W. & G. Hadden, Ltd., Dungarvan.

DUNGARVAN DISTRICT COURT.

LAND ANNUITIES MORATORIUM WAGES CLAIM. A RING CENSOR.

Before Mr. Troy, D.J. Annuitants. The Clerk of the Court having called the case of the Irish Land Commission v. Walsh, which was a summons for non-payment of annuities.

Mr. Ryan solr., said:—There are a number of those cases on the list before your Worship, and I will ask you to strike them all out, as they came under the moratorium.

All the cases were then struck out. A number of undefended civil bills were called and decrees were granted.

Wages Claim. Martin Curran, labourer, sued Mr. Thomas Morrissey, Kildangan, Dungarvan, for £12 7s. money due for wages, etc.

Mr. T. C. Williams, solr., for plaintiff, and Mr. A. R. Farrell, solr., for defendant.

Mr. Williams said the amount was made up of £3 6s. for wages for 6 weeks at 11/- a week; £4 for money lent to defendant and £5 1s. 0d., money paid for goods for defendant.

Martin Curran, the plaintiff, said in answer to Mr. Williams, that he was a farm labourer and worked for the defendant from August 1930 to last May. He never got paid as the defendant could not get money enough for himself.

He owes me £3 6s. for 6 weeks wages at 11/- a week. Witness had to buy most of his board. Defendant made a settlement with him last March he gave him 3 cattle in settlement of the £22 due and witness loaned him £4. He asked witness for it for clothes, but he drank it. Witness also bought tea, sugar and tobacco, meat and 4 barrels of seed oats for defendant. Witness was working at present at Ocean View, Hotel.

Cross-examined by Mr. Farrell—I left Morrissey's employment through getting nothing to eat and having to buy it myself. On March 30th, Mr. Williams wrote on his behalf for £22 money due to him, and it was a day or two after that he got the three cattle in payment. He did not leave the defendant's employment for 6 weeks later. All the money claimed in March was not for wages, but some was for money lent. He denied the 3 cattle he took over were worth £24 and that he gave Morrissey back £2. He allowed him £22 10s. for the cattle, but they were not worth it.

How did you live during the 12 months you got no wages? Defendant—To Mr. Farrell—Now you'll answer me a question.

Mr. Troy—If you don't keep your tongue quiet, and answer the question put to you, I will put you someplace where you will keep quiet.

To Mr. Troy—I gave £4 to the defendant when I sold the cattle. I sold 2 of them at the April Fair. He paid me no wages after I settled up with him.

By Mr. Farrell—I got the goods I bought at several shops in the town. I paid for them in cash, and got no docket.

Mr. Troy—Why didn't you get a docket for the goods you bought? What good is it to show a docket to a man who has not a penny?

I had sheep grazing on Morrissey's land, but I gave him a horse. Morrissey agreed to give me the grazing of the cattle that I did not sell, but I sold them the following week.

To Mr. Troy—I borrowed money from Mr. Christopher and Mr. Barron.

Mr. Farrell said the defence was that the plaintiff took 3 yearlings value £24 10s. and gave defendant £2 back. Curran left soon afterwards and was not employed since. Defendant denied plaintiff lent him money.

Mr. Thomas Morrissey, said he had 105 acres. He denied the money claimed was due by him. He got a letter from Mr. Williams, claiming £22. Plaintiff took 3 cattle from him at £2, and was to give him back £2, but he only gave £1 10s. The agreement was made less than a week afterwards and he left his employment before the fair of April. He never came back again. The transaction of the cattle cleared the amount between them. Witness did not borrow any money from Curran nor did he buy any goods for him. Witness gave Curran £4 to buy oats, but he had not paid for it. He also gave Curran a bullock in lieu of wages and also grazing for sheep.

Cross-examined by Mr. Williams—I did not pay him his wages regularly, as often a person would not have money handy. The reason I paid him £22 in March was I did not dispute it. Were not you constantly in debt with Curran and half the merchants in the town for sometime? I owe no one anything personally. There may be an old debt. He did not come back to me after the settlement was made. It was in Foley's bar, Dungarvan he paid me the 30/-.

Is your memory good at present? It could not be better.

You seem uncertain about dates?—Well you see I'm not a bookkeeper. Curran never bought any stuff in town for me. If I did not give the money for the goods I told him where to go.

Patrick Drummy said he met Curran on the April Fair at Dungarvan. He was selling a cow for Morrissey. Curran also had 3 cattle which he said he bought from Morrissey for £24. He never knew Curran before to have cattle. He had sheep. Curran told him that Morrissey owed him (Curran) about £20.

To Mr. Troy—£15 Curran got for the two cattle he sold at the April fair. Curran recalled by Mr. Troy said he sold a cow that day for Morrissey for £9, which he gave Morrissey. Mr. Troy—Why then did he want £4 from you?—It was that day at Foley's you said you gave Morrissey £4. He asked me for £4 also. Witness was in town the following day with Morrissey and had a drink. The case was dismissed.

Ring Man as Local Censor. Charles Hubbert, Ring, had a case for assault against Michael Power, Old Parish.

Mr. E. A. Ryan, solr., for defendant. Plaintiff gave evidence of seeing the defendant with a girl on the roadside as he passed, and the defendant asked witness what he was staring at, and said "I'll blow your head off." Witness cycled away and the defendant was shouting after him. He went to Ring barracks, and reported the matter. Defendant he said was an intruder.

Mr. Ryan produced a letter and asked witness if it was in his handwriting. He admitted writing it.

Mr. Ryan said it was addressed to the P.P. Ring.

The letter being handed to the Justice to read, asked how was he interested?

Witness—The girl came to my father's house and told me.

Mr. Ryan—When you passed Mr. Power, he had two ladies with him?—Yes.

Justice (to witness)—What business is this of yours?—Have you any other occupation.

Mr. Ryan—He is apparently acting as censor of the Parish. On this evening he turned round and stared at Mr. Power.

The Justice reading through the papers handed to him said he would like to know what the P.P. thought of the plaintiff's efforts. He asked plaintiff where he got copies of birth and death certificates.

Plaintiff said from the Registry office.

Mr. Ryan—It speaks well for Mr. Power that he never laid a hand on this man for anywhere a man of this type lived he would be tarred and feathered and ducked in a pond.

Mr. Troy (referring to the plaintiff's notes)—This is a diary of everything that happens in Ring.

Plaintiff—I sometimes keep notes.

Mr. Troy (addressing the plaintiff)—I will give you a bit of advice and you will do well to take it. Go back to Ring and mind your own business and don't deal with questions that have nothing to do with you. Should anyone assault you I will deal severely with them. I must agree with Mr. Ryan, you were very lucky to escape a thrashing which you deserved. I am not saying this in a way that anyone can come and assault you for in such a case I would deal severely with them. Do your own work and leave other people's business alone.

Plaintiff made a remark and Mr. Troy said he should be ashamed of himself, and if he had any more of it he would put him in the dock.

He dismissed the case with 20/- costs.

THE "CRABTREE FIELD."

At an angle of about five and forty degrees from the cap of Croughau and the summit of Kit Ruadh's Hill, is positioned the Crabtree Field—where the grand old game of hurling was played in the ancient and historic parish of Clonea-Power for the first time. The Crabtree Field is the property of Mr. James Kirwan, Kilkaneave, who was himself, as "good a bit of stuff" as ever handled an ashen blade in or out of the Decies. Through the long summer evenings of more than two decades of annals ago, the Crabtree Field used to present an animated appearance—when the stout hearted, strong-limbed and speedy garsons of Ballydurn, Glenstown, Clonea, Killerguile, Killooney, and Kilkaneave, were welding their camans together in stern training for their county and inter-county engagements. And poor Pat Stuart (he has since joined the majority, God rest him) was there with the rest. Pat was working at Kilkaneave then. In the hands of one of the young Kirwan's he eyed a real hurley for the first time, and he called the blade "a gander's neck"—the name still sticks to the "crooked sticks" in Clonea-Power. Between the Crabtree Field (so dubbed because of a single crabtree growing in the centre of it) and Clonea Castle, two double-mounded loisses can be easily located, one at each side of the road there. 'Tis said in the neighbourhood that these circular sites were, and are, and ever will be haunted by the good wee-side-people. The whins to the right and left of Kit Ruadh's Hill, great patches of them, look drab in dull weather; but in a burst of June sunshine, they stand out in golden glory, a tonic to the scene.

Distinguished Cappoquin Priest Home from Australia.

Among the large numbers of Irish Priests, who have returned to their native land from the most remote parts of the earth to take part in the great Eucharistic Congress celebrations in Dublin last week, is the Rev. Dr. P. Dunne, Adm., of St. Nicholas', Tamworth, in the diocese of Armidale, Australia, who arrived home some weeks ago as special representative of the Armidale diocese at the Congress.

Dr. Dunne is a native of the parish of Cappoquin, being son of the late Mr. John Dunne, Melleray, whose death took place only a few months ago, which deprived his distinguished son of the pleasure of meeting him alive after his long absence in the land of the Southern Cross.

Dr. Dunne received his early education in the world-famed Seminary at Mount Melleray, afterwards going to the Irish College, Rome, where he finished a brilliant Collegiate course by being ordained for the Australian Mission about 14 years ago. After a brief holiday at home, he proceeded to his distant Mission in Australia and this is his first visit to his native land after all those years.

Having proved himself a most saintly and zealous priest in various parts of the diocese of Armidale, he was appointed Adm., of the important parish of St. Nicholas', some years ago, and there, as well as in those places where he had previously laboured in the Vineyard of the Lord, he has won the love and respect of all classes of his parishioners owing to his untiring energy, his great zeal in the performance of his important sacred duties and, above all, by his kindly and generous Irish heart.

His numerous friends in the Melleray and Cappoquin districts are now delighted to see him back amongst them once more, and they all join in wishing him a most enjoyable and interesting holiday during his sojourn in the land of his birth.

