GRAVE

A few weeks ago the choice for our ballad corner was "An Irish Hero's Grave" and at the time we professed our ignorance of the composer of this historic ballad which tells this historic ballad which tells the story of one, Declan Tobin who fought with Thomas Francis Meagher in the American Civil War and was mortally wounded at the battle of Fredricksburg in 1862 and who, in accordance with his dying wishes, was later buried in his native Kilrossanty

A 'phone call to the "Leader" Office last week provided the missing information that the ballad was composed by the late Michael Walsh, Ballingown, Kilrossanty, who, in his lifetime was a prolific writer of great ballads BY THE BRIGHT SILVERY LIGHT OF THE MOON

There appears to be many versions of this old traditional ballad and the one we use here this week is one which goes back to 1916

As I went from my cot at the close of the day About the beginning of June
By a jassamine shade I espied a fair maid As she sadly complained to the moon Roll on silvery moon like traveller on his way.
