

Mr. Cosgrave's Address at Waterford.*ROUSING WELCOME.*STRONG CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT'S POLICY.

Following the tremendous success which attended the launching of the Cumann na nGaedheal election campaign by Mr. Cosgrave on Saturday night in Cork, the ex-President set out on his tour of the country. On the way to Waterford he had a short conference with members of the organisation at Dungarvan. Waterford City gave the Opposition leader a magnificent reception when he addressed 10,000 people from the window of the City Hall. Several bands attended. Some miles outside the city Mr. Cosgrave was met by the Mayor (Councillor Cassin) and many of the leading citizens, and a procession of motor cars escorted him to the Imperial Hotel. His passage from the hotel to the meeting place was through an avenue of wildly cheering crowds.

When he came forward to speak, the greeting given him was of a most striking character. Men waved their hats, and women, both on the Mall and in the windows overlooking it, waved handkerchiefs, the ovation lasting several minutes.

Having recalled his first political mission to Waterford fourteen years ago and paid tribute to the memories of the late Mr. Rev. Dr. Hackett and Captain W. A. Redmond, T.D., Mr. Cosgrave said they were fighting in this election for the vital, material and spiritual interest of their people.

In the whole of the country's national economy there were two main issues—the preponderating agricultural industry and the secondary industries of the State. Their agricultural industry was probably two and a half times as important as their secondary industries, judging from the returns of the wealth-producing power of those two economic arms. Twelve months ago, Mr. Cosgrave continued, we had a bright and prosperous future before our people in respect of our agricultural industry. Our great market across the water, which was of immense advantage to us, had given us a preference along with the other Dominions of the British Commonwealth of Nations. In other words, certain specified agricultural goods from Germany, France, Denmark, and other States were subject to a tax of 10 per cent. on that market where we get in free. To-day some of these goods of ours which had that advantage are subject to a tax of 40 per cent. In other words, a bullock or heifer entering the British market from the Irish Free State pays before it goes in a tax of £8, and the money to which the farmer would be normally entitled is reduced by that figure. I want to ask any member of the present Government whether in sober judgment he considers it likely or possible for the farming industry in this country to prosper under such conditions as that.

Referring to the Ottawa Conference, Mr. Cosgrave, having commented on the elaboration with which the delegation to Ottawa was fitted out by the Government, declared that instead of getting that entry for their goods into the British market for which the money had been spent on the delegation, the latter returned empty-handed, and with no advantage for the people of the country. The British market was valued for this country at anything from 20 to 30 millions per annum, but in the last six months approximately nine millions, representing £3 per head of the population, had been lost to the country. In the trail of that loss they were bound to have unemployment. Those people were now appealing for a bigger majority for no other purpose than to increase the misery and loss which should fall upon their people. The Government claimed to have a second line of policy for agriculture. Where was it? It was held up at the present moment by reason of the fact that the Government rushed to the electorate and asked them to return them to power.

Dealing with the Cereals Bill, the ex-President said the Government proposed to give bounties for the growing of wheat, telling them that from day to day the purchasing power of the British people was diminishing, and that there was no hope to be looked for from that source. Why, then, was it necessary to send an expensive delegation to Ottawa to get a portion of that trade? While it was the Prime Ministers of other countries who were seeking the advantages of Ottawa, the President of the Irish Free State was at the telephone, and the Vice-President and Ministers for Agriculture and Industry were in Canada. In no other case was there such an example of indifference—and there is no other word applicable to the head of a State absenting himself from a conference of such importance to his country.

Two or three months afterwards Mr. de Valera went to Geneva to take up the biggest position in the gift of the League of Nations, which had been won by the previous Government, and concerned himself with the differences between Manchuria and Japan instead of, as a sensible man would have done, solving the differences between this country and Great Britain.

Mr. Cosgrave went on to deal with the imposition of tariffs, and said that after ten months of experimentation the Government were now adopting the policy adopted by their predecessors three or four years ago. He criticised the opposition to the appeal of General Collins in Dail Eireann for the establishment of the Garda Siochana, and stressed the advantages enjoyed by Fianna Fail when taking over the reins of Government in not having to mobilise an army or police force.

