Dear Sir—I would be most grateful if you would allow me space in your widely read newspaper to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to the delegates who voted for me at last week's Fianna Fall Ard-Fheis.

I can promise only to do my best in representing the views and opinions of that most important element in any democratic organisation—the party workers.
Thanking you, Mr Editor, for your interest

DESIGN AN IRISH TYPEFACE COMPETITION
Sponsored by Letraset, the pioneers of the dry transfer system and world-wide distributors of graphic art products, Kilkenny Design Workshops, a state sponsored body set up to establish and identify good design in industry, and D O'Sullivan (Ireland) Limited, Letraset agents distributors and leading suppliers to the graphic industry in Eire.
The need and objective is to find and promote the design of a type-face with an Irish character, and to reproduce the design or designs on Letraset (instant Lettering) sheets for distribution initially in Ireland and then possibly world wide.
The winning design would be anticipated, we suitable for headinging and identifying Irish products and services throughout the world.
What constitutes the 'Irishness' of a typeface as a matter for the designer's attention as a historical precedent and as not defined in the conditions of the competition.
The winning design will receive a specially commissioned silver medal and £250 in prize money. All Letraset sheets produced in the new typeface will bear the designer's name and a royalty will be paid by Letraset on all sheets sold.
There will be an additional award of £100 for the best student entry. Product vouchers for £50 and £25 will be awarded to other designers of special merit.
To judge the competition the sponsors have invited an international panel of designers.
Entry forms are available from D O'Sullivan (Ireland) Limited, 66 Lower Camden Street, Dublin 2, or the Letraset stockist in your area.
Closing date for entries is 5 p.m. on April 28, 1978.

DUNGARVAN STREET TRADERS PROSECUTED... A number of street traders from various parts of the county who set up trading stalls and traded from vans parked at Grattan Square, Dungarvan, on Wednesday, 22nd Feb had been prosecuted against them for parking for longer than the one hour permitted at the Square on the occasion called the Dungarvan Court on Wednesday... Garda T. O'Mahony who summoned the defendants told the Court that he found the van of Helen Graves with an address in Dublin parked on the Square for 2 hours on the day in question... The defendant was trading from the van... Parking at the Square under the Town Parking By-Laws was restricted to one hour... Garda O'Mahoney said that he had received a letter from Messrs Whelan & Co, Soirs, Dublin who stated that they were acting as defendants and asked that the matter be adjourned to a later court... When the names of the other defendants were called all summoned for similar offences... District Justice W. P. O'Connell said he presumed that the same firm of solicitors was acting for all... He suggested that the cases could be adjourned to the Court to be held on April 26... Supt M. English asked that the hearings be peremptorily fixed for that date as he said that people were anxious to do with an early decision... Where this issue was concerned the street traders were persona non grata with the local traders in the town because of their activities at the Square... The District Justice said that he was well aware that this problem affected many other towns and he agreed to deal with the case listed on April 26... He asked that the defendants concerned be acquainted of this fact

The thawing snow was reinforced by torrential rain which fell on Tuesday and Wednesday and roads were reported to be flooded in many places