As showing the great esteem in which he is held in the diocese of Armidale, we quote the following from a recent issue of the "Sydney Catholic Press":—

"For several weeks past functions were arranged to tender farewells to Rev. Dr. P. Dunne (Adm., of St. Nicholas', Tamworth), who is going to Ireland on holidays, and also to attend the Congress as representative from the Armidale diocese.

Each event was marked by the unbounded loyalty to the Pastor, whose kindly disposition won the goodwill of every parishioner in his large parish. On Monday, 21st. ult., the parishioners and well-wishers of the Dungowan portion of the parish met at the local Hall, to bid him farewell and a safe return to Tamworth, benefitted in health and vigour.

The first part of the evening was given to the children of the local Convent, who tendered a farewell Concert consisting of 15 items.

The entertainment was of a very high standard, particularly when it is remembered that this institution has only been in existence for 20 months.

Every item, management and arrangement, were given solely by the pupils of the Sisters of St. Joseph. The children playing the accompaniments were the conductors, and the decorations in the Hall and Supper-Room were blended and artistically arrayed to suit the occasion.

After giving the various items of the Concert, the report proceeds:—"At the conclusion of the Concert two small pupils presented Dr. Dunne with a beautifully completed and framed address and another suitable gift.

The Programmes, of different artistic designs, were produced by the pupils, under the direction, of the Sisters.

At the presentation, the Rev. Father T. Hill, presided.

He remarked on the many sterling qualities of Dr. Dunne, who had ministered to their spiritual needs for just over 4 years, and during that time, according to the response that night, he had discharged his duties in a manner that had won the respect and confidence of his people.

He wished Dr. Dunne, on behalf of the Dungowan parishioners, the best of good luck on his voyage and a safe return to Tamworth.

Rev. Father Maron, and Messrs. H. and J. Maher, J. McRae, and P. McCormick, spoke in eulogistic terms of the good and faithful work performed by Dr. Dunne during his term amongst them. He was responsible for the erection of the Convent, the excellent fruit of which was displayed at the Concert that night.

Mr. P. Hayes, on behalf of the parishioners of the Dungowan portion of the parish, then presented Dr. Dunne with a cheque. On behalf of the people he thanked Dr. Dunne for the many kindnesses which he had rendered Dungowan and for the noticeable advancement of the Parochial affairs since his appointment to Tamworth.

Dr. Dunne's Reply. Dr. Dunne, who was loudly applauded, said that whatever he did was his duty, first as a priest of God, and secondly for the spiritual needs and comfort of his people. If he did that, his mission was complete, and his reward for it would be his eternal salvation, which was that for which all of us were striving. Without the co-operation of his people he could not carry out the work in the parish, but his people rallied to his call, and much of the credit for the convent and other similar undertakings was due to the parishioners. Commenting on the children's concert, he was pleased that his confidence in the good Sisters had won the praise tendered them that night through the medium of their pupils. The concert reflected very great credit, and was an example of the highest efficiency. He did not expect any monetary consideration for doing his duty, more particularly during these times of stress. He intimated these things to the people there? They forestalled him, and made him believe that the children wanted to give him a concert; he agreed to this, as he would not disappoint any child. He thanked them sincerely for the presentation, and wished them all prosperity and a speedy return to normal conditions in Australia.

Mr. W. P. Hunt moved a vote of thanks to the chairman.

After the chairman responded, an adjournment was made to the tastefully decorated supper-room, where a sumptuous supper was partaken of, after which dancing was indulged in until near daylight.

St. Nicholas', Tamworth. After late Mass on Easter Sunday, the parishioners of St. Nicholas' assembled in the school-hall for the purpose of wishing Dr. Dunne farewell, and a safe return to Tamworth. It was at Dr. Dunne's expressed wish that the function was held at this time, as he did not desire any public entertainment. The chair was occupied by Mr. H. M. Regan. Mr. R. J. O'Halloran (secretary to the presentation committee), addressing the large gathering, eulogised the work of Dr. Dunne during his term as Administrator of the parish. He was responsible for the building of the Brothers' College, Weahonga Church, and Dungowan Convent, as well as many interior artistic decorations in St. Nicholas', and now they are about to lay the foundation stone of a church at Kootingal. In all, over £10,000 had been spent in the parish since Dr. Dunne's arrival, just over four years ago.

Dr. E. B. Fitzpatrick, Mr. Moroney (ex-Superintendent of Police), and Councillor Phelan (on behalf of Atunga parishioners) enlarged upon the untiring efforts of the guest for the comfort of the parishioners, more especially in the outlying portions of the parish.

Mr. Butler (church treasurer) then presented Dr. Dunne with a wallet of notes on behalf of the subscribers to the presentation, and wished him a pleasant holiday and safe return.

Tributes to a Loyal Parish. Dr. Dunne, on rising to respond, was greeted with prolonged applause. He said that the people throughout the parish had shown great kindness to him, and during the past week that had been amplified. He thanked them for the presentation. He had previously stated his disapproval of any monetary consideration, but the people overruled him. He said it was a pleasure to work amongst the people of the different parts of his large parish, and without their co-operation his efforts would be in vain. His trip home would not be as pleasant as otherwise would have been the case had his dear father not recently passed to his eternal reward. It was one of his greatest earthly ambitions to see his father, but God, in His wisdom, willed otherwise. He hoped he would be spared to return to them, and with their co-operation continue the good work of the parish.

Miss Hennessy, on behalf of the Children of Mary, presented Dr. Dunne with a very useful set of gold links and studs. During the week the pupils of the Brothers' College, presented Dr. Dunne with two travelling cases. Eulogistic references were made at this function to Dr. Dunne's untiring efforts towards the advancement of Catholic education in the parish.

A private banquet was tendered Dr. Dunne by the Christian Brothers, at which, in addition to the Brothers, Rev. Fathers Keene (Gunnedah), Carroll (West Tamworth), Healy and Maron (Tamworth) were present. Rev. Brother Mogg (Principal) wished Dr. Dunne every good luck and a safe return.

ITALIAN PRIEST'S TRAGIC END.

"LIFE FOR CONGRESS."

Don Lindo de Tomatis, Professor in the Seminary of Vitorbo, who was accompanying the Italian pilgrims to the Congress, was fatally injured by a motor car when he was leaving St. Audoen's Church, Dublin.

"Gladly I give my life for the Congress, and my beloved Seminary," were his last words as he died in the arms of his friends after he had received the Blessed Sacrament.

The Archbishop of Petra was deeply moved when he quoted those last words of their deceased countryman, at a meeting of the Italian group of pilgrims, and asked the assembly to join him in a prayer for his soul.

The late Dr. Tomatis had been staying with 40 pilgrims in the s.s. Sauronia. After leaving St. Audoen's Church he went on the roadway somewhat suddenly and was struck by a motor car. He was immediately attended by Rev. T. Fallon, C.C., and quickly conveyed to Stevens' Hospital where he expired after receiving the Last Sacraments.

The Secretary of the Eucharistic Congress has received a letter from Most Rev. Angelo Bartolomasi, telling him that Dr. Tomatis had died a most edifying death. The prayers of the vast congregation in the Phoenix Park last night were asked for the repose of his soul. Another Italian Priest died suddenly on the streets. Both priests were buried in Glasnevin.

Dungarvan Urban Council

DUNGARVAN U.D.C. At the weekly meeting of the above on Friday night, Mr. M. J. Keane, Vice-Chairman, presided. Other members present were—Messrs. J. F. Moloney, Jas. Hackett, M. Clancy, T. McCarthy, B. Dee, and M. Griffin.

Weekly Payments. General A/c. £17 13s. 8d.; Housing A/c. £1 19s. 2d., and Harbour A/c. £2. The Relief Grant Deputation.

In reply to Mr. Clancy, the Chairman said that the Minister was too busy to give a hearing to the deputation during the week.

Cleaning Of Streets. Mr. Clancy calling attention to the condition of the streets after the last fair, said it was a disgrace to see the streets covered with refuse and dirt, and asked that an order be made to have them cleaned.

Mr. Hackett—I believe the men are working on the strand at the bathing boxes. They are clearing the strand.

Clerk—I was speaking to a clergyman from the States, and he said the town was never looking so splendid.

Chairman—Some one said it was due to the scarcity of water. Is that correct, Mr. Walsh?

Mr. Walsh (S.S.O.)—No, Sir. An order that the streets be cleaned was made.

Scavenging At Abbeyside. Mr. Griffin drawing attention to the cleaning of Abbeyside, wished to know whether there was a different law in Abbeyside as distinct from Dungarvan, governing the street-cleaning. He pointed out that the County Council workers usually did this work.

Chairman—As far as I know there is not. It is very difficult for the scavenger to get round in one day.

S.S.O.—Egan (the scavenger), has been sick for some weeks, and his substitute also got sick. The present man doesn't know the run very well.

Nuisances in Abbeyside, and Dungarvan. Mr. Griffin referring to the strand from the railway gates down the south strand, said it was a disgrace, the amount of refuse that was littered about on the strand. There was a sickening stench there. He requested that an order be made to clean it.

Chairman—People should be prevented from dumping refuse over the wall.

Mr. McCarthy drew attention to the laneway in Chapel lane, which was becoming an awful nuisance.

The S.S.O., was requested to see after them.

Title To Meat Market. The Chairman (Mr. Keane), said that in company with Mr. Moloney and Mr. Butler, he had interviewed Mr. Williams, solr., in regard to the title of the Meat Shambles, where the Vocational Education Committee, after offering the Council a sum of £200 for the premises had proposed to erect a technical school.

At a previous meeting a letter from the Department was read in which the Minister refused to sanction the sale. The Council sought the advice of Counsel, who advised that the Urban Council had a good title to the premises. The Minister, however, in reply to the Council's solicitor, said that after the opinion of legal advisers in the Saorstát he could not see his way to sanction the sale.

Mr. Keane went on to explain the result of the interview, and said that Mr. Williams, solicitor, suggested to take the matter into the High Court of Justice, where the title could be defined.

Mr. McCarthy—What would it cost? Chairman—Mr. Williams said between £30 and £40. He is not certain also of getting a judgment in our favour.

Mr. Clancy—The only thing is to give up the idea.

Mr. Griffin—Haven't we power to lease it?