By election promises Fianna Fail had stamped the people into giving them power. They now gave no sound reason for this general election except one—that the Government, faced with the extraordinary condition of affairs created and promoted by themselves, were no longer capable, had lost courage to face the future, and left the responsibility for it to be taken by the people themselves.

"Now it is the people's chance," said Mr. Cosgrave. "Now is their opportunity to strike a smashing blow for stable, sound administration in this country, the return of normal conditions of employment, security for employment, a return of these markets which incompetence and lack of patriotism have robbed from us, and opportunity for the labourer of working out his living in normal fashion, getting good employment and giving a good return."

I make no wild promises. The situation is serious. They have spent more money than the country has earned. That money must be found from the pockets of the people. Those political experiments made all over Europe for the last ten years have proved very costly. Look across the map of Europe, see how democracy has been staggering during that period. Our people have more political sense than most others. In Europe to-day there are no less than five dictators, and one of them is the worst the world has ever known. Unstable Governments lead to such institutions, and I would be very sorry that the rights and liberties of our people should be jeopardised by any chance of giving effect to what some of the outgoing Ministers are asking for—more power in order to muzzle the people. In this country Parliamentary Government has its very essence in the right of the opposition to give its views. We had no military machine. We had nothing else but the sound common sense of the members of our party, and such has been the effect of the voices of Messrs. McGilligan, Hogan, Blythe and Cosgrave. Let the people keep them there; let them strike a resounding blow for Irish nationalism and true Irish democracy; for a stable Irish Government that will enable us to maintain our industries, to increase our business, and get back the markets we have lost.

Once the pronouncement was made in the Press that in three days we would make peace with Great Britain the price of cattle would go up. Please God, 1933 will be a good year for the people of this State (loud and prolonged cheers).

Mr. John Hearne, Chairman, Waterford branch Cumann na nGaedheal, presided, and read a letter he had received from Ald. Thos. Cullen, stevedore, in which £3 was forwarded—being one shilling each from sixty dock labourers towards the election fund.

"I must emphasise," Ald. Cullen wrote, "that this contribution is entirely voluntary on their part. These men have suffered much from unemployment in the port in consequence of the economic war. Their support is given to your party in the belief that your success at the polls will remedy their present desperate condition."

Addresses were also delivered by Mrs. Redmond, who was given a remarkable reception; Dr. V. J. White, Mr. Rowe, B.L.; Councillor Cassin (Mayor), Mr. E. Walsh (ex-Mayor, and John Kiersey (outgoing deputy).

PEACE WITH ENGLAND.
Speaking at Tramore, Mr. Cosgrave declared:—If we win the election we propose to go over to Great Britain and open negotiations on the basis of our ability to pay. I undertake that within three days I will restore peace and secure a trade agreement with the British as good as that enjoyed by any of the Dominions, and, I hope, better.

Referring to the haste with which the election was rushed, he said, as a result of that haste the Cereals Bill, the main item in the Fianna Fail agricultural policy, was suspended in mid-air like Mahommed's coffin between the Dail and the Senate.

Mr. Nicholas Quinlan presided, and the speakers were the same as at Waterford.

RIVAL MEETINGS.
The good feeling between the parties in the Waterford area was well exemplified at Butlerstown, where rival meetings were timed for the same hour. Cumann na nGaedheal speakers agreed to let their political opponents have the platform before they proceeded to deliver addresses.

Agricultural Education for Dairy Farmers.

At the Dairy Shorthorn Breeders' Congress in Dungarvan last week, Mr. N. Fitzgerald, President, in the Chair, Mr. J. O'Mahony, A.R.C.Sc.I., Inspector of the Department of Agriculture, read a very interesting paper on Essentials in Agricultural Education for Dairy Farmers.

He mentioned that in 1928 it was estimated that the total value of crops grown amounted to £39,749,000, of which, however, £31,485,000 worth was fed to stock on the farm, and the remaining £8,264,000 worth was sold off the farms, or consumed in the households. The crops consumed on the farms went to the production of live stock, and live stock products, to the gross value, including home consumption, of over £50,000,000, made up of milk and milk products £13,693,000, cattle £13,809,000, sheep and wool £2,743,000, pigs £9,874,000, poultry and eggs £9,017,000, horses £1,234,000. They would not possess this value if they had not stock to consume them. No matter what changes might take place in their agricultural economy, they must still market a considerable portion of their crops through the medium of stock, and could not carry on tillage extensively without having stock feeding for the production of manure to grow the crops.

