

League of Youth.

GENRL. O'DUFFY'S REVIEW

At the first annual Convention of the League of Youth in Dublin on Saturday, at which delegates from every County were present, General O'Duffy said their first object was to promote the re-union of North and South—to work and strive for the ultimate independence of the whole of Ireland under a Central Government in the nation's capital. The promotion and maintenance of social order and the recognition of the National Army, the Garda Síochána, and the civil courts as the fundamental institutions of the State appeared in the foremost of our constitution. There was to be no secrecy or mystery about our objects, our personnel or our activities. By our teaching and example we hoped to inculcate in the people a proper conception of the duties and rights of citizenship, respect for the law, as impartially administered, and co-operation with the recognised forces of the State. The association was to be organised on non-military lines, unarmed, and without military equipment of any kind. Blue was adopted as the organisation colour for flags, shirts, badges, etc., as one of our primary aims was the abolition of class distinction, a standard shirt or blouse was designed to be worn at meetings and social functions by all our members—without distinction of class or station, occupation, or interest.

The welfare of the workers—town as well as rural—was a prominent place in our objects and provision was made for the establishment of a national organisation to safeguard agricultural interests. We stated unequivocally our opposition to Communist organisations, which stood for the subversion of Christianity and individual liberty. We also included in our aims the preservation of the Irish language and all that was best in the national tradition and the encouragement and participation in athletics and other forms of sport calculated to promote the physical fitness of the people. Finally we set out to build up for our organisation a high standard of patriotism, discipline, dignity, and self-respect to establish an organisation which would command the confidence of every decent citizen. We stated that we were prepared to submit our scheme of organisation to the highest court in the land for a pronouncement as to its legality and to the highest ecclesiastical authorities so as to ensure that it was in consonance with the law of God. Those were the aims and objects of the National Guard on July 20, 1933, the date of its formation. They were published in every newspaper in the country. I made a fervent appeal to the then existing political organisations for tolerance and goodwill towards the new movement immediately after I was appointed Director-General.

On the following morning, however, the Fianna Fail Press attacked the new organisation as a military body, to prop up the falling structure of Cumann na nGaedheal, and since then in practically every edition of the Fianna Fail Press the new organisation has been assailed, and a campaign of falsehood and misrepresentation has been carried on. But these attacks have been so low and so opposed to decency, that instead of injuring our organisation flourished as a result inside twenty-four hours the new National Guard was banned by the Northern Government. Lord Craigavon saw the danger to his administration of an all-Ireland open and constitutional organisation like ours, with perfectly legal and legitimate objects, and before the people had time to study our constitution or our aims he created a speed record in proclaiming its unlawful.

The young National Guard received its national baptism. Simultaneously with the Northern Government's action, and inspired by exactly the same political motives the Free State Government was preparing the ground for action. The Governments in North and South feared the National Guard, not as a military danger but a political danger. The newspapers every day contained S.O.S. resolutions from the Fianna Fail Clubs over the country, calling for our immediate suppression, but as no cause could be found in our constitution the Government here found itself in a difficult position. A banquet in Government Buildings provided the excuse. It appears that one of the guests at the banquet threw a cigarette end into a scrap basket, and a fire broke out. The heads of the services were hurriedly summoned to Government Buildings, and after investigations it was discovered that the seat of Government was not properly protected, that the army and Gardaí were not competent to give adequate protection, and there and then it was decided to form a new special police force. These were equipped with revolvers, rifles, machine-guns, and armoured cars, and hooded terrors were made available. For them the recruiting regulations as regards age, height, and education were scrapped, and hundreds of men—the majority of whom were well known for their activities against the State for the previous 10 years—were hurriedly admitted. Simultaneously with this a sensation was created by the seizure of a number of responsible citizens of arms held under police permit. This police were aware of the National Guard, as they were held under permit. These were seized. After my removal from office as Commissioner of the Civic Guard, I procured a revolver and permit. I had a second revolver that Mick Collins had in his hand when he was killed. Those who took up arms against the will of the majority of the people. I had a permit for this also. Both were seized, and the person who occupied the responsible position of Commissioner of Police for over 10 years was rendered defenceless against the ordinary criminal, the bank robber, or the housebreaker for whose prosecution and imprisonment he was responsible.

