Mr. Moloney—How long are the contracts for sand, stone, etc., holding.
Chairman—To the end of the financial year. They are generally taken for 12 months.

Mr. Griffin-I think the contract expired last March. Mr. Moloney-That's what I think too. We should keep the thing square.

The Clerk in reply to the Chairman said that the contracts expired last March. Mr. McCarthy-As far as the carting contract is concerned, we should be ashamed to take a contract lower than 7/-. How is a poor man to feed his horse and keep his family on less. Chairman-I was genuinely under the impression that we took contracts last March. Mr. Moloney-We could advertise for contractors for the next finance

Mr. McCarthy—I will oppose getting contracts for the horse work. It is only pitting one man against another.

Mr. Lawn-I suggest we carry on with the present contractors to the end of the financial year. Mr. Hackett seconded.

Mr. Moloney-That would be out of order. I think the chairman will tell Chairman—As I said before I thought the Council to advertise for new contractors, or to continue the present ones to the end of the year. Mr. McCarthy-Any tender for cart-

Mrs. Griffin, Strand Hotel, wrote again claiming £4 from the Council for damage caused to portion of her hedge, burned by the Council's man, when burning papers.

Chairman-We referred this to Mr. Walsh to see Mrs. Griffin. Did you see her Mr. Walsh? Mr. Walsh, S.S.O.-When I called at Mrs. Griffin's she was away. I would suggest that the Horticultural Instructor be asked to see the place. Mr. McCarthy—Did you not say that 10/- would cover the damage.

Mr. Foley said 10/- might plant the place destroyed, but when would it be like the other portions.

made that night to hand the matter over to Mr. Williams, solr., to acquire the land compulsorily. He (Clerk) would like to see the matter settled in the easiest way, but the Council know that he wrote twice to Mr. Ryan and got no reply.

Mr. O'Donnell, asek if Mr. Williams wrote to Mr. Ryan before starting proceedings to acquire the land. I have no doubt, but if Mr. Ryan thought the Council were serious, he would come to terms with them. Would I be in order to make the suggestion that if Mr. Williams has not communicated with Mr. Ryan, to do so now?

Clerk—I can tell you I made that suggestion to Mr. Williams, but he said that as Mr. Ryan did not reply to the Council he would hardly reply to medals. Dungarvan, although facing a very strong wind, were first away in the opening stages, but the attack was frustrated. Some mid-field exchanges followed and a free to the Brickeys were having the better of exchanges and only on a few occasions did the Brickeys come within scoring range. On resuming, Dungarvan attacked and after a fine passing bout Parsons scored a great goal. The delivery was again returned, and Keohane receiving from Parsons banged in another goal for Dungarvan. At this stage play was of a rough nature, and it was only the careful handling of the game by the referee that prevented any scenes taking place. The Brickeys took the play to the Dungarvan end, but drove wide. A nice passing movement by Dungarvan say P. O'Donnell kick a good point. The kick-out was again returned, and Cowman sent to Keohane who raised the minor flag. Shortly before the end Parsons from the right wing sent a high ball between the sticks. A fairly large number of "guns" turned up from various districts in West Waterford, including a good sprinkling of novices, all of whom were generously treated in the matter of handicaps, which was only as it should have been, as owing to the increasing popularity of this fine, clean form of sport, promoters of such events should always encourage the novice in every possible way, and, in-deed, this was the order of the day at Millstreet, and not a single complaint

FAILURE OF THE YOUGHAL URBAN COUNCIL!

South Abbey Youghal, 11/9/32. (To The Editor). Sir,-Will you kindly allow me space to tell my fellow ratepayers how our civic purse lost four pence. A few days ago I rode on my "push" bicycle from Waterford to Youghal. The ride was a rather gruelling one, as it was in the teeth of a westerly gale, which later on, shifted to the northwest.