The problem of education for farmers was of considerable magnitude and was of particular interest. The magnitude of the problem of educating young farmers could only be realised when the numbers involved and the area to be covered were taken into account. There were about 121 million acres under crops, divided into over 400,000 holdings, and in the hands of about 378,000 occupiers. Fifty-five per cent. of those holdings were less than 30 acres in extent, and 75 per cent. were less than 50 acres.

The foundation of any system of agriculture must be a good primary education at the national school, with a bias towards agriculture, in addition to the ordinary subjects. Attendance at vocational classes was strongly recommended. This would pave the way for agricultural education.

Having dealt with what has been done in the past in the way of agricultural education through winter agricultural classes, itinerant instruction, residential agricultural colleges, creamery instruction, and cow-testing, and agricultural shows, Mr. O'Mahony dealt with the work of voluntary organisations, such as the Irish Dairy Shorthorn Breeders' Society, the Royal Dublin Society, the Munster Agricultural Society, etc.

Initiating discussion on the Paper, Mr. D. P. Forde, B.L. (Cork), said it should be admitted that there was a great gap in their agricultural education still to be covered. One point he would like to stress was that, in disagreement with Mr. O'Mahony, he believed it would be advisable that young children should get a course in agricultural training in the primary schools. He didn't see eye to eye with the lecturer, as it seemed to him if they were going to develop future good farmers in the country some beginning should be made in their primary schools. He knew the programme of the primary schools was already overlaid, but he thought if at least half-an-hour was devoted of the school curriculum to agriculture much benefit would accrue to the country. Referring to vocational education, he said from 14 to 18 was the time their young people were apt to fall into wild ways, that could be very well devoted to preparing for the great industry of the country. They should not rest until they had secured that the educational facilities available would be brought almost to the doors of their young people. It was not to be expected that their young people could all go to the agricultural colleges, but it would not be a hardship to anybody to go a couple of miles to a centre in the rural areas. There was lacking a good system of agricultural credit, and in this connection Mr. Forde added, although they had an Agricultural Credits Corporation doing a certain amount of useful work, the rate of interest at 6 per cent. was too high. Money spent in farm buildings would have a more permanent effect than expenditure on roads. Planting and drainage were also very necessary to farm work. This country was in a state of stagnation as compared with Denmark in educational matters. The Irish clergy took a great interest in technical education, and they could do much by exhibiting a like interest in agricultural education. The lecture was of such importance that he hoped it would be printed and be made available to all agriculturalists (applause).

DENMARK'S FOLKLORE SCHOOLS.
Mr. T. J. McElligott (Kerry), in the course of an address, analysed the system that prevailed in Irish farming, of the intelligent sons being sent into the ranks of the professions, and the one who had no special aptitude for any of them was kept at home to work the farm. The professional son came home with plus fours, or a trousers 28 inches wide at the top of the boots; he ridiculed the dirt of the farm and created discontent and disgust with farm life, which was a noble profession. They should try to beautify rural life by giving the youth something better than the dance hall, and as a topic of conversation something better than the latest jazz, or the exploits of "Legs" Diamond. He instanced the folklore schools of Denmark, where love for the home was taught to children, together with history, poetry and the great traditions of their race. If there was not inspiration for the youth in education, then there was nothing. He proposed a resolution—"That Congress urge on the Government the urgent need for the introduction of a comprehensive scheme of vocational education for boys and girls between 14 and 18 years of age."

Mr. P. Baxter, ex-T.D. (Cavan), in seconding, visualised the difficulty of the Government in finding money necessary for this type of education. The country was now facing new conditions, and should be prepared to keep the place it had attained and improve it (applause).

Rev. Bro. Crehan, Mount Sion (Waterford) said there was no necessity to urge agricultural education in the primary schools since they had that already in the teaching of rural science. He asserted that agriculture had been ignored by the last Commission, being only regarded as a side-line, and advocated an agricultural enquiry into the organisation of agricultural education, where he hoped the same mistake would not be made as was made by the Technical Commission (applause).

The resolution was adopted.

The New Year celebrations in the United States were attended by 200 deaths.