If the Government decided to collect all arms, legally and illegally held, their action could be understood by members of organisations which boasted that their object was to overthrow the State forces by the use of arms were not interfered with and are still in possession of their arms. The Government by its action showed unfair discrimination and definite political interference with the impartial administration of the law.

While attending a National Guard meeting in Waterford on 24th August, a deputation arrived from Dublin to inform me that merger had taken place between the Cumann na nGaedheal Party and the Centre or Farmers' Party; that both parties were desirous that the National Guard should also join the amalgamated parties, that I should accept the position of President of the three united parties. I was unaware of any negotiations between Cumann na nGaedheal and the Centre Party, and the news came to me as a complete surprise. I was not enthusiastic about the proposal, but agreed to call a special meeting of the Executive of the National Guard to consider it. This was held on 8th September. We were prepared to carry on in spite of the ban; we were prepared to make any sacrifice, even the supreme sacrifice, in the interests of the great virile national organisation to which we had solemnly pledged our allegiance and there were no doubts in the minds of our National Executive that our movement would survive coercion, however cruel, and that eventually we would succeed in securing the support of the overwhelming majority of the Irish people.

We considered at the same time that it was a high tribute to an outlawed organisation that Cumann na nGaedheal on the one hand, which had been responsible for Government for 10 years, and which built up the institutions of the State and saved our people from the effects of world depression, and, on the other hand, the Centre Party, which represented our main industry—agriculture—should have shown such confidence in us, and after long and serious discussion we decided to enter the merger, forfeiting nothing of our programme for the safeguarding of the national dignity, the national interests, and the national culture, and bringing with us as our chief contribution to the policy of the united organisations—our corporative policy, which was unanimously accepted, and which is now the chief plank in the policy of Fine Gael (as the new organisation is named) for the rehabilitation of Ireland.

It was agreed that within the new organisation a youth movement should be established under my special direction, but subject to the National Executive of Fine Gael in all matters of constitutional and political policy. The movement was named the "Young Ireland Association," with its own Central Council, Divisional, District, and Unit Committees for the control of its internal affairs.

The Young Ireland Association continued to make splendid progress, and at the many Fine Gael meetings throughout the country the turn-out of Blueshirts was really remarkable. We kept strictly within the law, but without any justification—legal or moral—the Government banned the Young Ireland Association on 8th December. By this time, however, we had got so far and grown so enormously in membership that bans could not impede our work. Yet, though we could have disregarded the ban with impunity, we submitted to the advice of the National Executive of Fine Gael, and again formed a new organisation. Thus emerged the League of Youth as we have it to-day, and I think the work that it has done and the number of advantages which it has brought to the plain people of this country are sufficient testimony to its usefulness, and should form sufficient protection against any misrepresentation or any further ban.

YEAR'S ACHIEVEMENTS.

I do not need to recount the steps which our organisation has taken to reach its present highly satisfactory and flourishing position, for I am speaking to men and women who have as good a knowledge of every step forward and of all the struggles and sacrifices that they entailed as I have myself; but I would say that, looking back upon the past year, there is much of which we can be proud. We have definitely put a stop to terrorism and intimidation. We have definitely established the right of free speech and public assembly. We have proved that resolute and patriotic opinion can always stay excesses; we have opened the eyes of the Irish people to the vast possibilities of our programme, and, please God, continuing as we have begun, we will give our people a new and a freer and a more happy land. To us Blueshirts has fallen the task which our great leader, Collins, left unfinished—the task of establishing beyond year or day the absolute sovereignty of the Irish people over their destinies—the task of utilising that sovereignty to make up to this nation all that it lost during the long night of foreign oppression. The task, above all, of reuniting the severed members of the fair body of Ireland—the task of reconciling bitter political and religious differences. There is only one way of doing this, and that is the League of Youth way. We offer a programme which will ensure for every section of the community for every class and creed a just and adequate say in the ruling of this country. We offer, in the Corporate system, the only programme which is compatible under modern conditions with Christian truths and teaching. We offer the people of Ireland a progressive, modern and just Government, in no way subordinate to any power except that of the people of Ireland themselves and we offer, once again, to our countrymen of all creeds in the North, the dignity and the protection of the name of Irishmen (cheers).

