O'Gorman, P.C., was mored to the chair.

The Chairman said he was very pleased to see such a representative audience pre-sent. He recollected about a year ago a similar meeting was called and only four or five attended. That meeting augured well for the success of the Tourist Association in Youghal. They had amongst them Mr. D. Barry, Munster Organiser of the I.T.A., and he would address them, putting forth ways and means of developing the Irish Tourist Industry. Already the Urban Council were taking steps to encourage tourists to visit Youghal. Up-to-date tennis courts were being established, bathing facilities are to be improved, and a new water supply service is being in-stalled at a cost of £15,000. He was glad to see men like Mr. Atking and Mr. Hurst present. Both had done a lot to encourage visitors to Youghal, and their efforts had to a great extent been successful. Mr. D. Barry said he felt highly honoured to be saked to address such a very representative and enthusiastic gathering. The Irish Tourist Industry next to the Agricultural Industry was Ireland's greatest asset, but it required development. Competition was keen, and not alone did rivalry exist between the Continental countries such as Switzerland, etc., and Ireland, but also among the Irish seaside resorts themselves. Nature had lavishly endowed Youghal with many gifts. The Youghal Strand was second to none. He had seen very few strands to qual it. But nature must be helped. People interested in tourist traffic must come together and co-operate with the Urban Council. As well as catering for American and Continental tourists, they must also interest themselves in visitors Rathdrum and Wicklow were required charged by hotels and boarding houses as nearer home. English and Scotch visitors as well as visitors from other parts of Ireland must be encouraged to come here. Reinforcements from Tinabely, Arklow, would be a most effective medium.
