Above were the results of the challenge matches brought off at Ballylaneen in a splendid venue given gratis for the occasion by Mr. Patk. Dunphy, Ballylaneen House, who is a most nehtusiast Gael, on Sunday week. The weather was dry and both contests. In the football clash the homesters were first to settle down, and from early on it was quite obvious that they were the superior bunch. The Kilrossanty set played rather loose; they were slow to tacgle and lacked combination. The caman struggle was a dingdong affair, and some very neat" and stylish exhibitions of the code were given by individual players on both lots. The Durrow forward line was composed of marksmen who appeared to be a no small bit on the erratic side. Mr. Frank Drohan, P.C., had charge of both bouts and discharged his duties to the complete satisfaction of all concerned.

Complaint is now voiced on all sides that the demand for domestic farm servants is in excess of the supply available. Unfair and unreasonable advantage is evidently taken of this by some when arranging their terms of engagement with armers, and unusual and unpleasing conditions are imposed as a settlement of the service. None but a slavish, narrow, selfish being could expect to impose on servants the poorly-paid, heartbreaking conditions that existed of old, and in face of the great change for the better, no good or sound purpose will be served by expecting a reasonable condition in a service agreement. Dear knows! the farmers have enough to contend with those days without trying to please the whims and fancies of some here-to-day-and-awayto-morrow pleasure hunters, and the few that play on his needs and requirement with careless and unsatisfactory service are creating a state of affairs that will not be at all favourable to servants in general. Week after week some servants hire and perhaps have the experience of five or six employers before they settle down to work. For purely trivial excuses in ninety-nine cases out of the proverbial hundred they pack up their belongings, and, like the Arabs, silently steal away.

ELECTION TIMES.

With a General Electin now at hand, and to the unthinking voter a bewilderig array of candidates manoeuvring for positions, the subject of what party is best worthy of support, is uppermost in the mind. Nobody is so shallow-minded or dead to the interests of the country as to say it is of no concern. The vote is to decide who is to make or break the interests of the Motherland for the next

We regret having to place on record the death of Mrs. Margaret Harris, Shanakill, Kilmaethomas, which sad event occurred at her residence on Saturday of last week.