Coming down from Grange, I decided to cross by the ferry, instead of going round by the bridge. But on reflection, I saw the crossing would be through wetting seas as the tide was coming in against the wind; so I decided-tired, as I was-to go round by The total amount lost each year, through failure to provide protection from spray in the boats, and a shed on the Ferry-point, must amount to a huge sum; which both directly, and indirectly greatly adds to our burden. Every sound businessman knows how "small things" and attention to details, count for much in retaining old customers (or visitors), and getting fresh ones.

Should we retain our present City Fathers? I think a fair number of them ought be pensioned off.

(In a previous letter on the ferry-boat service, I mentioned three different ways by which protection from spray could be provided).-Yours

Are the farmers of county Waterford and of Ireland them to carry on. going to take the crushing they are now getting lying down? The farmers are unbeatable if they take up this question and fight as they fought in the olden days. In 1882 the farmers won and again in 1923, they in County Waterford fought and won, and to-day if they adopted the proper spirit they would find they would come out top dogs again (applause).

Hon. Sec., etc., etc.

Mr. Ml. O'Brien. Mr. Ml. O'Brien, Grallagh, said is they came there with certain intentions and said a few words and went home afterwards and did nothing, they might as well not have come together at all. They had at present a perfect duty to perform as farmers. As they were all aware their present position in the country was they were being dragged down and out at the bidding of every individual-every scamp, every blackguard and every idler in the country (hear, hear). They were in the position that when they went to the fair or the market with their produce, they could get hardly anything for them. Yet the farmers were 70 to 75 per cent. of the people of the State. Were they going to stand idly by and see such things happening in the country, when it was in their power to be the absolute rulers of the country-as they should be-if they were only half loyal to one another. He remembered the state of affairs they were placed in in that county in 1922, when the Transport Union was rampant and was going to rule all Ireland. Then the farmers came together and stuck together and in spite of a general strike, they won and won be? It was all very well to talk about hands down. They finished with the growing wheat. Look at the weather. Transport Union not only in this county, but in all Ireland. They were in the same position to-day to do the same thing if they were united and stuck together. Unless they did that they would be brow beaten by every individual. It was up to them as farmers all over the country whose bread and butter was being taken from them to take action. No one can exist nor ear his family under present conditions, and it was up to them to get all the farmers rallied together-it may take 2 or 9 months more to get them all convinced of the necessity of being organised—and if they did, nothing would stop them and even guns would be useless against them (hear, hear).

Sir Robert Paul. Sir Robert Paul, Bart., Ballyglan, said he wished to support the remarks made by the previous speakers and said they should have the courage of their convictions. They were governed by people who wanted to teach they were to till their land. Why should they come to teach them what patriotism was when their idea of patrionism was to lose the markets they held up to the present. If that was their form of patriotism it was not advocating the cause of labour but they knew the labourer was worthy of his hire, and he would not give a good day's work for a bad day's not going to do the country any good. not going to do the country any good. The farmers of Ireland were the back-The farmers of Ireland were the backbone of the country. Agriculture was Waterford, was held in the Town Hall, Dungarvan, for the purpose of forming a Branch of the Farmers Defence League in the County to protect their interests in the grave crisis through which they are passing. Owing to the short notice given many farmers were unable to be present, but the meeting was very representative, and unanimous in its discussions.

They all felt the speeches they had listened to would be of no use if they had not self-determination. They would have done a bad day's work unless they put into their organisation self-determination and a vigorous style. There was no use in going home and have people asking them what sort of a meeting had they. They should show their determination in a vigorous manner. INTIMIDATION THREATS

Addressing an enthusiastic meeting in the City Hall, Kilkenny, at which the attendance numbered about 250, Dr. O'Higgins T.D., said their organisa-tion stood for everything clean courage ous and decent, and would stand be-tween the people and the menace that was in their midst. They had been held up as recruiting men to go out in revolt against the established Govern-ment of the country. His family suffered perhaps as much as any other family in this country at the beck and instigation of some of those who now formed the Government, but in spite of that he would rather that God would strike him dead that that he should lead one man in revolt against any Government elected by the Irish people (applause).

