Planning Act Fine Reduced On appeal

A fine of £150 and costs in posed at Cappoquin District Court on Cappoquin Estate Company when they were convicted on a charge of parking a caravan at a property in Bar fack Street, Sharboally, Cappoquin, in breach of the Planning Act was the subject of an appeal at Dungarvan Circuit Court on Tuesday on Tuesday

Sir Richard Keane conducted the appeal personally on behalf of the Estate Company and Mr

M. M. Halley Solicitor appear ed for the County Council Mr Hally stated that when came to the notice of the County Council Planning Author county Council Figure 3 author ity that a caravan was parked at Barrack Street in breach of the Pianning Act, a warning notice was duly served and when it was not removed the County Council proceeded to prosecute the Estate Company for the unauthorised parking of the cara van on the property in question When the matter came before to the District Court in Cappoquin the Estate Company entered no and the Estate Company entered no appearance at the hearing and the District Justice imposed a fine of £150 and costs The maximum fine which could be imposed was £250.

Kieran Treacy Planning Department of the County Council in evidence said that following a query received from a Mrs Brennan about the parking of the caravan on the plot adjoin ing her house in October 1977 he went to Cappoquin and found a caravan on the site from which n caravan on the site from which so sweets were to be sold to child ren in the school across the road. He said that he informed Sir Richard Keane that it was contrary to regulations to park the caravan as a retail outlet where it was The caravan was still on the site in February 1978 and continued to remain three up to the date of the District Course case It had since been removed CONFLICT OF ADVICE

Sir Richard Keane on behalf of the Estate Company said that the facts as stated were correct and the caravan was now gone in from the site. He said that he in had been originally told that where a caravan was parked on the owner's land and was not used for sleeping at night there used for sleeping at night there was no need for planning permission. On the basis of that information he proceeded to .c-commodate an individual in the He went on to say that the conflict of advice arose from the distinction between a caravan and a mobile home and he was not aware of that distinction at the time He had written a letter and thought that as a result the hearing of the case in the Dis-trict Court was to be adjourned. He then admitted that they had made a mistake in good faith and he submitted that in such confusing circumstances the fine imposed was severe Judge Sheridan said that this

Judge Sheridan said that this C case heightened the necessity this for securing permission about caravans and mobile homes from the Planning Authority and people would have no illusticated in the security of the people would have no illusticated in the security of the people would have no illusticated in the security of the people would have no illusticated in the security of the people would have no illusticated in the people would have no illusticated in the people would have not been security of the people would be people would have not been security of the people would be people woul ions about such matters in ates future He thought however said as Sir Richard had now apsp- peared in person to explain the emposition, it would be proper to odify the fine to £75 allowed costs of £25 to the County Council in the appeal.

The club also in no mean way provides many social activities and this year has organised Brain of Waterford Quiz which is planned to be run off in mid-March The club this year also pressed hard for the National

Sheep Shearing finals which would have provided a brilliant attraction at the Castle grounds on the last Sunday in May However the finals went north to Donegal but the club has not not lost hope and will give the matter a definite try next year The club has not neglected the competition aspect either and this year has taken part in most competitions proving ex-cellent in the novice debating with its team of C Moloney and B and E Healan who got the upperhand on Ballyduff but were beaten on a time fault in the county final The club also is fortunate this year in that one of its members Billy Devine has been chosen along with five others from all over Ireland to represent this country at the World Congress of Young Farmers to be hled in Paris from March 3 to 9 In addition to the honour of being on the team Billy has also been chosen as leader of the delegation This in no small way has also helped the club and with such achievements one is sure to see its survival for a long and healthy future