Standing now at the end of a year of very hard and very arduous work, we can, I think, honestly claim to have achieved much. We have made our cause and our emblem respected throughout the twenty-six counties. Here we are known to stand for truth and justice, and beyond the confines of the Free State we are admitted to be the only movement in this country which has a useful and an honourable future before it. Many of our members have suffered victimisation; many of our members have gone behind prison bars; many of our members have suffered serious injuries; some of our members have accepted death itself rather than betray our ideals. That is the spirit that is winning; that is the spirit which, no matter how much odium, no matter how much slander, no matter how much persecution may be heaped upon us, will yet deliver the destiny of our beloved country into our hands (hear, hear).

We are justly proud of the manner in which those members of the organisation who were brought before the Military Tribunal acquitted themselves, and we are particularly proud of the magnificent record of the popular General Secretary of the Blueshirts (Comdt. Cronin) during the year under review. He has set an example in courage and determination which the members should strive to emulate, and the ability which he displayed when on trial has enhanced not only his own prestige, but the prestige of the whole Blueshirt organisation.

I would like also to pay a tribute to Captain McGrath of Tipperary, Captain Hughes of Dublin, and to welcome to liberty Captain Quinlan of Cork, and his comrades. There are many others whose names I would like to mention, but they will take the will for the deed. (Here the delegates rose and gave the Blueshirt salute).

We regret that one of the pioneers of the Blueshirts, Colonel Jerry Ryan, is not with us to-day, and in the name of the Blueshirts of Ireland we will send him and his comrades a message of appreciation of the sacrifice they are making for the movement. They may keep Jerry in goal, but they will never break his spirit (applause).

We are sorry, too, that Sean McNamara of Clare is not here. After a brilliant career in the Volunteers, in the National Army, and in the Blueshirts, it is unfortunate that he should be in his present position. We know that he acted in self-defence when confronted with a formidable and dangerous opposition, and that he acted without premeditation or malice.

LABOUR POLICY.

I believe that our policy will provide the worker with an effective instrument for securing his rights. It will create unity among the workers themselves, and it will create national unity and enable the whole community to progress towards national prosperity in a way utterly impossible under present conditions. Our proposed policy will not be forced on the workers. It will be put before them for their consideration, and if they do not consider it a marked improvement on present conditions of employment then it can be modified as the workers themselves may suggest. Our only anxiety is to help the workers and at the same time to help the country. There will be no change until the workers consider a change is desirable, and they will have many opportunities of giving expression to their views. I believe that before many years the Irish workers will not only accept but demand a change to the Corporate system—not perhaps in the form suggested by us—but in some modified form. I suggest to the workers that the greatest enemy of trade unionism is unemployment. Every unemployed man detracts from the strength of Trade Unionism, and according to recent statistics the number of unemployed is increasing daily. During the week ending 30th July last there was an increase of 1,275, and for the week ending 7th of the present month there is a further increase of 2,227. Then, owing to the conditions existing at present, there is a grave danger of big employers of labour like Guinness transferring their business from this country. It should be unnecessary for me to appeal to the agricultural workers to stand by the only organisation which has put the welfare of our main industry in the forefront of its programme. It is no use in making demands on the farmers for better conditions of service if the farmer is himself unable to make ends meet. If the farmer cannot dispose of his cattle and surplus produce, if the bad fairs and markets are to continue, he will not be in a position to buy a great variety of goods, and his business may be ruined. It is a full-time task that the welfare of the agricultural worker is linked up with the prosperity of agriculture itself (hear, hear). The workers should move cautiously before they burn their boats. They should think for themselves, and should be careful that they are not misled. Our plan proposes to remove the menace of unemployment; it proposes to give the trade unions a position they never occupied since the disappearance of the Guild system. Whatever the platform orators may say, I am convinced that intelligent workmen, whether employed or unemployed, will, when they have studied our proposed policy, realise that it suits their interests best, as it also suits the interests of the country. I realise that the nation's greatest assets are the workers and the small farmers, and while I am leader of this movement I will make their interests my chief concern (hear, hear). I am glad to be able to report that the discipline of our organisation has been maintained at a very high standard. One or two complaints for instance about excessive drinking at dances and after meetings were dealt with by a circular stating that while headquarters have not made it obligatory for members to become rigid teetotallers, we considered it a very grave offence for members wearing blue shirts to be seen in a state of intoxication. Since that circular was issued we have never had another complaint. Yet, in this, and in every act as Blueshirts, I would urge all officers to exhort their members to remember the dignity of our organisation to respect their blue shirts, and to be temperate on all occasions. While they must maintain their authority, officers should not display a hectoring or disagreeable disposition towards their subordinates. They should always remember that our organisation is a voluntary one, and that we cannot expect that strict obedience we would find in an army or police force. My experience is that where an officer qualifies for the respect and confidence of his men by his own good conduct, example, and impartiality, that respect and confidence will be always forthcoming.

