BANISH BARBERRY BLACK STEM RUST

Black Stem Rust caused heavy losses in wheat in the past year. This disease spreads from the Common Barberry shrub to cereal crops in the early Summer

YOUR NIGHT-CAP

You can prevent Black Stem Rust in cereals by destroying all plants of the Common Barberry now.

> The following points will help you to identify the Common Barberry

- Leaves have spiny edges and branches have thorns arranged in groups of three
- Outer bark is grey, inner bark is bright
- If unchecked, the plant grows into a large bush, 10 feet or so in height, and produces bunches of long, bright red berries in the Autumn

If you have any difficulty in distinguishing Common Barberry (Berberis Vulgaris) from harmless ornamental species of Barberry ask your Agricultural Instructor or Parish Agent to help you

EMIGRATION

To the Editor Dungarvan Leader Dear Sir -I was surprised at the answer to my letter the writer seemed to have changed opinions or perhaps he did not mean what he wrote in his originai article We can only judge from the printed word—it read 'Many young people" and did not state "some, not all' It also mentioned "people wno have the guts can just as easily grasp a portion of the success at home. Perhaps he can tell at home 'Perhaps he can tell me where 'It would be an answer to my prayer, and give me the greatest joy of my life to return to dear old Ireland The spirit of adventure was always in our youth, but the pro-portion of those who leave Ireland for this reason are small in comparison with those who leave It requires guts to leave your

THE LUCK OF THE NATIONAL

When Major Hugh Peel bred Poethlyn he did not think very much of him, because he sold him for £7. Within a few years the weak little foal had improved so much that the Major bought him back the price being £50 and the first Dee salmon he caught

Six years later Poethlyn won a substitute Grand National which was run at Gatwick and the following year, 1919 he proved that this victory was not a fluke by again winning, this time over the Aintree course. He also became one of the few to win a Grand National carrying 12 st 7 lb

The Grand National of 1919 was a lucky one for Major Peel This time it may be YOUR lucky race Get your Sweep Ticket now