The first duty of the organisation was to support the Government in power, no matter what Government it is, in the maintenance of law and order. They stood for the protection of the democratic right of free speech and free franchise. He denied that their's was a political organisation, except it could be called political because it stood for decent citizenship, respect for law and maintenance of order. The men in charge of the organisation were not either liars, hypocrites or humbugs, but men who would stand over what they said and never felt called upon to apologise to any man for anything they said. They were out for the extermination from their midst of the sinster Communistic organisation. Were not those principles, he asked which any Government throughout the whole civilised world should be proud to have the manhood of the country coming together to support. We will walk in the middle of the road no matter who is behind either hedge. We will carry out our programme no matter who attempts to intimidate us, and if some of our members suffer, if some people are reckless enough, anti-Irish enough and anti-democratic enough to use arms against any of us, then those against whom arms are used, will fall with a smile on their faces and with the knowledge that they did their duty courageously. If such happens, the gaps in the ranks will only strengthen

'Hope deferred maketh all hearts sad' was written long ago, For hope it is that bears us up when troubles round us flow;

'Let's hope so"—often on our lips some longed-for event, Though satisfied we e'er must be take what fortune's sent.

A man will be determined to gain proud position, Ambition will so grip his mind that he will then petition His influential friends to help, and favourably voice His merits and his qualities. He's hopeful of his choice.

A man will leave his home and friends, with hopes possessed is he: To find a life of greater scope he sail far o'er the sea;

In foreign clime so far away he hopes much wealth to gain And joyfully return once more to one he then shall claim-

o one whose thoughts are all for hin the girl he pledged to love, And who was left with aching heart when he from her did rove.

While there's life there's hope" we fondly say, a maxim ever sure, We breathe it still when all seems lost when we expect no cure;

When one is near the journey's end and life is ebbing slow There still is hope while beats th heart-not yet the dying throe;

The loved one bids the world good-bye but hope clings on always, That life may linger yet awhile, tho but a glimmering ray

Remains in that weak form. So hope o'er all our ways is cast And walks with us the journey through and cheers us to the last.

New Housing Scheme. The report of the special meeting in connection with the new Housing Scheme was read as follows:-"The Clerk explained that an on assumption that a £260 house was erected on a clearance area, the rent would work out at 3/6 weekly to which should be added rates at 1/6 making rent and rates, 5/-. In the case of the same house erected on virgin soil, the hood, was out to uphold the standard rent would be 5/8 and rates 1/6, equal Regarding sites-Miss Harris Sheehan, offered a site at Cork Hill, 78 feet long 330 feet deep and a width at the end of 60 feet, containing 84 square perches, for the sum of £75. It was decided to offer her £60, subject to santion in which case it was decided to erect 11 houses on the plot. The total number of houses to be erected was 20. Regarding the remaining 9, it was decided to inquire of Miss Hennessy, Mill Road, the price of her portion of Adams Row. In the case of Dr. Armstrong's portion, he was to be informed that the Council were now proceeding to purchase compulsorily for the purposes of Part III. of the Housing Act, whatever portion of Adam's Row are vested in him.

As it was the Council's intention to proceed under Section 5 of the 1931 Act, it will be necessary that certain areas should be defined as unhealthy areas, and, as a result, a clearance order should be made. In this event the tenants who get displaced would be put into possession of the new houses, so that the Council would qualify for the 66 2-3 per cent. grant.

When both sites will have had the approval of the Minister as well as sites and plans, and all other essential details will have been ready, the Clerk is instructed to invite tenders for the erection of 20 houses as per plan No. 4 581. Houses to be built in brick if available locally, and if not, mass concrete.

It was decided to put the Town Surveyor in charge of the scheme and to act as Clerk of Works. The newly erected houses to be given only to tenants, who, as a result of a Clearance Order, will be compelled to vacate their houses, the Clerk to have the advice of the Council's solicitor, when required.

Mr. P. Kennally is to be asked the area and price of the site referred to in his letter of the 6th inst.

