HOLIDAY HAZARDS

Although the weather is still not very enticing where sea-side tripping and lake and river-side picnicking is concerned, there is one sport which is in time about the hazards that usually accompany such summer expeditions will not be taken as an out-of-patent refresher—swimming and whether this is done by the seaside or in river or lake it is a relaxation which it is full of dangers if carelessly approached.

A few straightforward precautions are all that have to be observed to ensure that what usually commences as a gay outing does not end up in a tragedy. If these are checked each time then you can rest assured that the chances of a drowning accident in your family are very small indeed.

Even where good swimmers are concerned there are elementary precautions to be observed wherever strange bathing places are encountered. When I was a school-boy one of the Irish authors I read most avidly was Seamus Mac Giollaigh who used the pen-name "Maire." He wrote some beautiful Irish stories which always had a happy ending. In one of his stories he describes a swimmer who has been swimming in dangerous places in water and about any other likely dangers that might exist. He will of course have taken the very necessary precautions before going into the water of not having had a heavy meal for at least half an hour. He will also, where possible be accompanied by a companion. It is a very important question. I claim that even though he is an accomplished swimmer he can easily be struck by cramp from fatigue or over-exertion.

The ordinary pitfalls against which due precautions become second nature to the experienced swimmer unfortunately are very numerous. I look rather in where angels fear to tread. You will find poor swimmers taking the kind of chances that the expert could never dream of taking. And in particular young swimmers in dangerous places in water which might far exceed what he imagines, e.g. sheaving beaches, where rocks appear rapidly in tides and ebbes and even quarry holes. And that is how each summer the lakes and rivers claim their number of drownings, victims of a quota which is far too high. Far too often we see lives lost because in little foresight was not used. Far too often we see people read about dismally parents mourning a dead child because he was not accurately warned in time. Well now is the time. The danger period will be during the next four months. There is no time for the other to avoid unnecessary risks and observe the few necessary precautions and everything will then be all right.

COMPULSORY IRISH

There was a time when I saw nothing wrong with the prospect of class A Secondary schools everything was done through the medium of Irish and I completed my education with honours certificates. After leaving school I did not stop learning Irish and can still speak fluently but I must admit that I no longer enjoy reading compulsory books.

We are living in an age of changing circumstances and the old ideas of independence must needs be changed if we are to fit into the new world. I claim that the language of the Irish author I read most avidly was Seamus Mac Giollaigh who used the pen-name "Maire."

"Maire" wrote some beautiful Irish stories which always had a happy ending.

I think there are very few who can or will disagree with these points and I hope that the people who will see the results of their work will remain a system which has done nothing or very little to advance the cause of the Irish language.

A CLEAN UP

1. A Bord Fáilte document issued during the month of May has announced that this year's Tid Towns Competition in County Waterford for there are seven entries—Ballymaloe, Ardmore, Kilmacthomas, Dunmore East, Lismore, Passage, and of course Dungarvan.

The Old Bury is apparently going to make a rare go at winning this title for Co. Waterford again. Around the town the Connells have placed litter bins in the principal streets and Derelict Sites Orders have been made in the case of unused sites at Sexton Street, Abbeyside, (disused petrol pumps) and at O'Connell Street.

Chapel Lane corner (owned by McNamee & Co.) in an effort to get them cleaned up.

This is all very well except that as far as the litter bins are concerned they are as yet having little effect on the cleanliness of the streets while cleaning up two derelict sites and leaving the scum at the Look-Out and some of the approach roads to the eminence they are, is most unlikely to win a prize.

I claim the right to say a few words on this important question. I claim that even though he is an accomplished swimmer he can easily be struck by cramp from fatigue or over-exertion.

Now let me return to Seamus Mac Giollaigh for a minute. He appeals to parents, teachers and educators to combine in defending comprehension and the bane it is being wrought by it and then states:

"I will put one aspect of compulsion Irish before them, as well as after the Gaeltacht. I appeal to each . . . to ask himself in sincerity before God, is it right that the children of the Gaeltacht should be compelled to speak four-fifths of their school life at Irish when they must emigrate afterwards to English-speaking countries to earn a living?"