On June 22nd last a new Blueshirt Athletic Association was launched to foster, develop, and control all approved forms of outdoor and indoor recreation in the League of Youth. During the present year the Association shall confine its activities to organisation and the holding of friendly competitions, but as the Association develops Blueshirt Club, district, divisional and national championships will be promoted. Considerable progress has been made and reports to hand show that a number of divisions are active in this direction. Too much importance cannot be attached to this phase of our activities, and it will come up for discussion during the Congress. The recent local elections revealed that the present register is grossly defective, and that thousands of our supporters were disfranchised through the omission of their names, while great numbers of our opponents, although not entitled to a vote were registered. So many errors were occasioned by negligence or more probably political malice on the part of the rate collector or others, yet considerable blame must be attached to our own people for their carelessness in not taking proper steps in time to see that all our supporters who were entitled to vote had their names recorded. It is hoped that the members of the League of Youth will see that the next register is considerably better than the present one. This is of the highest importance. If we fail in this, no amount of organisation or propaganda can be effective.

PRESENTATION CONVENT, YOUGHAL.

CENTENARY CELEBRATIONS.

The celebrations in connection with the centenary of the Presentation Convent of the Sacred Heart, Youghal, were ushered in on Sunday night with a series of brilliant illuminations, the Church, the Convent and grounds and the well-known schools being bathed in a blaze of electric and other lights. Towering over all, on the pinnacle of the pretty chapel, was a golden monstrance forming a most edifying and striking spectacle. Across the front of the Convent was a magnificent electric device, in letters and figures 3 feet deep, "1834 Deo Gratias 1934" the illuminated windows of the Institution enhancing the remarkable display. Long before the lights were turned on, crowds of townspeople and visitors collected in the South Abbey and remained in silent admiration for a considerable time. At the start the League of the Cross Brass Band, under the conductorship of Mr. E. Bushe, followed by a large crowd, played through the principal streets and arriving on the scene, entered the grounds and performed a choice programme of sacred airs and hymns. At the conclusion they marched back playing along the route, to their hall. The occasion was an eloquent expression of the people's congratulations to the esteemed Community of the Presentation on their centenary and of their deep gratitude for all that the good nuns have done for the education of the children of the town, and for many other spiritual and temporal benefits of their unselfish and untiring labours—witness the establishment of the famous Youngall's Lido Industry.

The solemn religious functions in connection with the centenary will be held on Thursday, 23rd.

Cattle Seizure at Rathgormack.

SALE AT CLONMEL.

