THE SILLY SEASON This is truly the silly season for newsmen when nothing much is happening and one write about nothing in more ways than one!

While the country is supposed to be struggling through the throes of the greatest economic crisis it has ever known the people don't seem to be aware of it Last week the punters at Galway Races stablished a new record by the huge amount of money they lashed out while last week-end there was no great vidence of any depression or hartage of cash anywhere is there a crisis or is it the old question of what crisis? Then the Dail has gone into its traditional long summer ecess and doesn't seem to be too concerned (or not at all) with the way the country is being run (or not being run)

The silliest situation of the eason however was pinpointed by a visitor from Britain ast week-end when she was ermed that it was the August Bank Holiday in this country Naively she asked. now can you have such a hing as a bank holiday at his time when your bank eople are all on strike and he banks are all closed I had admit that it was uestion which I could not nswer beyond remarking that twas just all part of the silly