Dungarvan Sweep Through Abbeyside

Dungarvan 6-7; Abbeyside 0-1
Dungarvan minor hurling swept through their first round game with ease at the Fraher field, Dungarvan, on Sunday night last with a facile 6-7 to 0-1 victory.

Played in poor conditions, the game produced the result expected with Dungarvan dominating the play for almost the entire hour.

The Mary's, with some of last year's side in their lineout, were impressive, but their true worth is hard to judge because of the poorness of the opposition.

Abbeyside with the strong wind advantage, scored first, but then Dungarvan gradually gained control and led by two at the break, and at this stage there was no doubt what the final outcome would be.

Dungarvan remained atop through the second half and ended on a further 4-3 to from their tally with a further 4-3 to Abbeyside.

Michael Donnelly, Sean Murphy, Tim Healy, Connie Murphy, Michael Norris, Woods, Phillip Duggan, Christy Whelan and Sean Flynn all played well for the winners while Abbeyside's best were Brian O'Connor, Larry King, Brian Duggan, Greg Buckley, Brendan O'Brien and Paddy Cashin.

Referee—M. White (Ballymaloe).

The Pike And Stradbally Advance

The Pike 1-7; Tourin 1-2; Stradbally 7-8; Old Parish 0-1
Both the Pike and Stradbally advanced in their junior football and hurling championships with victories over Tourin and Old Parish respectively at Dungarvan on Sunday last.

These games were played in miserable weather conditions and served up especially in the hurling an encounter, was pathetic in the extreme with the standard hitting rock bottom.

The Pike's best were Tom Barry, who in the receiving end in the first half of this first round junior football game, was outstanding with the strange wind advantage dictated the pace. A goal and two points from frees per Tom Barry put Tourin in a commanding position and failed to get a grip on the game until near the break when they notched 0-3.

Trailing by two points they turned over with the wind at their backs and a slim point and a point from Landers brought the sides level after sixteen minutes. Although they enjoyed a twelve minute advantage the Pike's players were notching heavy work getting the scores and it was not until the end of the 26th minute that they went ahead. A point from the Pike's John McCarthy had the way to the Tourin net. Johnny McCarthy had two further points to leave them ahead 1-7 to 1-2 at the finish.

The Pike's best were John Murray, Jim Hayes and John Hayes in defence. Joe Power and Landers at midfield and Liam Flanagan and Alan Anthony Hayes in attack.

Tourin's best were Ollie Wilkinson, Tom Hickey, Steve Scanlon, Tom Barry and Jimmy Scanlon. Both teams sent on to the 20th minute of the second half for rough play.

Stradbally 7-8; Old Parish 0-1
The less said about this junior hurling championship the better as far as Old Parish are concerned. It was a pathetic display by a side which on the day's showing would profit from concentration solely on football.

From the start Stradbally took command and by the interval had the game in the bag when they led 3-5 to nil. They had just got their victory point four minutes after the restart while Stradbally, who were not very impressive either, had tacked on score after score almost unbroken.

Both the winners were Terry Guly, Michael Barry, Pat Clancy, Matty Reilly, Tom Ahearne, Tom Cunningham and Denis O'Farrell.

Old Parish's best were Tony Hallen, Michael Terry, Mike Walsh and P. Terry.

Referee—M. McGrath (Dungarvan).

MUNSTER CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP

Last Minute Point Saved Mount Sion

Mount Sion 8-7 Newmarket-on-Fergus 7-3

A point from a free per Frank Kelly, who gave Mount Sion victory over Cahir champion Newmarket-on-Fergus, in the first round Munster Club hurling championship game, played at the Fraher field, Dungarvan, on Sunday evening last. Playing with a gale force breeze behind them in the first half, Mount Sion made all of the running and turned over with a 6-5 to 1-2 at the break.

The Cahir side piled on the pressure in the second half and four minutes from time had levelled, but Frankie Walsh's goal, from a free, a minute from the end saved the day for the Waterford champions.

Score—Mount Sion 8-7; Newmarket-on-Fergus 7-3.