Regarding the Clerk's estimate of the rents referred to, a letter was read from the L.G. stating that the rents would be calculated in the manner indicated in the letter, but on the calculation the loan should be taken at 5f per cent. interest, requiring an anunity of £6 13s. 4d, including principal and interest, and provision should be made for a reasonable annual contribution from rates. The rents should also be fixed to include rates. When the details of the Council's scheme had been settled application should be made to that Department for sanction to the necessary loan.

Mr. Murphy asked were the rate-payers called on to subsidize those schemes. The vast majority had more than enough to do to make ends meet themselves.

The Clerk said that was the result of the Act of the Dail, and they would not get the grant otherwise. Mr. Lynch said he strongly objected to giving a free site to anyone, who could erect houses and charge what rent they liked. Instead of giving a site for the purpose he thought the Council should take steps to build more houses which were badly wanted The Clerk said that Mr. Lynch seemed to have got the wrong end of the stick in the matter. If he had read the Act he would see that. The Chairman said the special meeting had considered the matter very carefully, and done their best in the

After all the bitter experiences of the past, the Irish still continue to play into the hands of England.

Through the cutting away of big grass margins and other improvements, the road has been considerably widened in many parts, which will be greatly appreciated by all, as owing to the heavy motor traffic on the way to the famous Mount Mel-leray Monastery during the tourist season each year, this important thorough fare has proved dangerously narrow in the past, and several serious colli-sions have only been barely averted in consequence.

> CRICKET. CAPPOQUIN V. CAHIR.

Cappoquin Cricket Club travelled to Cahir to play a match with the latter Club in Cahir, on Saturday week. This was the third meeting of these Clubs this season, the two previous matches having resulted in a win for Cappoquin now annexed the deciding match by 67 to 44 runs, thus winning by the comfortable margin of 23 Cahir went in to bat first, but made a bad stand against the accurate bowling and brilliant fielding of Cappoquin, a notable feature of the latter being the fine performance of J. Regan who caught no less than four batsmen, three for "ducks," all off Captain Jameson's bowling. In these circumstances none of the Cahir batsmen reached double figures, while V. Gardiner (24) and Capt. Jameson (19) were the principal scorers for the visitors. Cappoquin has now played ten matches this year, winning seven and losing two, while the other match had to be abandoned owing to rain, which is not a bad record for a Club which was started only late last season.

The Government's Aim.

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

Speaking at Kilkenny on Sunday night, President de Valera said that if the Government got an opportunity of people knew how different the story was from what they read in the papers Influential importers of foreign goods and big ranchers and others who were able to make their voice heard, might convince strangers and unthinking people that they expressed the views of the community.

The people know they did not. If the people were asked what was their view of the present situation they would say, "The fight is on, and we are going to stick it out.'

President de Valera went on to say that there was nothing unreasonable annuities. They went over to Great that there should be negotiations. He immediately said that he was prepared that the basis of negotiation should be acceptable to both parties.

He asked that a stop should be put to the punitive discriminatory Thomas tariffs so that negotiations should go on in a proper spirit. But this was not agreed to.

As long as the Thomas duties were there they must take measures to defend themselves.

Britain asked that pending a settlement the Irish Government should pay over the money. He refused to accede to this, and told the British that he was had already stated, they had put the out of it. money in a suspense account, and the to speak.

Mr. de Valera declared that he believed that the Irish people as a whole were behind the Government. They were in the struggle, and were out to

He added that the aim of the Government was to unite all the forces in the titled to remove themselves from any type of foreign interference, and on the broad basis that the resources of value. the country should be exploited for the benefit of the Irish people. He was sure he could appeal to the young people to stand behind him in his programme and not obstruct the Government.

They had been told there was intimidation in the country, as well as crime, but an examination of the records been noticed by farmers that when would show that it was the most crimeless of civilised countries.

Where was the intimidation, he ask ed? There was none that he could see. If there was, there were forces under the control of the Government which prevent it

The suggestion was that they were conniving at disorder. There was no disorder.

They were recently accused of acting in a strange manner when they did not welcome the formation of another body which pledged itself to support the Government in keeping law and

The Government did not call for any such support because it was not re-The existing forces were quite sufficient. It was well known that their policy for national defence was that, in addition to the small, standing army, there was to be a volun tary army throughout the country, and it was known that the Minister for Defence was at work and was actually on the point of putting into operation such a scheme.