Twenty cows and heifers belonging to Messrs. Norris and Drohan, Rathgormack, farmers, seized for rates about a fortnight ago, were put up for sale at Clonmel Pound on Monday, by Mr. Slattery, Clonmel, for the rate collector, Mr. Quirke, Carrick. Eighty Guards and detectives and several officers were on duty inside and outside the Pound. There was also a large number of farmers and Blueshirts present. The attendance included Messrs. R. Curran, T.D., N. Wall, T.D., Col. T. Carew, Mr. N. Farrell, Stanley Lodge; Mr. Hearne, Chairman, County Waterford farmers; Mr. G. J. Greene, Rathgormack.

At the opening of the sale Mr. Drohan questioned the ownership of some cows offered for sale and Mr. Slattery said that anyone having a claim could make it now. He would proceed with the sale.

It was pointed out that there were very few people in the Pound and those outside who might bid should be let in.

Mr. Slattery—I am sure the Guards will give every facility to them to bid. Only a few more men were let in and a voice cried, "It is only a hole and corner sale."

Mr. Farrell—they held a sale in Cork and there were no buyers.

Mr. Slattery acceded to requests to sell the cattle singly. A young man, with a Northern accent, whose name was given as O'Neill, bid £1 and was declared the buyer. For the second cow 10s. was bid and the bidding went only by shillings till 21s. 1d. was bid by Mr. Walsh, who was declared the buyer. The third cow was bought by O'Neill for 10s. Mr. Walsh bought the fourth for 22s. 6d., Mr. Walsh, marked his purchase with the price and in large letters on the animals' sides, "Dev." He bought the next for 21s., the sixth for 10s. 6d., the next 28s., the next for 21s., the next for 28s. 6d., the next for 15s. 6d. O'Neill bought the next two cows for £1 and 12s., and wrote "Duffy" across their hides. A Mr. Brophy got a cow for 18s., and Mr. O'Neill another for 5s. A Mr. Donoghue paid 10s. for the next and wrote "Broy" across the animal's side. Mr. O'Neill bought the last lot, three heifers, for 50s. Except those secured by O'Neill, all the cattle were bought in for the owners. In Mr. Norris's case the rates due were £10 17s., and the costs and expenses £37 2s. In Mr. Drohan's case the rates due were £15 17s., and the costs and expenses £18 18s. The sale of the 20 cattle realised only £17 3s. 6d.

Subsequently a protest meeting of farmers held at the Main Guard was addressed by Messrs. Curran, T.D., N. Wall, T.D., Mr. Hearne and others. No untoward incident took place.

It was stated that O'Neill offered to sell the cattle he bought at a 5s. margin, but it was not accepted.

MINOR FOOTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

Dungarvan and Touraneena will meet in the semi-final of the Western Divisional Minor Football championship at Whitechurch on Sunday, 26th inst. and the winners of this match will play Cappoquin Blackwater Rovers for the final on Sunday week, the venue for which has not yet been fixed.

Two great games should be witnessed for the semi-final and final, and we shall not be surprised to find the Cappoquin minors making a bold bid for the Divisional Championship this year, as they are playing in great form at present under the able guidance of their enthusiastic "Coach" and Mentor Mr. Paddy Dinan, who will not hear of defeat.

Cattle Seizures

ROADS BLOCKED.

Telephone wires were cut all over the country last Thursday and so thoroughly did the wreckers do their work that at one time Dublin and Cork were almost isolated from the rest of the country.

The broadcast from Athlone radio station was impeded.

It had been arranged for a service to be transmitted from Dublin.

To accomplish part of the scheduled programme items were relayed to the station by a telephone wire via Limerick.

Railway block telephone instruments have been tampered with, and pilot engines were put into service along part of the line where communication was impossible. Services have been slowed down.

A telegraph pole put across the railway between Cork and Youghal this morning temporarily held up the service.

The early goods train from Cork to Youghal was held up at Cove Junction. Mails were picked up by motor lorries. There were several hours late.

Among "silent" places during the day were Mayo, Co. Clare, and Conemara. Wires between Cork and Youghal, Macroom and Fermoy were also down.

