The Gambled Horse Emigrant was a horse which had much more than the usual association with gambling. He was won on a game of cards passed from a jockey to a bookmaker who in turn squared an account with a colleague by giving him a half share. In the Grand National of 1857 the owners made a bet with a man called Hughes who had four horses in the race that Emigrant would be first over the water jump at the end of the first round. Boyce the jockey brought Emigrant away at flag fall and at the water jump one of the Hughes horses came alongside but Emigrant landed a length in front and won the bet for his owners. He did more however, for he went on to win the race in a stylish fashion

The Grand National of 1857 was a lucky one for the owners of Emigrant This time it may be YOUR lucky race. Get your Sweep Ticket now!