Chairman—I don't think they would accept a lease.

Mr. Griffin—Couldn't it be acquired from the Duke of Devonshire direct?

Chairman—He may not be able to give a title.

Mr. Moloney—You may rest assured that Mr. Williams tried every avenue.

Mr. Clancy—It would be the best thing to give up the idea. The Vocational Education Committee are anxious to get the school built immediately. If they accepted Mr. Griffin's suggestion, it would take a very long time. The Clerk should be instructed to acquaint Mr. Lanigan of the matter.

Water Complaint. A complaint dealing with the water shortage to their premises, was received from Dee Bros.

Chairman—In connection with that, Mr. Dee called my attention to it. I found that there wasn't a drop of water coming through at all. There was no water in the public fountain also. I think it is a bad state of affairs and Mr. Dee has a grievance.

Mr. McCarthy—There is no water there at all. It is not fair paying for water and getting none.

S.S.O.—The end lengths of the main must be probably corroded. I can get it open on Tuesday.

The Council agreed to this. Registered Unemployment Numbers. The registered number of unemployed as submitted by the unemployment Exchange was:—(1) Urban Area 146. (2)—Rural Area—285. (3)—County exclusive of city—441.

Mr. Hackett—These numbers don't completely represent the unemployed.

Chairman—It's their own fault if they haven't registered. It would be a very good means to ask the Clergy to announce it from the pulpit.

Mr. Clancy—We can't do any more

Modern World.

CHARITY AND UNITY.

Rev. Ronald Knox, in a paper on "Frequent Communion After School Age," said it looked as if Catholic educators had been successful up to a point in fostering devotion to frequent Communion. It does seem that routine had too much to do with the habit of frequent Communion at school and that somehow the element of routine ought to be neutralised and more room left for spontaneous formation of good habits.

Although the doctrine of frequent Communion was now an established fact the practice is not yet; it was not a victory won, but a battle still being fought which called for effort if it was to succeed on the lines which Pope Pius X. meant that it should.

Was it not important that at least in desire the ordinary adolescent Catholic should be a frequent Communicant, and could they believe he was so when they find that those in a position to receive Communion often were slow to realise their opportunity.

He believed that more frequent Communion was a great need of their Universities. He wondered if the need was a general one, and if it is they should get ready to strike a blow to hasten on the Eucharistic Kingdom of Our Lord Jesus Christ.

The Chairman said that Father Knox had given those engaged in academic pursuits matter for thought. The problem was there and well worthy of consideration.

RECKLESS YOUTHS AND GIRLS. CRAVING FOR WEALTH. Rev. C. Martindale, S.J., in the course of a paper on "Mass in the Modern World," said that the interior mind of men and women was everywhere without exception being altered; characters, even national ones, were being changed.

In all lands was a minority but an increasing one, of irresponsible young girls, reckless and even unprincipled, violent even and murderous-minded, on whom the atheist propagandists were the easy-going or frivolous, the ignorant and he should say the unhappy.

The modern State, as agnostic, very soon made the logical step of saying that since it did not know whether there was a God or not, no citizen should behave as if there was, at least corporately or publicly. Above all, there should be no officially religious education, no corporate association on religious grounds, no exterior manifestations of religion like processions or congresses.

But returning to the only alternative active and thought-out system, to Catholicism the new sort of Russian State, Fr. Martindale said that the Pope in various encyclicals had assigned certain reasons why such a State should have come into existence.

The first was money lust, which always ended by concentrating money in the hands of a very few, with the inevitable result that millions of men sank into misery so extreme that they thought that even if they engineered sheer chaos they could not be worse off.

The Pope pointed out how such men were often the first victims of their iniquity, through ruining thousands of others and dragging them down in their own crash.

At the lowest—for self-preservation sake—European nations would be mad to maintain their ancient hatreds, suspicions, jealousies and intrigues. These could but mean our rapid disintegration, isolation and ruin, if not at the hands of Russia, at least at those of an ever more de-religionised East. Personally he would not mind being ruled by a black or yellow man provided the rule was good.

The world was still in love with illusions, wallowing in unrealism. If their Communions were not to be a travesty, they must expel from their hearts all venom, all that in any way militated against charity, unity and peace. Polite exterior in offensiveness was no substitute for that.

If this Congress helped towards Charity, Unity, and Peace, even though aimed at the expense of great personal sacrifices, how great would have been its success. If it did not, how tragic the failure.

For any failure was tragic, but a Catholic failure dreadfully so, for there was not left beyond the Catholic Faith to hope from. If Geneva, Lausanne, Ottawa should fail they sighed, but should Dublin fail, Should Rome!

The Chairman (Archbishop of Liverpool) said he could not help wishing that Father Martindale's address could have been widely broadcasted in England some time ago, when the Press of the country was very largely misrepresenting the significance of the Pope's Encyclicals.

It was not deliberate misrepresentation, but was simply a misrepresentation of people who did not understand what they were reading. Some of the Press thought that the Pope was advocating humanitarianism, and they said that there was nothing very new about that. Father Martindale has made it clear that the basis of the Pope's appeal is the Supernatural, the Spirit of Sacrifice, something that the editors writing leaders had not grasped the simplest elements of, and the whole of the Pope's appeal was missed. It was a sad commentary on the state of Christianity in general when that kind of thing can be written in serious papers and designated as comment on the Holy Father's letters.

YOUGHAL DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Mr. G. P. Farrell, B.L.)

A British Stamp.
In a case of a Civil Bill by default,
Mr. Hodnett, solr., for plaintiffs; the documents were handed up to the Bench.

The Justice—How about the stamp
on this agreement—it is a British stamp?

Mr. Hodnett submitted it was the proper stamp in the circumstances;
the agreement having been made in England. In a similar document some time ago, being doubtful about it, he put the facts before the stamping
authorities in Dublin, and they replied it didn't matter where it was stamped.

The Justice—Was that recently?
Mr. Hodnett—2 or 3 years ago.
The case was adjourned for a fortnight to enable Mr. Hodnett to look into the point.

Mogeely Co-operative Cases.
There were a number of cases at
the suit of the Mogeely Co-operative Society, against farmers in the vicinity.

Mr. T. K. Keane, solr., for two of the defendants, said that Mr. Rice, solr., for the plaintiffs, had asked for an adjournment, and both Mr. Barry, solr., for another of the defendants
and he agreed.

All the cases were adjourned for one month.

Serious Charge.

John Lynch, Kenny's Lane, was charged with a serious crime.
Supt. Dennehy, prosecuted; and Mr.
T. K. Keane, solr., defended.

Sergt. O'Beirne, gave evidence of arrest and of a statement made by the accused, who denied the charge. He applied for a remand to enable him
complete his inquiries.

The accused was remanded for two weeks, being allowed out in bail, himself in £25 and one surety of £25.

Substitution Of Hours.

Mr. Keane applied on behalf of Mrs.
Mary Josephine Thompson, Garryvoe
Hotel, for a substitution of hours.

The Justice—Why didn't she apply
at the proper Court—Castlemartyr?

Mr. Keane said she was granted the license only recently.

Supt. Dennehy—The same thing happened last year (laughter).

There being no objection, the application was granted.

Housebreaking And Larceny.

Edward O'Brien, Old Stracally, Co.
Waterford, was charged in custody
with breaking into the house of Jas.
Fitzgerald, Scart, and with stealing therefrom, a sum of about 10/- in silver and a broach value 3/-.

Supt. Quinlan, Lismore, who prosecuted, said they hadn't been able to complete their inquiries, and he would ask for a remand after two witnesses had been heard.

The accused—I want to finish my case to-day. I am an innocent man,
and I want to get home to my wife
and children, who are starving.

The Justice—When was he arrested?
The Supt.—On Sunday night.

The Justice—Where does this case
belong to?

The Supt.—Tallow. I'm afraid nobody can get to go bail for him.

Accused—I can get them from my own place.

Guard T. McGinn, Killeenagh, Co.
Waterford, deposed that on Sunday
12th June, he proceeded to the house of James Fitzgerald, Scart. Entering one of the bedrooms, he saw a trunk with the lock twisted off. Inside the trunk he found a chisel (produced),
he compared it with the marks on the trunk and they appeared to have been caused by the chisel. There was a tin edge round the trunk. It had been bent up in the attempt to prize it open, apparently by the chisel. There was also a cash box in the trunk. It was open. The only money in it was a penny and a half-penny. He then proceeded to an adjoining bedroom
in which was a wardrobe, which had been forced open. In the wardrobe
the pockets of a pair of trousers had been turned inside out. There was also a chest of drawers in the room,
and they had been pulled out. The window in that room leads to the rear of the house and he found that it had been forced open from the outside.

On the outside of the window two iron bars had been twisted on one side. An ordinary sized man would have had great difficulty entering by that window. Under the window was a table on which was a white tablecloth. A person entering would have to stand on the table. On the cloth was the track of a studded boot. The Sergt. took possession of the cloth.
There was a large mirror thrown on the ground and a small hand-mirror lying on the table. Witness knew the accused. He would say the accused could enter by that window. Outside the window he observed a mark
on the frame. It would fit the edge of the chisel. That day he went to ac-cused's house at about 9.30 p.m.
Accused wasn't present. Witness remained till he returned about 11.45.
Witness asked him where he had been
and he said he had been at the Procession at Youghal. Sergt. Lynch arrived about 12.5 a.m., and on his instructions witness arrested accused at 12.20. Accused took off his boots without being asked and the Sergt. took possession of them. They conveyed accused to the Guards station. On arrest he charged him with breaking into James Fitzgerald's house at Scart
on the previous day Sunday, and with stealing about 10/- in silver and a broach value 3/-.

He was cautioned
and he said "I won't say anything to

ye anyway." On the following morning witness saw the left boot belonging to accused compared with the marks on the tablecloth. There were 17 studs on the boot and 13 marks were on the cloth. He noticed that they corresponded with 13 studs on the boot, being situated similarly. The Sergt. put the boot on a piece of blotting paper, and there were 13 marks of studs left on it. The marks on the blotting paper corresponded with the marks on the cloth, as regards position and distance.

