SOMETHING IS ROTTEN
A sermon recently preached in Limerick by Father Liam Ryan, M.A., D.D., University College, Cork, contained many hard-hitting facts and is sure to be quoted far from the Treaty City.
Fr. Ryan suggested that there was something rotten in the state of Ireland, and without mincing his words he hit out at unjust employers and workers who were active in fraternities but idle in the workshops.
He spoke in no uncertain terms of the tremendous unrest in Ireland today and the terrible fact that a recent survey carried out by the International Labour Organisation showed that of nineteen allies investigated, this country which is professionally ninety-nine per cent. Christian, had the worst record for industrial disputes. He said that too many Irish bosses and workers seem to know more about angels and saints than about one another.
Expanding on this theme Fr. Ryan said that workers and employers were organised into two opposing camps, each preparing for the battle which inevitably comes, each seeking to discover the worst aspects of the other. "We are all human beings," Fr. Ryan is quoted as saying, "and surely it is time that we at least learned to talk to one another honestly and sincerely and not merely reciting the party line which we have learned by heart back-stage."
Fr. Ryan also had this to say: "We live in a peculiar world, a world that has explored planetary space, but has yet to explore the space which separates men from each other. We have thrown bridges across every river in the world but we have not built bridges from people to people, from worker to employer, from Catholic to Protestant, from North to South in Ireland."
"We have learned how to communicate with other people at the ends of the earth, but not to communicate with our next door neighbour here in Ireland."
The truths in Fr. Ryan's sermon cannot be denied and were these faults which he so precisely relates to be overcome then I think we would have gone a long way on the road towards establishing proper labour relations between employer and worker, the lack of which is responsible mainly for the unhappy position the country is in today.

OLD PARISH MEMORIES
Mrs. Mal O'Higgins will be making her Radio Eireann debut in a programme "Between Ourselves" at 8.30 p.m. tonight (Thursday) but it will not be as a song-writer as we all know the Dungarvan-born woman but in a tape recording of some of her childhood memories in Old Parish when, as she says herself, "poor Tom, Carthy was my idol and lover."
The story Mal will relate in tonight's R.E. programme is a true tale and should be very much appreciated by all but by Old Parish people especially.

PYE CHIEF QUITS
Big news in the world of high finance last week was that which informed us that Mr. Charles Orr Stanley had quit the Pye radio, T.V. and electronics firm which he had built up from virtually nothing to a £14 million giant.
Mr. Stanley, who is 67, is son of a famous Cappoquin man, Mr. John Stanley, one of the founders of the Cappoquin Rowing Club. He carried on the great interest which his father had in the club and is an honorary Life President of the Club which he has endowed handsomely on several occasions in recent years.

SISTER GETS COURT INJUNCTION AGAINST BROTHER

Litigation Over Fifteen Acre Lismore Holding
A small holding of 15 acres which was described as being of almost mountainous land at Monahull, Lismore, was the subject of an action between a sister and brother at Dungarvan Circuit Court before Judge S. Fawcett last Tuesday.

The plaintiff was Mrs. Joan Butler, Monahull, and the defendant was her brother John Coleman, Junior, same address. She claimed an injunction restraining the defendant from trespassing on the lands damaged for trespass and a mandatory injunction compelling the defendant to remove the buildings he had on the land on the holding.

In my dreams of I think of the teacher's fond smile. In the morning to greet us like a mother's child. I can hear the roll calling of our studies and play. At the School at the Rock.

It is well I can picture the start of each day. When the teacher and pupils united in prayer. Every work was made sacred by that offering to God. Of our studies and play. At the School at the Rock.

With light hearts we could fare exams every year. For with such a teacher there was nothing to fear. Every face there could smile as their teacher in childhood. For excellent was the watchword in The School at the Rock.

In hundreds to Ireland we have seen National schools. In all the same programmes and in all the same rules. But not one has a teacher so loved by its flock. As that fountain of learning in The School at the Rock.

Though some of its pupils have chosen to roam. And some in old Ireland now. They shall always remember till they reach the sod. Their teacher in childhood. At the School at the Rock.

CAPPOQUIN FAMILY IN THE NEWS
Cappoquin was well represented at the Church of Our Lady of the Visitation, Greenford, Middlesex, on Sunday when a packed congregation watched ten-year-old May Queen, Doreen Conway, crown a statue of the Blessed Virgin. Her seven-year-old sister Geraldine, first communicant on the day before, was one of her sister's six attendants. Over 2,000 parishioners took part in the public act of homage which followed when the crowned statue was carried in open procession.

WAS REGISTERED OWNER

When Mr. Carroll rose to make his submission Judge Fawcett said that what defendant wanted him to do was to register his own order made in 1965 and he had no intention of doing this unless something very substantial was submitted to make him change his mind. The only way in which Mr. Carroll could proceed was to make an application to have the order set aside. Prima facie, Mrs. Butler was the registered owner.

Mr. Carroll said that he would call evidence to show that there was fraud in her agreement was concerned. He would also call evidence to show that the disputes between John Senior and John Junior arose when she came from England. His case is, said Mr. Carroll, "that when John Coleman Senior transferred the place to my client having registered the title and having subsequently acquired title, my client then had an equitable right to call on him to perfect the title."

Judge Fawcett then granted the injunctions claimed by plaintiff and granted a decree of specific performance against the defendant. He made an order that the lands be made a very audacious claim to it as the counter-claim is full of vagueness.

His Lordship then granted the injunctions claimed by plaintiff and granted a decree of specific performance against the defendant. He made an order that the lands be made a very audacious claim to it as the counter-claim is full of vagueness.
