EXCESS EXPENDITURE AND INFLATION

In the early part of month the most recent Rep of the National Prices Co mission was published and of the chapters in the Rep dealt with "Price Control of Inflation" Among of things this stated that th was still controversy amo economists on what cause inflation and it gave following percentage increa in consumer prices in countries over the per 1968/73 Belgium 297, mark 427, France 372, G many 280, Italy 39 Netherlands 416, UK 40 and Ireland 533 The Report then went to make the following obs vation "These figures do r seem to support the view th the whole of the Irish and tion is imported While small country connot ave importing inflation from rest of the world, the abo figures suggest that Iri domestic policies (or ever occurring within the country were generating price creases at a faster rate the those being applied occurring) in neighbourn countries.

The Report expands on th by stating that there we some who argued that t main domestic contribution inflation had come from excess demand for goods or services, generated by fisc and/or monetary influence while others argued the prices had been pushed by the upward pressure wages and salaries exerted b trade unions. The Report the states. "The ovailable ev dence seems to fovour th first explanation—that price ove∍risen taster in Irela than neighbouring coun tries as a result of a combina tion of excess demand and expectations of further price increases Excess demand has been created (or has emerged) on a number of occasions by a rapid growth of government expenditure and of govern ment borrowing from externa sources or from the banking

Indeed there would appea to be absolutely no brake of government expenditure Thi was typified by the Ministe for the Gaeltacht, Mr Ton O'Donnell, when he was inter viewed on the "Feach" pro gramme from Telefis Eireani last Monday night and sail that there was no problem a all in providing money finance the new Bord Goeilge!