Cross-examined by accused—I couldn't have those boots on me at all,
the Guards took them out of the house? Those were the boots he was wearing when he came into the house; he never left the kitchen while I was there. When I came in you were sitting at the fire with my wife?

—Yes. You asked me if I would let you search me without a warrant?—
No. I had a warrant to search the house, and I showed it to your wife
who read it; he then stood up and said
"search away."

After some further questions, the accused said he didn't wish to go any further till he was on his oath.

David O'Brien, aged 9, son of the accused was called, and after a few questions, the Justice said he would not swear him, but would take his statement.

The boy then said his mother called him at 7 o'clock on Sunday morning to go to Mass. His father was then in bed.

The Justice—That is not in accordance with the statement made to the Sergt. What is the good of going on with this?

The Supt.—Except to show that he has been got at in the meantime. (To the boy)—The Sergt. read over the statement and you said it was all right?—Yes.

The Supt. read over the statement,
which was to the effect that he slept
in the same room with his father.
When he woke that morning, his father wasn't in bed—he wasn't in the house at all. He often saw the cold chisel with the broken bit of timber
on the dresser. He saw his father put it in the fire, and hammer it after.
When he left for Mass at 8.30, his father wasn't at home.

The Supt. (to the boy)—Was the Sergt. friendly? He was. He told me
he would take me away.

The Justice—You were asked did you make a statement to Sergt. Lynch?

—Yes. When did you make that statement?—Sunday evening. Where?
Outside on the road, near the house.

At the Justice's request, the Supt.
handed the statement to the boy.

Can you read?—Yes; but I can't read this. Is that your name?—Yes.
Did you write it?—Yes. Did he write something?—He wrote down what is here, sir, and I signed it.

The Supt.—Did the Sergt. ask you
questions?—No.

The Justice—He said the Sergt. said
he would take him away. Do you remember any questions the Sergt. asked you?—Yes. What questions?—He asked me with my father in bed when I was going to Mass? What did you tell him?—I said he was not.

The Supt.—Do you remember him
asking you anything about that chisel?
—Yes. What did you tell him?—I did see it before. Did you say anything about the broken timber in it?—Yes;
that is how I knew it. Did you say anything about putting it in the fire?—
Yes; that he put it in the fire. Who?
My father, sir. Did you say he did anything else with it after taking it out of the fire?—Yes; that he was hammering it.

The Justice—You told us here today that your father was in bed last Sunday morning?—Yes. You told the Sergt. that he wasn't?—Yes. Which is true?—That he was. Why did you tell the Sergt. a lie about it. Because he said he would take me away—that is why I told him. What about this chisel—did you ever see that before?
No, sir. Have a look at it (the chisel was here handed to the boy)?—No, sir (crying). Why did you tell the Sergt.
that lie about the chisel?—He said he would take me away.

Accused said he didn't wish to be questioned his son till he would be on his oath.

The Supt. said he had another witness, but he would ask for an adjournment at that stage.

After some discussion on the question of bail,

The Justice said he was going to take it on himself to let the accused out on his own bail. If he didn't turn up there would be a warrant issued for his arrest.

The case was then adjourned for a fortnight.

The Peace of Christ

MOVING ADDRESS.

THE PENAL DAYS

At the Eucharistic Congress last week, Most Rev. John J. Glennon, D.D., Archbishop of St. Louis, in his address on "The Blessed Eucharist
the Sacrament of Charity and Peace,"
said:

What means the presence of these Princes of Holy Church? Their red robes typify the martyrdom of the Church they serve. Is it that by their presence they would honour the unnumbered martyrs whose sacrifice has made this island holy from sea to sea?
Fitting indeed this recognition would
be, but not for this their coming.
What means this long array of prelates wearing that purple in which Holy Church veils her sorrows?

Do they come to sympathise with a race that long has walked in the purple shadow of the Cross, whose passion-tide has endured for centuries?
No—their faces are turned to the altar,
not to the past.

I see a multitude of priests—they received the sacrificing power at the Last Supper the night before the Saviour died and from the cenacle
they came casked in the gloom of Calvary; and above it the white robe
of the Easter morning. Are they here
to witness Ireland's resurrection?
Yes; but much more is meant in their advent.

Once o'er the hills at Bethlehem the angels announced to the watching
shepherds the Advent of the King,
and in their joy they sang: "Glory
to God in the Highest and peace to men of good will." And the shepherds who heard them said to one another,
"Let us go over to Bethlehem. Let us see this word that has come to pass."

So have come these shepherds—the prices, prelates, priests—they too
have heard the angels' song—they too,
have heard the Master's call. Transscamus!

Let us go over to Ireland and humbly adoring, let us join in the Feast of the Eucharistic King, the King Who makes this island His Tabernacle and His Throne!

Long has Ireland waited the day
when her loved Master would make His solemn entrance into their midst
to receive their plaudits and their prayers. Fifteen hundred years have passed since Ireland's great Apostle
offered his first Mass on these shores.
Long the story of Ireland since that Mass was said; but its every page
though stained by tears, is lightened
by the people's love for their faith in their Eucharistic Lord. For Him they would build a Home, erect a shrine, set up an altar. Here would be a monastery; there a hermitage; here a chapel, there a convent—until the roadway of Ireland were but pilgrim-paths from shrine to shrine; and all
the air was filled with chiming bells,
calling the faithful to daily Mass and evening song. Scarcely a generation had passed from Patrick's day when an entire nation bowed in lowly reverence before the Altar of Sacrifice.

IRELAND'S MARTYRDOM.
The oldest hymn of the Irish Church is the Prayer of Patrick, and in it he begs the Blessed Saviour to be with him—to be within him. The Christian bands of ancient Ireland with one another in chanting the praises of the Eucharistic King.

Of these ancient days when this was the Island of Saints and Doctors it has been truly said that the love of the Eucharistic host moved the Irish heart that their every prayer a poem. But these favoured days—the days when Christ walked with His people in the harvest fields and kept trust with loving hearts in every shrine, were not to last.

The night came—the centuries-long night of Ireland's martyrdom. The storm of heresy that swept over northern Europe in the sixteenth century
and which centered around the altar
and the Mass became a storm of hatred when it reached Ireland.

You men of Ireland, who have so often heard the sad recital, need not now be told how the pastors were stricken and the flock dispersed—now
there was a torch for a chapel, a noose for the priest, and a sword for the people.

How the faithful Irish through all these years clung to the Blessed Christ
and His altar! His temples destroyed, they wandered among the ruins, in lingering prayer, by the broken arches
bearing every reminder of the spiritual feast that once was theirs.
Even then there were priests not a few, who, hiding away in mountain
fastness or secluded glen, still dared
the storm to minister to their scattered flock. Confronted with the soldiers of the king and the spies that infested
the country-side, with a price on their heads, these faithful priests assembled
their poor people Sunday after Sunday for the celebration of Holy Mass.
These devoted people knew where to meet for love always finds a way, and that love of theirs for Christ as His
was stronger than the death that threatened them.

Silently they assemble, setting
guards all around to warn them of the soldiers, and in tears and prayer
they join in the great Sacrifice. Now they hear the Missa est, and while
they steal away to the shadows—oh,
how fervently they pray Him, their Saviour, to remain with them, for indeed for them it is growing dark.

But at times that Missa est was not said. The great Sacrifice had a swifter and more tragic termination.
Long before Mass was ended the spy
had succeeded in tracking his victims.
An onrush of hidden soldiery, a crash
of bayonets, and down from God's altar go priest and victim—one in the sacrifice of love; one in the tragedy

of death.

I pause to pay a tribute to one
figure that out of these days of gloom
and death rises resplendent. They called him a felon then, and he knew that he was soon to meet a felon's
death, but what time was left him
before the supreme sacrifice—he spent ministering to his hunted flock.
While gratitude lives in the Irish heart the Soggarth aroon will be remembered.

The kindly visitor from the Continent as he looks around, may note with regret the absence of the stately
churches dedicated to Catholic service,
nor know that many of those erected
by Catholic hands are theirs no longer,
and so he concludes that Ireland's Catholicity is nothing more than her memories and her ruins. He is mistaken.

Italy may have her glorious basilicas,
France her stately cathedrals, England her regents, but Ireland has her holy places, her martyrs, and her Mass rocks. But more than that, in the hearts of her people dwells a faith
as adamant as the granite walls
that guard their island home.

And that faith deep set in the Irish heart rises again. This great high altar—the throne of the Eucharistic King, standing in a park with its suggestive title, symbolises that resurrection. What a glorious scene! A whole nation lifting up its gates, asks the King of glory to enter—reverently awaits His coming, anon His enthronement,
and then for a spikenard,
breaks its heart at His feet. Presiding is the Cardinal Prince, bidden here as Apostolic Legate from the side of the crowned Vicar of Him Who wore a crown of thorns; and prelates, priests
and people are grouped in humble adoration; while beyond the city on margin of the Irish Sea, the stately ships with pennants dipping in honour of the Christ; and out from Christendom and from the far-off
lands, the faithful in their millions
turn lovingly and prayerfully to their King enthroned in holy Ireland.

SACRAMENT OF LOVE.
And now as we enter into sacred Communion with our Saviour, may we not discuss with you as best we can the meaning of it all? There is but one explanation that comes to us
poor mortals, and that is best expressed in its Title as "The Sacrament of Love."

Now, if love begets love, since the Divine Heart exhausted itself in love towards us poor sinners, would it not be craven of us if with all the energy
of our being we did not gratefully and humbly give Him in return all the love
our hearts can offer? And again, as declared in the Great Commandment,
should not the charity that Christ has shown us be by us extended to our neighbour?

How can we approach the Altar of Love if we have hatred in our hearts
or how return therefrom if our hearts
be raised against brother?

The early Christians, filled with the charity of Christ were, as St. Paul tells us, moved by it as by a Divine impulse.