Half the number were caused by motor-car accidents, while the rest were due to poison liquor, bandit attacks, gun-play, brawls, fire, freezing, and suicides.—Exchange.

This is what COSGRAVE will do!

1. He will end the disastrous Economic War with Great Britain. In eleven months it has cost you £15,000,000—£5 per head for every man, woman and child in the Free State—and brought no advantages whatever to anyone.
2. He will secure a revision of our financial engagements to Great Britain—not by any abandonment of our rights, but by standing foursquare for them in fair and courageous negotiation.
3. He will give the farmers, by a reduction in their annuities, the fullest benefits of that revision.
4. He will secure the Trade Agreement which his predecessors have wantonly thrown away—an Agreement which will at once put money in the farmers' pocket by giving him better prices for his cattle, sheep, pigs, poultry, eggs and butter.
5. He will save the farmers paying three times what they need only pay once. He will give the farmers fair play instead of writs, and markets instead of the bounties now paid by them. These bounties are really a payment to the British, with whom we are supposed to be at war, for buying our produce at ruinous prices to us.
6. He will provide work instead of doles. He will give the workers security in good jobs instead of insecurity in bad ones.
7. He will take millions off the present mountain of taxation. He will end the muddle caused by sudden changes in tariffs, the long delays at the Customs, the constant instability and worry to businessmen, shopkeepers and traders generally.
8. While retaining such tariffs as give good employment without increasing the cost to the consumer he will substitute for the present ill-considered tariff schemes a sane policy that will put no worker out of his job and will not put up costs for farmer, shopkeeper, labourer or housewife.
9. He will maintain Old Age Pensions and other Benefits at existing rates.

LAST FEBRUARY you were told there would be no War. Now you are told there can be no end of the War unless you set up an incompetent and capricious dictatorship with a mandate never to end it.

COSGRAVE will end and win the War in three days. He will win it not by yielding one jot of Ireland's rights to the British but by standing up to them in sensible negotiations. Cosgrave's Party is a patriotic Irish Party. Cosgrave has stood up to the British since 1916 and will always stand up to them. Cosgrave's Party is the Party of Victory—the Party of Griffith, Collins and O'Higgins.

MR. MACDERMOT ON CO-OPERATION.

TARIFF WAR.

NO EQUALITY OF SACRIFICE.

Speaking at a meeting of the Farmers' and Ratepayers' League in Roscommon, Mr. F. MacDermot said in the tariff war there was no equality of sacrifice. While the farmer was called on to pay, there was no diminution in the salaries of deputies. President de Valera complained that in the tariff war he had not the co-operation of the Opposition, but there was not one object that the present Government wished to achieve that could not have been achieved by friendly negotiation.

The Opposition was described by the Government as traitors and swindlers on the question of the oath, but he spoke from knowledge when he said that a form of oath could have been devised by friendly agreement that would have met the situation. There was not one man in the country who would not help the Government in getting a revision of the financial relations with Britain, but the Government, did not want co-operation, but a triumph over the Opposition.

He went to a member of the Government and offered further co-operation, and asked them to bring all parties together.

He was asked if that meant a National Government, and he replied that he meant a National Committee to meet the British and get a favourable financial settlement. Later he got the answer that a General Election had been decided on.

The only way to settle the partition question was by strict tolerance. He knew the Orangemen of Sandy Row and their mentality was much the same as the back-benchers of Fianna Fail. Monsignor Cummins, who presided, said that while civil servants, railwaymen, and others were organised to resist cuts in their salaries, the farmer, who was cut 50 per cent., was organised. It had always in history been the object to create poverty in order to carry out certain schemes, as, for instance, in the French Revolution, and it was part of the Fianna Fail programme to create dissatisfaction in order to create a Communist State.

He added that although two candidates were selected at the Convention, only Mr. MacDermot was going forward, and if the farmers did not give him twelve thousand first preferences they were not worth helping.

Wife: He kept the house-keeping money, and even if I wanted it, for a stamp he had the check to make me ask it.

Wife: My husband stayed away from home for three days, but he telephoned and said he would shoot me when he did return.

FIANNA FAIL.

BRANCH FORMED IN CAPPOQUIN.

A largely attended meeting of the supporters of Fianna Fail was held in Cappoquin on Sunday night, for the purpose of establishing a Branch of the Organisation for the town and parish.