There is little doubt that this campaign is waged in sympathy with farmers whose cattle have been seized for non-payment of annuities.

Wreckers were particularly active in the Mullingar area, where a cattle sale was held.

Damage was on a far larger scale than that which followed the sensational shooting affray at Cork earlier in the week.

Heavy trees were felled across the main roads to the town.

The Dublin road from Enfield to Kinnigad, twelve miles from Mullingar, was blocked. Despite this a heavy force of Civic Guards arrived in motor-cars along by-roads.

They came from Kildare, Longford, Cavan, Leitrim, Offaly, and Athlone.

An hour before the sale of eleven seized cattle began the Guards formed a cordon and refused to allow the crowd within 300 yards of the sale enclosure.

A force of 400 Guards were on duty in the town.

The main street was packed with farmers, who had come from five and six miles around to attend the sale. Many of them carried ash sticks.

Between the cars was an empty lorry for the transport of the cattle after the sale, and around each vehicle was a guard of armed policemen. The crowd snarled angrily, but allowed them to pass.

Meanwhile farmers marched along the main street with notice boards asking the shopkeepers to close their premises as a protest.

"We support you, and we expect you to support us," were the words on the posters. Every shop in the main street closed while the sale was in progress.

CALF WRAPPED IN BLUE SHIRT.

The first batch of three cattle was bought by a Mr. Murphy for £4 5s. Three cattle were bought back by the owner, Mr. John Casey, of Clonmoye, Mullingar, for £2 2s. 6d., and five cattle were bought back by another owner for £4 5s.

After the sale, detectives intended to drive the lorry with the cattle along the main street. Parts of the crowd assumed a threatening attitude, and the Guards directed the detectives along another road.

Farmers marched up and down the street carrying on their shoulders a calf wrapped in a blue shirt.

Case of Insane

ANNUAL REPORT.

The annual report of the Inspector of Mental Hospitals for the year 1933 states:—The number of insane persons under care on the 31st December, 1933, in public and private establishments was 20,427. This number does not include insane persons maintained at home by relatives or other guardians, with the exception of such as are under the control of the Chief Justice or are in unlicensed houses and have been notified to the Department in pursuance of Section 37 of the Private Lunatic Asylums (Ireland) Act, 1842.

Of the total number under care on 31st Dec., 1933, 39.3 per cent. were in the District and Auxiliary Mental Hospitals; 4.7 per cent. were in Private Hospitals; or in single care; 5.4 per cent. were in Poor Law Institutions; and 0.6 per cent. in the State Criminal Lunatic Asylum.

During the year 477 cases (190 men and 287 women) or 17.6 per cent. of the total admissions were transferred from Poor Law Institutions (Dublin Workhouse, County Homes, etc.) to District Mental Hospitals. Of these 432 (172 men and 260 women) were first admissions and 45 (18 men and 27 women) were re-admissions.

In exercise of their powers under Section 8 of the Lunatic Asylums (Ireland) Act, 1875, the Committees of Management permitted 316 male patients to be absent on probation during the year. More advantage should be taken of the powers under the section to allow patients to be absent on trial, and every effort should be made to induce relatives or friends to receive such patients as are considered fit for discharge on probation.

The total number of patients discharged in 1933 was 1,295. Of these 972 were discharged recovered. The percentage of recoveries on the admissions was 33.2. The numbers relieved or not improved on discharge totalled 323.

Deaths.—The total number of deaths was 1,001, which is 69 less than occurred in 1932. Of the total number 17 or 1.7 per cent. were returned as due to general paralysis of the insane; 200 or 20.0 per cent. to pulmonary tuberculosis; 36 or 3.6 per cent. to malignant disease and other tumours, except of the brain.

The highest death rate was in Limerick Mental Hospital, where it was 8.3 per cent. of the daily average number resident. The lowest was 4.1 per cent. the rate in Sligo. The general death rate was 5.6 per cent.

Pulmonary tuberculosis (phthisis) was assigned as the cause of 200 deaths.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

KILMAGTHOMAS NEWS.