Thus in love and lowly service the early Church grew and flourished
while paganism, with its hateful gods
and cruel men, was constrained to admit, in spite of all its power, that love had conquered. Conquered, yes,
but only for a time. Paganism survives
and with its hatreds and cruelties is
with us to-day, and we—poor mortals
of the earth—earthly—have to struggle against its inroads. Nations, as individuals, even those bearing Christian names—give themselves up to unholy strife. And Ireland, blessed as few nations have been, has yet to acquire
in its plenteitude, that charity which knoweth no fear.

It may be true, as history tells us
that a people long oppressed become suspicious and full of hate, and
though we know that the seeds of ill-
will are not all of Ireland's planting,
still may we not hope that as these days of oppression are over, so will end
the hatreds they engendered, and Ireland enjoying to-day a broader freedom, and breathing a fresh air, shall cast away, as her risen Saviour did,
the cements of hatred that bound her.

If we speak of Ireland to-night it is because this is Ireland's day before the Great King Visitant. We have but to look beyond the shores of Erin to find the spirit of hatred and suspicion rampant everywhere.

GOUGH—June 25th, 1932, at Harbour View, Dungarvan, Mrs. Margaret Gough, widow of the late Capt. Gough, to the inexpressible grief of her daughters and son. Interred in Parish Cemetery, Dungarvan.—R.I.P.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

CONGRESS ITEMS.
 Eleven Cardinals, the biggest number of Princes of the Church ever seen outside the Vatican, were present at the Eucharistic Congress last Sunday in Dublin. In addition there were over 30 Archbishops and 200 Bishops and Abbots while Clergy, secular and regular totalled thousands. Members of the various Orders of Religious Brothers and Nuns were also a big gathering.

The procession from Phoenix Park to O'Connell's Bridge, on Sunday, was over 4 miles long. Yet the end of the procession had barely got going when the head of it had reached its destination.

By the aid of Loud Speakers, all parts of the huge gathering were in touch.

Listeners-in at home and in foreign countries were able to follow the proceedings with the greatest ease. The Broadcasting arrangements were perfect and the new high power station, recently erected at Moydrum, Athlone, was most satisfactory.

9,000 motor cars were in Dublin for the great day. They came from the four corners of Ireland, and the parking arrangements were perfect.

Considering that over a million people were present, the number of casualties were few. The traffic arrangements in which over 1,000 Guards were engaged, under General O'Duffy, Chief Commissioner, could not be better, and the Gardai covered themselves with glory.

The numbers who travelled by the special trains broke all records. At midnight on Saturday, the trek by rail began.

At 2.15 a.m. on Sunday morning, a special train left Dungarvan, with over 500 passengers. At Durrow, Kilmacthomas, and Kilmeaden, big numbers also joined the train which reached Dublin at 7 a.m. Even then the city streets were crowded. After breakfast, the visitors inspected the sights and then proceeded to the Park for the Pontifical High Mass.

At 3 a.m. on Monday morning, the return journey started, and after much meandering and delays, Dungarvan station was reached at 11.30 a.m. A big number waited for the evening train to return home.

A motor lorry from Tullamore fitted up with seats for passengers, was proceeding home from Dublin in the early hours of Monday morning, when at Leixlip, the lorry struck the bridge, and precipitated all the passengers into the Liffey—a fall of 30 feet.

Two men were killed and 26 were more or less seriously injured and had to be removed to hospital.

In a collision between a car and a bus in Co. Wicklow, a man was killed and in Co. Cavan, on the home-ward journey, a motorist was also killed in an accident.

Considering the huge traffic, and the extraordinary number of cars on the roads, it is marvellous that accidents were so few.

Everywhere throughout the length and breadth of the land, towns, villages and farm houses were decorated for the occasion.

A party of Belgian visitors, who passed through here on Monday evening, pronounced Dungarvan to be the most artistically decorated town they had seen. Those who have toured all Munster and Leinster within the past week, and who are in a position to speak with authority on the subject, also declare the Old Boro' and its suburbs stand supreme in the taste and excellence of its decorative display.

On Tuesday, His Eminence, the Cardinal Legate, moored to Armagh, and was received with royal honours on the way. At the Primate's City, he was greeted by His Eminence Cardinal MacRory. Later in the week, he visited Killybegs and the South, where needless to say he received the homage due to him.

Visitors to the Congress have been touring the country during the week, and visiting their friends etc. True to their old spirit and vindictiveness trains from the North conveying pilgrims to the Congress, on Sunday, were stoned at Portadown and elsewhere. Several innocent people were hurt and the blackguards escaped as usual.

The next International Congress will be held at Buenos Aires in the Argentine.

WHAT IS A TITLE?
 Over 75 years ago the Shambles, Dungarvan, was presented by the then Duke of Devonshire, to the Chairman and members of the Town Commissioners and their successors duly elected by Act of Parliament, as Meat and Fish Mart, for the town and country. For quite a long number of years it was utilised for that purpose, but with the advance of time and change of circumstances its function lapsed, and it became derelict. For almost 20 years it is nothing more or less than an eyesore in a main thoroughfare.

The Urban Council having no use for it, sold it as a site for a Technical School to the Vocational Committee, but the L.G. Department refuse to sanction the deal on the grounds that a proper title cannot be had.

As the site of the Shambles was reclaimed from the sea when the Causeway and Bridge were built by the Duke of Devonshire, any title there is would be what the Duke had and gave to the Town Commissioners. Either that or he kept the title. If he did why not the Vocational Committee ask the Lismore Estate Co. to forego any claim they have—and which they have never made—and so enable a badly-needed Technical School to be erected on a splendid site, which at present is only a reflection on the general appearance of the town.

WATER WORRIES.
 We have received the following letter from Mr. J. J. Morrissey, O'Connell Street:—Dear Sir,—In reference to Water Supply and report in your last issue, Mr. Walsh, Inspector, said in such cases he advises people to go to the Council. He advised me to see a plumber. Mr. McGrath, B.S., said he told me to see the Clerk. Mr. McGrath with Mr. Butler (Chairman) and Mr. O'Donnell, told me to tap the main pipe, and if it were corroded, the Council would pay the cost. At the following Council meeting, I was allowed nothing; at next meeting I was allowed 10/-, which I refused to accept. Mr. Moloney stated the reason they refused was because I tapped the main without authority. Mr. Bowen has promised to refund me £3, which I paid for permission to open the road, and he will make the Council pay for damage.

Eucharistic Congress.

WONDERFUL ADDRESSES.

CARDINAL LEGATE'S KIND WORDS.

The Apostolic Letter of His Holiness Pope Pius XI, having been read at the Opening of the Congress,

His Lordship, the Archbishop of Dublin, delivered the following address in Latin, which translated into English, read as follows:—

"It is my duty and high privilege to bid you respectfully a cordial welcome on behalf of the clergy and faithful of this city and diocese of Dublin. You come to us as Legate from the right hand of the Father of Christendom. Words fail me to express to you adequately our profound feelings on this great solemn occasion. Happily, no mere verbal eloquence is required.

"You Eminence has already had an opportunity of seeing with what whole-heartedness the citizens, especially the poorer, have entered into the work of preparing for you a welcome in some way worthy of so exalted a guest, and expressive of the feelings of deep love and profound veneration in which we hold you.

"I speak, too, on behalf of the Irish Hierarchy, who are the Supreme Council of this Eucharistic Congress, and by whose delegation I, its sponsor, have presided over the preparations made for its celebration.

"Finally, I am the spokesman of the whole Irish nation, who have cooperated so magnificently, by means both spiritual and temporal, in the manifold preparations which have had to be made. In all that they did one could not help feeling that they were inspired by the treasured memory of their forefathers, who for many centuries cheerfully endured the loss of all temporal things, some of them indeed, crowning their sacrifice by the martyr's death in defence of their Faith in Christ, their Eucharistic King.

"You come to us, Most Eminent Prince of the Church, from Rome, that City whose name sounds sweetly in the ears of every true Irish Catholic. I venture to say, and in doing so, also to thank God in all humility, that there can scarcely be found throughout the wide world a nation more truly loyal to the Apostolic See and its Supreme Pontiff.

"A venerable tradition prevails amongst us that our own St. Patrick bade us be Romans even as we were Christians. Here you have a compendium of and a key to our whole history during fifteen centuries. We have ever gloried in, and, please God, ever will proudly claim, a pre-eminence amongst the nations of the earth for our devotion to the See of Peter. We hope, too, that these loving ties which bind us to the Holy Father's will, as a result of the presence amongst us of your Eminence, be made stronger still and more enduring.

"We are greatly honoured by the presence here of so many most eminent members of the Sacred College of Cardinals. We rejoice, too, to see gathered together so distinguished an assembly of the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, and Prelates of the Church: most welcome, also are the numerous priests and members of the laity who have come to our shores from distant lands, and by fatiguing journeys, to join with us in this great international Eucharistic solemnity.

"Many of them are exiles come back to the land which bore them, and now, with a mother's love, welcome them home again. All, however, are bound to us by ties of a spiritual relationship more intimate than any kinship of blood or race, and so I bid them a hundred thousand welcomes.

"You are assembled with us for a great and holy purpose. This Congress will forge the thirty-first link of that golden chain by which the nations of the world have already bound themselves about the throne of our Eucharistic King. I was, indeed, appalled at the responsibility which was placed on my weak shoulders, and it was only with fear and trembling that I assumed the honourable office of sponsor of the Congress.

"Fortified by the oft-repeated blessing of our Holy Father, I faced my task, in which I was aided by the powerful help of the Irish Hierarchy, the civil authorities, and the ladies and gentlemen who were invited to act on the various committees.

"The times seem scarcely propitious for holding the Congress with such solemnity as characterised its predecessors. The solemn words of the Holy Father himself, on whose shoulders the care of all the Churches now presses so heavily, bear witness to the gravity of the crisis which threatens the whole world. So far from being discouraged, we have found in these very difficulties and calamities of the times, a strong reason for making of our Congress a yet more glorious triumph for Christ the King.

"Our Congress will afford an opportunity of showing forth to the world that indefectible faith which is the Catholic Church, and of making reparation for the outrages which are daily inflicted on the Sacred Heart of Jesus by the enemies of the Church.