The Army, declared Mr. de Valera, was to be under the direct control of the Government. They did not want and would not tolerate any Army in the country but the one.

"I can," he continued, "assure the people who have any anxiety—if there are any people outside the newspapers who are showing anxiety-that it is the firm determination of the Government to keep order, and we will not tolerate any interference with those

"I can assure the people if there was need for support the Government could find 50,000 men to-morrow if necessary. They did not want any forces of a military character in the country except the forces immediately

The British, the President continued were waiting patiently in the hope that some position would develop in this country which would get them out of of the renewals. their difficulties. They were hoping against hope that the embers of civil war would be rekindled. That, how-ever, would not happen, and the crisis formalties.

would go to a successful issue. He held that the present position of the farmers was not entirely due to the "Thomas duties," but to the conditions At the present time in England and Northern Ireland cattle and sheep were being sold at ridiculously low

The Government recognised that in this struggle it was necessary to help the farmers and everything is being done in that direction.

The next thing they had a satisfied the could find a satisfic they could find a satisfic they could find a satisfic. The first thing to be done by the Gowould do, if they could find a satisfactory means, was to give similar relief in regard to store cattle, and also relieve to some extent the farmers' overhead charges. Already they had added £250,000 to the grant in relief given to farmers by the late Government, and that would be used for the relief of rates on small dwellings.

The Government was engaged on a scheme that would take the farmers out of the position that the Britsh had placed them in by producing for the British market solely. The farmer was now being induced to go back to tilin his attitude in regard to the land lage and to secure that the Government had introduced a wheat scheme. Britain, and the suggestion was made Kilkenny was once the greatest wheat growing county, and the farmers would now be guaranteed a certain to start negotiating then and there, but | market and a fixed price ranging from 23s.6d. to 25s. a barrel for wheat. The Government further aimed at outside agriculture. And they had succeeded to such an extend that factories which were previously working short time were now working overtime, and factories producing 50 p.c. before were now producing 100 p.c.

If the people were to assert their rights to keep the annuities they would have to be prepared to fight for them, elected by the Irish people on the and they would have to be prepared to policy to retain these moneys. As he make sacrifices. There was no way

FEEDING VALUE OF OATS.

The feeding value of oats depends to give up possession. mainly on two factors: (1) The class of oats used; (2) the class of stock to the rent of 3/6 was excessive, and said Justice to deal leniently with him and country by forgetting past differences to the first factor, it must be noted that roll, solr., to produce certain books of the first factor, it must be noted that roll, solr., to produce certain books of the land documents from the office of the land documents hindering another, there could be no to husk are of greater feeding value Lismore Estate Co., which would against him. progress. The percentage of husk to the total weight of the oat grain varies from 22 per cent. to as high as 30 per cent. It for stock feeding purposes, but there is still another consideration. It has short plump oats are fed to horses that many of these pass through the digestive tract in a whole state, not having been acted on by the digestive juices. Where longer or rougher oats are fed. these are found to be more thoroughly could be put into immediate action to digested. We see, therefore, that the difference in feeding value between short plump oats and long thin oats is not so great as one would be led to believe by merely taking into account the weight of kernel in a given mass. With regard to the class of animal to which they should be fed, it has been ascertained that oats are apparently about equally digestive for cattle, sheep and horses. Crushed oats are more easily digested only in the case of horses, this, doubtless, being due to the smaller capacity of the stomach of the horses, and the greater need for this concentrated form than is the case with ruminants, such as cattle and sheep. The outstanding feature in the composition of oat grain when comparing this with other cereals, is its riches in highly digestible oil. The average percentage is 5 and to this is partly due its special suitability for animals on whose energies large demands are made, e.g., working horses.

Tallow Ejectment Cases.