DEATH OF MR. P. LALY.

Mr. Philip Laly, Garranturton, Kilmagthomas, a fine type of the big-hearted, broad-minded, real Irish son of the Decies, passed away at the Cottage Hospital, Dungarvan, after an illness that everything had been done to relieve. His death, while yet in his early sixties, leaves his native district the poorer by the loss of a model Catholic Gael. In the old days he took a prominent part in the Land League movement in Mid-Waterford, where his sterling principles were recognised and respected, because they admitted of no mean or narrow application in their generous aim for the National welfare. Even when he followed a divergent view from others in latter day politics, he never lost the respect or the friendship of those opposed to him and worth having for their knowledge of the sincerity of his convictions.

PASSING STRANGE.

Of course you know that the "bookies" lay, and the birdies lay, and "The Lay of the Last Minstrel." And so to the latest lay—the lay that lies (in truth) hereunder— Some few moons since, a man whose name is more or less attuned to fame, On shanksmare as a stranger came Right up from Fenor to Portlaw. And sights that on his way he saw Led him to launch a loud guffaw. The moment he arrived within 'Tis Oldie Lost City, near Coolfin; Whose souls received him with a grin, And laughed and winked and wagged their ears, And giggled, coughed, and dropped dry tears. The while they heard (the deafest dears) The stranger tell as best he knew Of what he'd gazed on going through The Sweep, Kilmagden, and Portlaw. "I saw," said he, "a swell sow sup Cocoa out of a china cup. As cute as any cat or pup. And then I spied a woman who Was feeding all her hens on glue (Fine food to make 'em set, sez you!) And later on my peepers met A sight I cannot soon forget— It well-nigh went against my breath— A goose with gaiters on to shield his ankles from the damp concealed in fowlhouse foul and grassy field. Two donkeys in the divils mix I next beheld and felt their kicks Were due to beastly politics. And where the road runs by the Suir A cod upon the waters pure Arose to greet me on my tour. I watched the fish as friendly-wise It waved its tail to glad mine eyes And cheer the truth that in me lies. I also saw an outside snail Shifting its shell across my trail And, well—that's all there's to my tale. So now, fond folks, I fain would see You make an awful fuss of me— With something stronger than plain tea."

BY THE WAY—

The following fragment of conversation was overheard on Bonmahon beach at a minute to midday on Monday.— She—"Would you commit suicide if I refused you?" He—"That has always been my custom."

And your humble scribe was "stikin out" within earshot when the ensuing exchanges occurred on the outskirts of Kilmag at the "witching hour" of ere-last night.— Voice from rear of hackney motor car:— Hey, driver, what's the idea of stopping?" Driver:—"I thought I heard someone telling me to."

Voice:—"Drive on, she wasn't talking to you."

THEY SAY— That seven sturdy Old Borough business men are faithfully following their big toes this week.

That due to a perfect plague of extravagance on her part latterly a Limerick lady with a cork leg, staying in Stradbally, woke up at an unearthly hour last night to find herself in a terribly tight corner.

That in a recently renovated restaurant, situate somewhere in the Barony of Decies Within Drum, a Sligh Gue gentleman to-day complained that the coffee tasted like mud, and was told by the witty waitress it was ground this morning.

That the effects of President Roosevelt's new silver policy were reflected within last week in Tramore, where front room values improved and bed and breakfast bills were generally harder.

cursorion to the seaside. A weekly dance is held during the winter months, and variety entertainments are arranged. Draughts, cards, football and cricket matches are played. A billiard table should be provided for the male convalescent patients. The chaplains are very assiduous in the discharge of their duties.

CAPPOQUIN V. HEARNE'S XI. WATERFORD.