Mr. Sean Goulding, T.D., Lismore, who presided, addressed the meeting at length and explained the objects of the Fianna Fail Organisation, and emphasised the necessity of having every town and parish properly organised for the General Election.

He gave valuable instructions to the supporters of that policy as to how they should vote in the present election if they wished to see a strong Fianna Fail Government returned to power. He repeated the advice which he had previously given to his supporters to cause no interruptions or disorder at any meetings of the Cosgrave Party which may be held in the town during the election campaign, as both sides were entitled to a fair hearing and if any man did not wish to hear the speeches, the best thing to do would be to remain away from those meetings altogether, and then there would be no trouble or ill-feeling caused amongst brother-Frishtimen, hear, hear.

Mr. Mansfield, Fianna Fail candidate for Waterford, and Mr. S. Keating, County Organiser, also spoke and stressed the necessity for thorough organisation throughout the country, and said it was absolutely necessary to have strong and active Branches of the Fianna Fail organisation in every town and parish in the Free State.

After an interesting discussion, a Branch of the Organisation was formed for Cappoquin and the following officers were elected—Chairman, Mr. Peter Griffin, Glenshelane; Treasurers—Messrs. Thomas Lincoln, N.T., and C. Mansfield; Hon. Sec., Mr. Thos. Kelleher.

The following were elected on the Committee:—Messrs. James Mason, G. Kenny, P. McCarthy, P. English, and J. Crotty.

Close on 60 names were handed in for membership, and after receiving substantial subscriptions and transacting some routine business, a vote of thanks to the Chairman concluded the proceedings.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS.

LATE MR. P. O'BYRNE, GLEN, MODELIGO.
The late Mr. Paddy O'Byrne, who was so well known and highly-esteemed in Dungarvan as well as in his native Modeligo and other centres of the county, was brother of Rev. Thos. O'Byrne, B.A., S.T.L., Lismore, Australia; Mrs. J. Connor, Montreal, Canada and Mr. Jack O'Byrne, St. Mary's College, Kansas. At the meeting of the Dungarvan Urban Council last Friday, Mr. Wm. O'Donnell, paid an eloquent tribute to his worth and eulogised his many noble qualities of head and heart. He moved that the Council express their deep regret on the occasion of his early death and directed that their sincere sympathy be conveyed to his bereaved mother, and the members of his family.

Mr. Butler (Chairman), seconded the motion, and emphasised the excellent traits in the character of the deceased. The resolution was passed in silence.

BRILLIANT TEACHER RESIGNS.
After a strenuous career of 40 years in the teaching profession, Mrs. McCarthy, Principal G.S., Abbeyside, has resigned. To dilate on the noble work of this brilliant lady teacher would be as painting the lily. She was most highly accomplished. A vocalist of repute, a musician of note and a lover of art and painting, she possessed the artistic temperament to a very high degree. She was a wide reader of a vast range of subjects and her mind was stored with all that was best in literature. In the discharge of her onerous duties, she was ever solicitous for the welfare of her pupils, and she gave them of the best by word and example. Her pupils loved her and wherever they are to be found at home or abroad, they speak of her in terms of the deepest affection. She was an ornament to her profession. She was beloved by her pupils and their parents and no wonder. It is the sincere wish of all that she may long enjoy in health and prosperity, the reward earned by her noble and self-sacrificing professional career.

WELL-DESERVED PROMOTION.
Heartiest congratulations are tendered to Mrs. M. J. Christopher, N.T., on her appointment in charge of Abbeyside Girls School. She is indeed a worthy successor to Mrs. McCarthy, and we wish her all health and prosperity.

LATE MR. P. MCCARTHY, LEAGH.

ELECTION FEVER.
During the week there has been great election activity in the various camps and the candidates and their supporters have been as busy as bees advancing their several causes. The infection has spread and in the shop the road the train and the bus politics hold sway. The time is short and on January, 24th, the polling will take place, which we anticipate will be the heaviest ever recorded in this Constituency.

A POPULAR GUARD.
During the week Guard Wren, who had been stationed in Dungarvan for many years left on transfer to Bennets Bridge, Co. Kilkenny. Guard Wren, was a most courteous and capable officer respected by all and carries with him the best wishes of all who knew him and valued his worth.