Dr. Eaton Water, Cona Weir, Tallow, sought an ejectment order against Michael Willoughy, in respect of a house which he occupies as a weekly tenant at a rent of 3/6 per week in Tal-

This was one of a number of similar cases which have been before the Court on various occasions since last February and which had been adjourned from month to month on various grounds

At the first hearing of some of the cases in February, it was stated that Dr. Eaton Waters had purchased the town of Tallow in March, 1931, from the Lismore Estates Co., (formerly Duke of Devonshire's estate) and on several of the weekly tenants were heavily in arrears of rent to the former landlord, while further arrears had become due to him directly between March, 1932, and February, 1932, and proceedings were then taken for the recovery of the joint arrears in all cases. After some of the cases had been heard Dr. Waters became landlord of the

Mr. Anthony Carroll, solr., Fermoy, appeaed for Dr. Waters, and Mr. W. R. Hodnett, solr., Youghal, defended.

The Justice added that he wished this case was taken to another Court, as he was tired of the prolonged proceedings which had dragged on in this Court over it.

A similar case at the suit of Dr. Eaton Waters, against John Barry Saddler and Harnessmaker, West St., Tallow, was next called, when the same solicitors appeared for the plain-

Mr. Conway, Rent Collector, stated the defendant owed £39 6s. to July, 1932, which included £6 6s. 11d. rates which Dr. Water had to pay for him. The Justice asked how did the defendant come to be charged with the rates in addition to the rent if he had not received the necessary notice that he would be responsible for the rates. Mr. Carroll said when the landlord received a demand note for the rates he divided the sum claimed by 52 and added this amount to the weekly rent over each year, and he said that under The Small Holders Act it was not necessary that he should serve any notice

Having heard the evidence of Dr. Waters, and the defendant, Barry, at considerable length, the Justice said this case would be further adjourned to the next Court.

With regard that he had served notice on Mr. Car- leave him off under the Probation of these conditions may apply in your and documents from the office of the any charge previously brought pasture. The most usual suggestion for overcoming moss is to treat the land with lime. Apply lime to several small patches and note the result. It would be advisable to use either slaked lime or very finely ground limestone. It might also be desirable to scarify the surface with a harrow of some kind. If the lime does not correct the trouble, then it would be desirable to apply a mixed fertiliser or else manure. If this is a lowland pasture it may be lacking in potash, and, if so, either a heavy potash fertiliser or horse manure would be likely to give good results. Hard wood ashes will contain potash and lime; if they are available, it might be desirable to try them out on certain portions of the pasture. It is well to take a small portion of the pasture and determine just what the soil needs rather than to attempt to treat the whole of it.

HAWKING OF MEAT.

Butchers are taking exception to the tendency of private individuals to kill and market meat, and it is stated that the men in the Dublin Corporation Abattoir have decided not to handle sheep or lambs for killing and dressing unless they are for legitimate butchers.

A Dublin cattle salesman stated that was customary with itinerant dealers to bring a motor van into certain Dublin areas and distribute lamb in quarters at the rate of 5d. and 6d.

farmers Call for National Action.

GOVERNMENT ASKED TO LISTEN TO VOICE OF PEOPLE.

Farmers and ratepayers from the Counties of Dublin, Kildare and Meath at a meeting held in the Mansion House, Dublin, passed unanimously a resolution calling upon the Dail to take united action and have an immediate settlement of the present economic crisis. "The time," the resolution continued, "is now at hand when livestock must be disposed of, regardless of what price may be obtained, so that a continuance of the 20 per cent, tariff on all live-stock and farm produce to Great Britain must lead to ruination for the whole farming community of the Free State."

HIS REST.

(The "Armidale Express" of July 16th, to hand, contains the following eloquent tribute to the memory of the late Most Rev. Dr. O'Connor, Bishoo of Armidale, a native of Ballyvoile, Duingarvan).

"But souls that of His own good life partake,
He loves as His own self; dear as His eye
They are to Him: He'll never them forsake:

When they shall die, then God Himself shall die:
They live, they live, in blest eternity."

