' of silvery ently he is even ruling out the human element or pernaps he but I would like to have a little And soon they be silver for more detail about the legend at the foot of the illustration, especially the item which states that a Garda on point duty on the Square would cost the rate-payers £500 per annum. En passant, I would like to hand a bouquet to our local Gardai for the most efficient The nets will be drying, the nets manner in which they handled the heavy flow of traffic on and the heavy now of traine of and through the Square on last Monday morning With hundreds of cars passing on to Tramore for "the 15th" and heavy local traffic around the town there was not even a whisper of a collision. A practical backing for the point I made last week that manual regulation of traffic by a Pointsman at this junction and not a mechanical contraption, is the proper solution for a problem if such exists, at this

I gazed from a city window And gave a weary sigh Tall chimney pots and buildings grey Shut out the evening sky I felt like some sad captive Confined to prison gloom

Far from the city's weary way To far off scenes of home I climbed once more purple hills roamed by silver streams I rested on a mossy bank And dreamt loves old sweet

I caught the breath of Summer flowers The scent of new mown hay I wandered on by shady bowers I heard a brooklet's lay I saw the sunset's golden arms Embrace the evening sky I heard the bird's sweet evensong And the night winds gentle I saw the little starlets peep Their jewelled eyes ashine I lingered in a moonlight glade

the sound of their voices at On my ear never music felt sweeter than now falls their nnnocent hum The fragrance of infancy round them where shadows as yet some life hath pleasures unnumbered for others but burdens and cares.

For some how intricate life's snares with none near to shield or to guide, For others how calmly shall years flow no dangers or ills can betide, As I caught that gay offerus of voices, Ah then did my heart breathe a prayer That God may watch over and Yes, dear ones bask in the sun-

Too soon shall your young hearts in sadness from the sweet dream of childhood awake Play on while you live in life's morning with laughter the swift hours beguile, Play on fer an eye watches o er you paternal and loving the night-

added after the recital of more familiar sins that of "throwing peanuts in the river" thought they were repenting of In fact even from the collectors wasting food. It then occurred to him that it might be a new slang expression for some boyish prank when the last and many advantages over the mere slang expression for some boyish accumulation of specimens— prank When the last and smallest child failed to confess it, he decided to fish for information To bring up the subject he said "What about throwentered through the bedroom ing peanuts in the river" But window of Mr J Mills farm—Father," said a bewildered voice, house at Coolydoody Tallow it. "I'm neaturs."