"I thank God, Who has already blessed the Retreats which took place in preparation for the Congress with truly abundant fruits. Well may we hope even more copious graces will be showered on all who are now about to join the Congress celebrations.

"We declare with all sincerity, that in preparing for this Congress we have been moved by only one desire, namely, to increase by all possible means our devotion to the Most Holy Sacrament of the Altar, and that it is our constant endeavour to exclude everything in any way tainted by vain glory or self-complacency.

"With the help of God's grace our preparations have been successfully concluded and everything seems in readiness for the opening of the Congress.

"Wherefore, most Eminent Lord Cardinal Legate, I ask you in God's name and for His great glory, by your supreme authority, to inaugurate this thirty-first International Eucharistic Congress.

CARDINAL LEGATE'S REPLY.

The following is the address delivered by His Eminence the Cardinal Legate, at the official opening of the Eucharistic Congress in the Pro-Cathedral, Dublin:—

"After hearing the solemn words of the Pontifical document, in which Our Holy Father Pope Pius XI, sends his affectionate greetings to the Irish Hierarchy and clergy and people, a document in which His Holiness refers with paternal satisfaction to the glorious accomplishments of this great people from the very time of Ireland's conversion to the Faith of Christ, and announces his participation in this 31st International Eucharistic Congress by sending a Cardinal Legate to preside in his name over it, and after the noble addresses of his Excellency the Bishop of Namur, President of the Permanent Committee for International Eucharistic Congresses, and his Excellency the Archbishop of Dublin, the ideal host and most efficient organiser in this country of this Congress, it is now my pleasant duty and privilege as Papal Legate to declare the Congress formally open.

"It is impossible for me to express in words the deep and sweet emotion which stills my soul as I contemplate this magnificent vision before me, this immense throng of sons and daughters of this Ireland, so justly renowned; this noble gathering of the admired of Ireland, comprising so many distinguished members of the Sacred College of Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, and other prominent personages come from all parts of the world to this Ireland of Saints and of Scholars, to this Ireland of Apostles, and of martyrs, here to celebrate the glories of the mystery of love, to pay a tribute of homage and of devotion to Jesus Christ, our Eucharistic King.

"And this emotion increases and deepens as I realise that the presence of this multitude of devout pilgrims is but the fulfilment of the expectations of the Holy Father, who, certain of the imposing manifestation of faith and love which Ireland was about to give (because Ireland has always given) desires to participate in this

Eucharistic Congress by sending a Papal Legate which His Holiness has done by honouring my poor self.

"So I am in your midst with this noble office, with this most privileged duty to perform, to represent the Pope, to bring to you his greetings and his blessings, to bring to you—I cannot express it any better than to say—to bring to you all of his great heart, beating always with the greatest love for Ireland, which has never been second to any country in his love and devotion to the Vicar of Christ.

"During these days the Holy Father, through the presence of his Legate, wishes to be in your midst, to live with you, to pray with you, and to share with you the ineffable joys of honouring Our Lord and Saviour in the Sacrament of His Love. Allow me, therefore, dearly beloved, in the Pope's name, to salute you pioneers of the Catholic Faith, brought by you to many lands, and not only brought by you but preserved by you and kept flourishing by you in many parts of the world.

"Allow me, in the Holy Father's name, to express not the wish, but the certitude that the great triumph which you have prepared for Jesus Christ in the Blessed Sacrament will constitute a most brilliant chapter in the story of the ardent faith and of the staunch fidelity which have always been the characteristics and the glory of your Catholic Ireland.

"During these days Our Lord in the Blessed Eucharist, will be the subject of your thoughts and meditations, the object of your fervent adorations, the desire of your loving hearts. Meditate, therefore, on his Adorable Mystery, assisted with the Divine light of grace; adore the Blessed Sacrament with lively faith, pray with devotion and humility, and hearts and souls will then in very truth be taken up and filled with the love of God in the Sacrament of His Love.

"May we be helped by the spiritual presence of our great Apostle and Patron, St. Patrick, the 15th centenary of whose arrival among you we commemorate so happily and providentially with this Eucharistic Congress.

"May Jesus be always better known and better loved by the Irish people, great and good; may Jesus shower down upon your beloved country and on all countries in these most difficult and trying times the blessings of Divine grace and Divine assistance and the helps and consolations of which today the world has so much need. This is the sincere and heartfelt prayer which, in the Pope's name and in the name of all the Catholic world, I utter to you."

The devotions and other proceedings of the Congress were broadcast in St. Peter and Paul's Church, Kilmallock, during the week. Large numbers attended, and united in singing the hymns and reciting the Rosary.

LISMORE NOTES.

EUCCHARISTIC CONGRESS.

The celebrations and other events in connection with the above seem to be in the mind of everyone here, and they form the main topic of conversation. Naturally the local efforts are of deep interest to the residents, and are much discussed.

Generally speaking, the town has had a very creditable display which could not fail to impress all except the few critics, who are ready to find fault in anything, no matter how good it may be.

Pride of place must be given to New Street, for the variety of its decorations and the good taste shown in the setting of them, and there has been no lack of the religious feeling which underlies it all. The right spirit is there, and it has been given expression in the discreet manner in which the residents of New Street have been nightly assembling to recite the rosary and pray at the shrines.

We have no hesitation in saying that the people of New Street have set an example for the rest of the town, and we gladly tender them our tribute of praise.

We have already referred to Church Street, which has earned high praise for the tasteful style of its decoration, and we must not forget Chapel Street, which has also done it part well. A beautiful shrine erected there attracting much attention.

SPORTS BRIEFS.

Waterford being still in the running for All-Ireland Honours, it behoves its Minor Hurling team to be putting in some intensive work in preparation for Thurles on July 17th. The Waterford youngsters meeting Tipperary, are up against it with a vengeance. The two Lismore representatives on the team, Michael Regan and John H. Foley, are in steady training. This pair has already acquired prominence on the hurling field by reason of masterly displays. Much is expected of them, and their Lismore comrades look to them confidently to uphold the honour of their County, and the prestige of their Club. Others of the Minors, adept and ambitious, are "hard at it" too, and who knows but their proficiency may catch the elusive and mysterious Selector's eye.

The "under 12" Scholboys' Race in the Sports Programme, is for boys "under 12"—not girls or men. "Katchie" Healy says he knows them all. There's no bluffing "Katchie."

All those who enter for Lismore Sports before Sunday, July 3rd, will receive an admission card, entitling them to pass freely through any part of the Sportsfield. Let us hope that the supply of Admission Cards will not run out.

DEATH OF MRS. NOONAN, BLACKWATER VALE HOTEL, LISMORE.

Through the death of Mrs. John Noonan, on Sunday 26th inst., Lismore has lost an old and highly esteemed resident.

She was what we colloquially termed "one of the good old type." A woman of personality, clear-headed, with a remarkable aptitude for business and keen foresight, qualities which enabled her to carry on with success the business left by her late husband, Mr. John Noonan, who was one of the most successful men in the commercial life here.

Beloved by all for her kind ways and sterling upright character, the deceased is universally mourned, and the townsfolk unite in tendering their sympathy to the family in their bereavement.

The interment took place on Tuesday 28th June, at 3 o'clock, in the parochial graveyard. There was a large attendance to pay a last tribute of respect to the deceased.

The Rev. Father Power, recited the last prayers at the graveside. The chief mourners were:—Mr. and Mrs. John Noonan, Turbha; Misses Noonan, Cappoquin; Mr. and Mrs. Flynn and family, Lackan, Cappoquin; Mr. and Mrs. Morrissey, Goolnacrena, Cappoquin; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Scanlon, Glenribbin; Mr. M. Sargent, Cappoquin; Mr. Bud Sargent, Cappoquin; Mr. W. McCarthy, Cappoquin. Wreaths were sent by the following:—Mrs. McMahon; Miss Gerlie Coleman; Mr. and Mrs. David Noonan; Presentation Convent; Miss O'Farrell, Ash-town; Vincent, John and Harry Noonan; etc., etc.

WE HAVE AGAIN AND AGAIN warned our customers on the absolute necessity of potato spraying. It has been conclusively proved during the past few years that not only has spraying prevented potato blight, but it has almost doubled the crops in every instance. It also improves the quality of the potato by extending the period of growth, thereby allowing the crops to come to maturity.

The necessity for spraying this season may be more urgent than usual. The present weather is proving favourable for the spread of the disease which has already made its appearance in the South of Ireland. We stock the latest types in horse and knapsack sprayers, and we also keep large stocks of sulphate of copper and washing soda. We shall be very pleased to answer any enquiries regarding quantity to be used per acre, and will quote special low prices for cash for sprayers or spraying materials.

YOUGHAL URBAN COUNCIL.

Present—Mr. J. R. Smyth, P.C., Chairman; Capt. P. Dunne, Messrs. D. J. Linehan, J. Whelan, T. Murphy, D. Dennehy, T. Beausang, P. J. McMahon P.C.; Mrs. S. Hurley, P.C.; A. J. Fowkes, E. P. Lynch, Vice-Chairman.

Congress Holiday. Mr. Beausang proposed, that Monday next be observed as a General Holiday in the town. This was seconded by Capt. Dunne and passed unanimously.

McCurtainstown Road. The Clerk referred to the steamrolling of the Strand Road at McCurtainstown. The Council would like to hear the opinion of the Strand representatives on the work.

Mrs. Hurley and Mr. Dennehy said that the work had been done very well, and the people were much pleased.

It was decided to apply for a further grant to enable the side streets to be done.

Dangerous Parking. Mrs. Hurley complained of the parking of cars on the road beyond Claycastle. It was a very dangerous practice.

The Chairman said the road was too narrow for the parking of cars. It was decided to call the attention of the Civic Guards to the matter.

Congress. Mr. McMahon asked would the Council be represented by any of the members at the Congress.

The Clerk said there were several members going to Dublin for the occasion. Mr. Dennehy said they would be well represented there.

Gaelic League and M.O.H. The Clerk read a letter in Irish from the Gaelic League, addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Health requesting that, as Youghal was largely an Irish-speaking district, they should select an Irish-speaking person, who was determined to do all his work through the medium of Irish, to the position of M.O.H. They also asked the Minister not to sanction the appointment of any other than an Irish-speaking person.