The resolution also requested that every county in the Saorstat should hold a public meeting of the farmers and ratepayers and forward the names of three delegates, who would attend the Farmers and Ratepayers' Convention, which will be held in the Mansion House, Dublin, so that they might adopt the most effective line of action at their disposal to deal with the present unprecedented situation.

They live, they live, in blest eternity."

These beautiful and inspiring lines of Henry Moore, used by Ralph Waldo Emerson as the introduction to his discourse, "The Over-Soul," readily come to mind as this city mourns the passing of a great Christian and a great citizen, the Most Reverend P. J. O'Connor, D.D., Roman Catholic Bishop of Armidale.

For fifty-six years, Bishop O'Connor sent unprecedented situation.

Mr. J. J. Rooney, who presided, said that the large attendance was clear proof of the necessity and urgent importance of the farmers and rate-payers all over the Free State organising into one body. At present the far-mer who had got land capable of fat-tening stock was held up by the surplus of his cattle of July and August, at eacher, and a friend; a man who reat which period he could only put a limited number on the market, and out and just in the faith to which they take a much lower price than pre-war, while the small farmer also could only sell his cattle to the larger farmer, who was unable to sell his own or ship, them to England and take 20 per cent. less for them.

The only answer given to this was-Pay your rates, taxes and land annuitheir stock.

Before the present crisis was finished, there would be the saddes; tale known in any country to be told. The farmers had the property and the means of defending it, and it was up to them to do so (applause).

Mr. James O'Connor, said that they were about to launch a movement which would be the beginning of a national force. The farmers had had to strive, generation after generation, to the future of their sons' children was at stake. The whole country was face to face with a crisis brought about by questionably had it reaction in weldpolitical action. The farmers had alling together the two schools of reliways been patriotic, but were never afraid to give their honest opinion. They were faced with an economic crisis, and it was time for them to take a hand in the business and give the sparingly of his natural gifts. His capcountry the lead it was waiting for. They were not squealing, but they asked the Government to listen to the voice of the people. If the Government did not give them a fair chance; they must ask it to meet the country again (applause). The Government would have to take the advice of the farmers, and they recommended them to open negotiations as the matter scarce be filled. could not be settled by their standing on their dignity.

There was more than annuities to be considered. There was the live-stock trade to cater for, so as to meet competition in Great Britain. In the trade they had surplus supplies, which must be exported. They had the Ar-gentine knocking the stuffling out of them, while they might be getting their quota. They did not want the credit of the country to be spoiled, but wanted farming to be carried on at a

As business men, farmers wanted to do business, and they wanted an honourable agreement. He was sure that the Government could not expect farmers to stand behind them if they were going to cripple them.

Mr. J. P. McCabe, seconding the resolution, said that he had held—and still held—that the land annuities should be paid. Why, he asked, should they fall out with their best customer. Any trade they did outside England and Northern Ireland was comparatively worthless. The representatives of the Free State Government came back from Ottawa boasting they had made agreements with Canada, but Canada was looking for markets for her own products, and so were the other Dominions; and with that most important country of all they had made no agreement. Captain Daly, supporting, said it was a deplortable thing that they had a lot of people with such a hatred of Eng-land, when they all knew that everything they got outside the country was from England. What, he asked, was the use in President de Valera talking about the growing of wheat, as neither the climate nor the soil is suitable for which has already made its appear-growing it. What does President de climate in the South of Ireland. We Valera know about growing wheat? Continuing, he said he had been told that the Minister for Agriculture had pleased to answer any enquiries renever tilled a piece of land in his life. Where, he asked, was the farmer to get the money from to buy seed. What was the farmer to do with his cattle? Was he to put them out on the land and let them die (Cries of: "Pay no Iron

Late Bishop O'Congor of Armidale.

A GREAT MAN PASSES TO HIS REST.

When they shall die, then God Himself shall die: They live, they live, in blest eternity."