Mrs. Hurley—Who in Youghal could answer him if he spoke Irish to them? Mr. Whelan—What have we got to say to it?

Mr. Lynch said the Dr. was already elected. Mr. Whelan—The Dr. has a knowledge of Irish.

The Chairman—It is all over. This is waste of time.

Foreshore Protection. The following letter was read:— The Guildhall, Portsmouth, 14/6/32.

Dear Sir.—In further answer to yours of the 8th ult., personally I have no special knowledge of the use of grass for foreshore protection. I am, however, sending you a typed copy of an article which appeared in the "Portsmouth Evening News" on 1/7/30, which will possibly be illuminating to you.

In order that I may help you to the best of my ability, I got into touch with Mr. Earnest Catham, the eminent coast protection engineer, of 35, Victoria, Street, London, S.W.1. He has been kind enough in the course of a letter to give me the following information:—

"With regard to the other matter you mention, I have been to Youghal and a good deal depends on where the trouble is. As you know Spartina Townsendii started life at Southampton 50 years ago and Poole Harbour is nearly blocked with it now. Once get that on the Blackwater and it would soon get to Cappoquin. It has been more or less experimentally tried for coast defence. I believe in Norfolk. If on the open coast for sand hills the Dutch employ always Marran Grass, while for shingle "Sueda" is recommended. The latter can be got from Lynn Chilvers, the Nurseries, Heacham, Norfolk, or could at any rate a few years ago. I have not myself a great deal of faith in planting as an efficient means of coast defence on sand dunes.—Yours faithfully, RICHARD J. JENKINS, City Engineer.

The Clerk said he had written thanking Mr. Jenkins, for his kindness. The Chairman and others said they were very grateful to Mr. Jenkins. It was decided to get a supply of the grass recommended.

Local Industries. The Clerk read a minute of the meeting held during the week in connection with the question of starting some local industries. The Chairman said they were running a Pottery for the last 5 years. Mr. McMahon said they had also a fine Brick works, but it got no help and had to be closed down.

Mr. Lynch said they had a new Government satisfied to help local industries. It was up to the people of Youghal to try and get going. If they didn't help themselves they would be let down.

The Chairman said he had procured details of the pottery trade and he didn't believe there was any great prospect before it.

The Clerk said as regards the brick industry, there were several factors to face—the importation of foreign brick, the general use of concrete blocks, widespread depression and labour troubles.

Mr. Beausang—The last Government didn't give the Irish Industry any support.

The Clerk—Were they asked? Mr. Lynch said the fact that the brick works were gone was no reason why an effort shouldn't be made to start something else.

The Chairman said that the building trade was never in a more depressed condition. Concrete blocks were somewhat cheaper than bricks and their use in building had been subsidised by the Government. That left about a hundred men idle locally.

Mr. Beausang said some clever fellows touched the late Government for big subsidies in connection with certain industries. He didn't see why they shouldn't try and get something now (laughter).

Mr. Lynch referred at length to the use of concrete blocks as against bricks in the Cork Housing Schemes, and said that the previous Lord Mayor, Sean French, had fought hard in favour of the home-made article.

The Chairman said he was ready for the brick market if the brick market was ready for him.

The whole question was adjourned pending the result of inquiries as to the local lace industry.

Regatta. Mr. Dennehy asked what about the Regatta?

Mr. McMahon said it wasn't a matter for the Council.

Mr. Dennehy said there wasn't a town around that hadn't some kind of amusement—sports, races, regatta—Youghal seemed to be the only place that had nothing.

Mr. Linehan—Start something and we'll all help you.

Capt. Dunne said it was a queer thing if they were going to throw cold water on any movement that would benefit the town.

Mr. Lynch—They don't want it and let them do without it.

Mr. Whelan said there was a meeting called lately to organise Sports, and only two or three members of the Council attended.

Late Dr. Orpen. Mr. O'Gorman proposed a vote of sympathy with the widow and relatives of the late Dr. Orpen. He was a thorough gentleman of the highest character and an ideal citizen.

Mr. McMahon seconded. He had been on friendly terms with the Dr. for 30 years and always found him to be a very kindly and courteous gentleman, loved and liked by all.

Mr. Lynch associated himself with the proposition. During the troubles he had come under the Dr's care and he did him a turn that would never be forgotten. While under his treatment he got him out of a scrape that might have meant two or three years to him.

Messrs. Whelan, Dennehy, Fowkes, the Clerk and Mrs. Hurley and others, joined in the vote. Mrs. Hurley remarking that he was generous and kind to the poor.

The Chairman said from a long-standing friendship with the late Dr. Orpen, he could heartily endorse everything said of him. He always found him a perfect gentleman.

Our New P.P. Capt. Dunne, proposed a vote of congratulation to Very Rev. Canon Dineen, D.D., on his coming back to Youghal as P.P.

Mr. Whelan seconded. The Chairman said Youghal was unanimously delighted in having their old friend Dr. Dineen back amongst them again.

The Clerk said they were all delighted on his elevation to the dignity of Canon of the Cathedral Chapter.

WOLFE TONE.

CELEBRATION AT BODENSTOWN

The annual Wolfe Tone Commemoration ceremony, was held at Bodenstown Churchyard, on Sunday week. About 15,000 people from all parts of the country converged on Salins. 7 special trains, two from the west, one from Cork one from Waterford, one from Belfast, and one from Wexford brought thousands of people. Over fifty buses and motor cars arrived at the little village of Salins from the north. Shortly after 2.30 p.m. the procession moved off in military formation towards Bodenstown Churchyard. Seventeen bands took part in the march, and battalions of the I.R.A. from all parts of the country were present. A very big number of the Fianna Eireann and Cumann na mBan marched in the huge procession which accepted military commands.

On arrival at the graveside the general salute was sounded, flags were dipped, and wreaths were placed on the grave immediately afterwards. Mr. Michael Price, who introduced Mr. Sean Russell, addressed those present as soldiers of the Irish Republic and citizens. They were assembled, he said, around the grave of the greatest of all the band of Irish revolutionary leaders of him who, as Pearse had put it, made articulate the dumb of the centuries.

Mr. Sean Russell, I.R.A. leader, said they were present to honour the military actions of a comrade soldier, the first commander-in-chief of the army to which they belonged. When Tone was forgotten Ireland herself would deserve to be forgotten. To-day, said Mr. Russell, we are not free. Tone's ideals have not yet been realised. We may have two regiments of the British Army, one dressed in khaki in the North, and the other dressed in green in the South, and a representative of the English King in both places. The police are recruited from anti-national elements, and the C.I.D., have been specially selected to carry out the Treason Act of 1922.

KILMATHOMAS NEWS.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

Rev. Mother Antonio and Sister Margaret Mary, of the Convent of the Holy Family, Enfield, Middlesex, are at present guests of Mrs. O'Donoghue, merchant, Kilmathomas, with whom they visited Dublin for the Eucharistic Congress. Sister Margaret Mary is a sister of Mrs. O'Donoghue.

COTTAGE TENANTS.

At a well-attended meeting of the Stradbally and district branch of the Cottage Tenants' Association, held at Farrell's Cross, a resolution calling upon the Government to introduce legislation whereby cottiers can purchase their own cottages was, on the proposition of Mr. Jas. Power, seconded by Mr. J. Curran, passed, and the Secretary was directed to send copies to the Minister, and the local T.D.s. The meeting issued a strong appeal to all cottage tenants in the Decies to join the Association.

DIPHThERIA.

Another outbreak of Diphtheria has occurred in our midst. This is stated to be the fifth outbreak of the dread disease here within the last six or seven months.

A "CARRIER'S" CLOSE.

Within the past few days, Mr. R. J. Russell, M.F.H., Seaford House, Bonmahon, found a dead carrier pigeon on his estate. The bird had both a silver and a rubber ring attached to its legs. The identification marks on the silver ring read: "9578 IUUF31"; and on the rubber ring, "500E."

GOOD NEWS.

His numerous friends and well-wishers will be glad to learn that Mr. James Cullinan, Ballinarrid, Bonmahon, is now on the high road to complete recovery from the effects of his recent accident on the Kilmathomas-Bonmahon road.

CONGRESS.

Big numbers travelled to Dublin on last Saturday and on Sunday morning from this locality. A majority of these remained in the Metropolis until Monday. That all were profoundly impressed by the stupendous spectacle they participated in, goes without saying; nor will they ever forget to remember the edifying experience. All business houses were closed in Kilmathomas on Monday.

Millbrook Terrace was the most beautifully bedecked part of our town. Statues and crucifixes were prominently displayed, and there were many banners and an altar in the open. On Sunday evening, as on every evening of the preceding week, crowds knelt before that altar and recited the Rosary.

Kilrossanty School was admirably adorned. The entrances to St. Anne's Church, Ballynane, was a veritable waving mass of flags, bunting scrolls and emblems. The farmhouses and cottages on all sides were gay with Papal and National flags, and religious mottoes graced almost every home. The whole offers convincing proof of the fervour and faith of the people.

BUTTER MARKET.

The supply of fresh butter to the Kilmathomas weekly market, is as heavy as it was at this period last year. At the ruling price paid this week was 8d. per lb. By the way, his many friends are highly pleased to find Mr. Patrick O'Mahony (of O'Connell St., Dungarvan), again attending at the market here. This popular young man is buying for an old-established Cork firm, and he will purchase from local vendors on Thursday of each week during the season at Mr. P. Kirwan's premises.

RARE TREAT.