For fifty-six years, Bishop O'Connor laboured in the diocese of Armidale. That his work was fruitful, and found favour with the head of his Church, is plainly evident by the succession of recognitions that came his way, until he was elevated to the episcopacy 29 years ago. His flock, throughout this far-flung diocese, mourn the passing of subscribed; a man abundantly endow-ed with the milk of human kindness His passing is mourned, also, by non-Catholics, because the city has lost a friend and a champion; a man who let no opportunity pass to uplift pub-Pay your rates, taxes and land annulties; but there was no market, he said outside Great Britain, to dispose of ation a spirit of affection and pride in their community and its organisations. Few men have done more to bring re-nown to Armidale, through scholastic achievements, than the venerable prelate whose mortal remains await the last sad obsequies.

To both Catholics and non-Catholics, Bishop O'Connor was the very antithesis of insularity in religious pre cepts. While displaying unswerving loyalty to the faith of his fathers, and sparing no effort to extend the inpassing will leave a gap that can

Bishop O'Connor was a human-itarian in the widest sense of the word. He was a friend to the poor, and they will miss his bounty. He was a friend to the sad, and they will miss his words of sympathy and encouragement. He was a friend to the fallen, and they will miss the inspiration that came from the depths of his under-standing heart. Truly, he was a man of the people. It is said of Epaminondas, the great Greek warrior, that the progress and prosperity of his country was "borne by and with him, so it died by and with him," but it can be said of the late lamented Bishop O'Connor "that the progress and prosperity of that portion of the Church in his keeping was borne by and with him, but lived after him," because his achievements were based not on the sword, but on the Word. Members of his flock will, with Montaigne, say "he is not dead," but "he has lived," finding in this truth comfort for the present and hope for the future.

Modern Poultry Feeding.

In the absence of Vitamin D—which Mr. Sheehy previously explained—is present in grass and other green herbage, though the quantity present is not sufficient to supply the full requirements of the growing chick—growth does not cease entirely, but it is subnormal. Some growth even of the skeleton occurs, but the deposition of lime which is necessary for the hardening of bone does not take place. Consequently the bony structure of the bird is soft and pliable and those parts which are subjected. The limbs be rickety. This disorder is similar to animal.

There is a definite evidence of injury to and fatalities among chicks from the use of cod liver oil of high acide content. The presence of minute particles of liver causes cloudiness and a cloudy oil is therefore to be regarded with suspicion, but cloudiness may, however, be due to the deposi-tion of stearin, caused by a drop in temperature in an oil which was previously clear. Oil for human consumption must have the stearin removed by storage in low temperature chambers and subsequent syphoning and strainin f. A good sample of veterinary oil should be similary treated, as tolerance of cloudiness allows for the possibility of the presence of particles of liver tissue which under any circumstances are undesirable. The essential difference between human and veterinary cod liver oil is not one of vitamin content but rather of choice in the selection of fresh liver and of greater care in the extraction of the oil and the refining of the ultimate product. Numerous samples, both branded and unbranded, of very potent veterinary cod liver oil are on the market, and there is no necessity whatsoever to use the much more expensive oil prepared specially for human use.

High acidity in cod liver oil promotes parts which are subjected to stress or strain become distorted. The limbs bend and the breast bones are distorted, and the chicken is pronounced to be rickety. This disorder is similar to that which, in similar circumstances, occurs in pigs, sheep, cattle, monkeys, and the human.

A complete absence of vitamin D or a serious deficiency thereof is very quickly reflected in a very definite disordered condition of the chick, but where the deficiency is slight no outward evidence may appear though the effect may yet be serious. Experiments conducted at University College, Dublin, go to show that in such cases, while no external trace of rickets appears, the chest cavity is subnormal in size, and the internal organs of the body are less well developed than in comparable chickens receiving a full extracted soya bean meal 5.

body are less well developed than in comparable chickens receiving a full supply of vitargin D. Even though the keel may be straight there is some distortion of the chest which is noticeable only when the feathers and flesh age removed. Obviously any limitation to normal development interferes with the capability of a bird to produce to its maximum capacity in the adult condition, and consequently a supply of vitamin D during growth which is less than the minimum requirement definitely limits the future egg production of the fowl, though apparently from outward appearance the bird has made normal growth.