A highly successful entertainment was held at the Fairgreen Hall, Kilmathomas, on last Sunday night, in aid of the fund for the building of a house for the local Curate. The local Dramatic Club captivated a crowded throng with Mr. M. J. Mackewon's cleverly constructed, immensely amusing 3-act Comedy, "The Rale McCoy." The members of the cast were—Miss Maggie McGrath (as Rose Ann McCoy); Mr. Paddy Barron as Sergeant Brown, Royal Ulster Constabulary; Mr. Mark Kiely (as Robbie John McCoy); Miss Mary Joe Maguire (as Amen); Mr. Michael Morrissey (as Billy McCandless); Miss Molly Blanchfield (as Maggie Robinson), and Mr. Liam Whelan, N.T., (as Major Aubrey Bartner). To state that each and every one of these brilliant amateur performers filled their respective roles in a positively par-excellent manner is by no means a "painting the lily" phrase, but rather is it the mentioning of a fact obvious as it is revivifying to record. And where all so faultlessly, it would be invidious to particularise. Mr. Patrick Kirwan, functioning as stage manager, with his wonted ability is such a responsible capacity. At the conclusion of the entertainment the Very Rev. M. Fitzgerald, Adm., suitably thanked those present for their attendance as well as the players for the splendid manner in which they acquitted themselves. On Wednesday (Holiday) night, the piece was reproduced and again held the attention and interest of a large audience from the first to the final curtain. We are asked to note that the sparkling entertainment will, by special request, be repeated in the Fairgreen Hall, on to-morrow (Sunday) night. A special word of praise is due to Mr. Coughlan (piano), Mr. P. Kiersey (violin), and Mr. D. Coughlan, M.C.C., (do.), who, between the acts on last Sunday and Wednesday nights, played a series of select numbers, which were wholeheartedly appreciated.

The Congress.

MILLION PEOPLE AT MASS.

WORLD LISTENS IN

In the history of the world, there is nothing to compare with the Eucharistic Congress, the final act of which took place on Sunday last, in Dublin. It is beyond the powers of any writer to describe in words. No adjective could be found to qualify its success. It transcended anything ever even dreamt of, and will stand out in the days to come as being a marvellous profession of faith in the old land of Saints and Scholars.

The scene at the Pontifical High Mass in the Phoenix Park is described as "quite beyond the descriptive power of any observer, and almost beyond the power of imagination." Never before in Ireland was there any event even remotely approaching it in magnitude.

The splendour of the ceremonies, the size of the assemblage, the amazing success of the traffic arrangements, the wonderful and memorable scenes of fervent adoration—all combined to constitute an occasion that may be truly described as nationally and internationally historic.

More than a million people knelt in prayer and emotional tension at the High Mass celebrated by the Cardinal Legate, and at the solemn moment of the Elevation, when the trumpets heralded the Divine Mystery of the Holy Eucharist, and the fifteen century old bell tolled, the impressiveness of the fervent scene was beyond the imagination of any one not actually present.

At the end of the Mass a special message from the Sovereign Pontiff was heard. Speaking in Latin, as "a father to his children," the Holy Father expressed his joy at participating directly in their pleasure at the triumph of the Eucharist. He imparted the Apostolic Benediction in the name of the saints, including the "Blessed Mary Ever Virgin, Queen of Ireland; the Blessed Patriarch, Patrick, and all the blessed saints of Ireland."

The procession from the Phoenix Park to the special altar on O'Connell Bridge, where Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament was imparted was of monster dimensions. After the Benediction the Cardinal Legate delivered a touching address, in which he indicated how deeply the religious zeal of Ireland had impressed him.

After the Mass in the Park, a procession took place to O'Connell Bridge, where Solemn Benediction was given, and when it is remembered that thousands had not left the Park at the time Benediction was given at the Bridge at 6 o'clock, it can be understood how enormous was the concourse present, while in addition every part of the 4 miles from the High Altar in the Phoenix Park to the Altar at O'Connell Bridge was lined 20 deep with worshippers.

The Altar on O'Connell's Bridge, stately structure of white picked out in gold had red and golden hangings and its foundation had been transformed overnight. A grand bank of flowers, palms and evergreens was now arising from a green plot which made all the whiter the pillars of the Altar. Biscuit coloured tiles on the roof were topped by a gilt globe. At the very top was a plain gold Cross. The Altar itself was protected all round by a glass screen, and inside the candles and flowers were ready simple, dignified and noble.

"Ecce Panis Aggelorum" was the text inscribed across the front of the Altar Cloth. At each corner of the wire bridge a tall steel mast, painted bright gold, carried a great pennant on which St. Patrick's Cross stood out in scarlet upon a white background. In the strong breeze that blew from the south-west even the masts swayed, and threatening clouds rolled up, but nobody had any fear of rain—Ireland's prayers for good weather had been so wonderfully answered during the rest of the week.

At 2.30 several hundred of Ireland's Catholic Scouts marched up to the bridge and formed extra cordons. Soon many of them were given an important task—the spreading out of the long red carpet for the Cardinals. They put it across the roadway, some ten feet in front of the Altar and then brought along the Prie Dieu which they placed along its length for the princes of the Church. The breeze was so vigorous that six scouts had to stand on the carpet for hours keeping it ready for the Cardinals. Down on the metal footbridge, two army signallers were sending morse news of the progress of the Park Ceremonies, and so everything was in order for the reception of those bishops, who, being unable to face the physical strain of the long procession, drove up in motor cars and were accommodated at windows overlooking the bridge.

Six long rows of kneeling mats were placed for the prelates to occupy during the Benediction. "An army aeroplane swooped over the whole centre of the city. Time after time it passed up the river and down again, its engines filling the air with sound. It was twenty minutes past four when the first sign of the procession was seen in the centre of the city. Away at the top of Westmoreland St., appeared a small squadron of cavalry, clad in the new full dress uniform of royal blue with gold epaulettes and black busbies, gold-trimmed. They led one of the great pageants of marching men, bringing them down to the bridge, where it was seen that the leaders carried a fine Congress banner. They were the members of the Sacred Heart Confraternity of St. Andrew's Church, Westland Row.

Just to show that it was in truth an International Congress, contingents from South Africa, Australia, Canada, Poland, Germany, Czecho Slovakia, and Belgium came hard on their heels, the Belgians carrying many beautiful banners, which waved proudly over their heads.

Almost at the same time two other processions appeared—one on either side of O'Connell Street, each led by another contingent of cavalry. As they poured into that enormous thoroughfare, the Rosary was being recited from the Park and transmitted through the loud-speakers, and the men, taking up the responses, filled the place with prayer. The military and scout cordons became alert for any breach of directions, but perfect order was observed, so that one might have forgotten the huge size of the throng which was pouring out of the Park, were it not for the strident bells which here and there indicated an ambulance rushing on an errand of mercy to some marcher who had been overcome.

Soon the processionists were coming into every street adjoining the bridge, and on the river the patrol boats of the Catholic Sea Scouts became busy. They had, however, nothing to do, for the people were really amazing in their orderliness. The sombre evenness of colour of the men was broken up by some hundreds who wore broad shashes of deep blue, and filled Burgh Quay with brilliance. Every window and every roof within any reasonable distance of the bridge became packed with spectators as the centre of the city grew more and more densely black with men. No women appeared, and even to the end none of them were to be seen near the bridge, so that they had evidently been held up along the way by the huge assemblage of men, who in the order of the procession had precedence to them.

The hymns being sung all the time swelled over the congregation, and floated on the wind far away, where the hundreds of non-participants joined in with fervour.

At six o'clock the sky, which had been full of lowering clouds, cleared and became full of light, the wind, which had been getting very cold, dropped, and once more the weather was at its very best. That very moment there appeared the head of the Blessed Sacrament procession, upon which all were awaiting with reverent eagerness.

Slowly it wended its way along the southern quays, and when it was sighted the prelates, who had come by car, emerged, and took their places in front of the Altar.

Led by a cross-bearer and attendant acolytes, there came near the head a body of over three hundred Christian Brothers, then Presentation Brothers, in their choir dress, Franciscans, De La Salle Brothers, and members of other Orders. Down the quays at the other side of the river came another division of this procession, and both rapidly filled the eastern quays, which had been kept empty for them. The sun at length blazed forth in splendour at 6.15, just as the throngs, singing Ireland's own hymn, called on St. Patrick—"On Erin's green valleys look down in thy love."

The boys' and men's choirs now arrived at the bridge, and after them a huge concourse of priests, the great expanse of white surplices being broken by the feather head-dress of the Red Indian Chief Priest, Father Gordon. The priests' choir, Canons of the Dublin Metropolitan Chapter, and many additional prelates came next, then the No. 1 Army Band, which accompanied the choir in song full of Hosannas.

The faint scent of incense borne on the wind gave warning of the approach of the Blessed Sacrament, but before it reached the bridge there came many distinguished people—members of Corporations, County and Urban Councils, and the principal public bodies of the country—most of them wearing official robes, which made grand patches of colour.

Finally, near 6.45, the King of Kings entered into His court of worshippers. He was borne by the Legate, who sat on a wheeled canopy, of which the bearers were the leaders of Ireland. They consisted of the President, the Vice-President, the Speaker of the Dail, the Chief Justice, the ex-President, Senator Farren, the Chairman of the Senate, the Lord Mayors of Dublin, and Cork, the Mayors of Limerick, Waterford, Drogheda, Kilkenny, Clonmel, Wexford and Sligo; Mr. Joseph Devlin, M.P.; Senator T. J. Campbell, K.C.; Mr. Cahir Healy, M.P.; Mr. McLoughlin, Chairman of the Armagh Urban Council; Count John McCormack, Dr. Coffey, President U.C.D.; Sir Joseph Glynn, and Mr. J. J. Shiel, Chairman of the Council of Co. Councils.

When Mass concluded the chief marshal, General O'Duffy, gave the orders to the people to form into processional order. As though they had been trained and drilled like a military machine these thousands of men and women formed into processional order and marched off in columns of eight to take up their positions in the city streets. Those others, who by reason of age or weakness, were unable to march, lined the two miles route to the main gate of the Park and joined in the singing and prayers all the way through. Down this magnificent avenue Christ the King was borne. Piety and devotion, humble, yet proud marked the passing of the God of Hosts. Triumphant He was borne through the city streets for the adoration of another vast throng that had been unable to go to the Park.

Then in the heart of the capital from the beautiful High Altar on O'Connell Bridge, the Cardinal Legate gave the Benediction to the unnumbered throngs who knelt in the streets. What a marvellous sight!