The above match was played in Waterford on 14th inst., and resulted in a decisive victory for Cappoquin who defeated their previous conquerors by the big margin of 7 wickets and 36 runs. Mr. M. J. Sargent played a brilliant game for the visitors, being "not out" for 30, while E. S. Harty, contributed a useful 48, the highest score by Waterford being J. Morrissey, 17. The splendid bowling and fielding of Captain Jameson, E. E. Hey, and J. Lacey for Cappoquin were features of the match, and with only 11 to win in the second innings, Cappoquin scored 46 for three wickets when they declared with the above result.

TALLOW DISTRICT COURT. (Before Mr. G. P. Farrell, D.J.) AD INTERIM TRANSFER. Mr. W. R. Hodnett, solr., Youghal, applied on behalf of Patk. O'Callaghan, West Street, Tallow for an ad interim transfer of the license lately held by his mother, Catherine O'Callaghan, deceased.

Licensing Cases. Mrs. Kate O'Keefe, Conna, was charged with a breach of the Licensing Act and Mal McCarthy, Monaghan, Tim Dennehy, Carrickmore and James Turner, Conna, were charged with being on the premises. Inspector Tobin, Lismore, prosecuted, and Mr. Hodnett, solr., defended.

FATALITY AT BALLYMACARBERRY. Sergt. Heraty, Ballynoe, stated that he visited defendant's premises at 9.35 p.m. on 22nd July, being admitted by the licensee. Seeing four men rushing out the back door from the bar, he followed them and caught two—McCarthy and Dennehy—whom he brought back. Both had measures containing porter or stout in their hands. The licensee said they had represented themselves as travellers. One lived in the village and the other a half mile away.

Mr. Hodnett said the defendant was an old and infirm lady unable to attend Court. He was instructed that owing to the other hunt there was a crowd in the village, there being special buses from Cork and Fermoy, and many of the visitors having got wet exteriorly, proceeded to get wet interiorly (laughter).

The Justice—What do the other defendants say? McCarthy—I went in for a drink after the day. Turner denied that he had been on the premises. Guard McNally stated he saw Turner at the back about 30 feet from the premises. He couldn't swear he had been on the premises. He waved his hand at witness.

Turner, sworn, said he was not on the premises. He waved his hand in a friendly gesture to the Guard (laughter). The case against him was dismissed. McCarthy was fined 1/- and the other man, who didn't appear, 4/-.

Mathew Twomey, Conna, was charged with a like offence and Mce. O'Brien Curraheen, Michael Burns, Knockmounie and John Prendergast, Bridepark, were charged with being on the premises.

Inspector Tobin, prosecuted and Mr. Hodnett, defended. Sergt. Heraty, stated that at 9.30 p.m. on 22nd July, he entered the premises by the hall door which was on the latch. There were three men—those charged—in the kitchen, also the publican. On being questioned the defendant said he didn't mind the time passing, he was very busy all day.

The Justice—Suppose it was before the time would they have been bona fide travellers?—No, sir; they were all from the neighbourhood.

Mr. Hodnett said they pleaded guilty. The defendant paid a big price for the premises two years ago. Since then he had met with a great deal of domestic trouble. It was the first offence. He respectfully asked the Court not to put on records in the cases. The other hunt was largely the cause.

The Justice—That wouldn't make local people more thirsty (laughter). The Justice said a record wasn't a voluntary matter as the law required a record in every conviction. His trouble was to find circumstances making the offences trivial.

Mr. Hodnett said there was a sort of analogy between the pattern at Ardmore and the other hunt at Conna. The Justice said there was an Exemption Order granted for the pattern. Replying to the Court, the men found on the premises admitted that they went in for and got a drink. They were each fined 2/6.

The Justice said the cases against the publicans would be adjourned so that Mr. Hodnett could produce the defendants, who might give some evidence enabling him to find—as he would be glad to—that the offences were trivial.

Larceny Cases. Thomas Crotty, Crossary, was charged with the larceny of a piece of larch, the property of Mrs. Lloyd, Stranally Castle. Inspector Tobin, prosecuted. Sergt. Corby, Killeenagh, stated that while on other business he found the timber at defendant's house. He said he had found it on the roadside near the wood belonging to Mrs. Lloyd. It was the upper portion of a larch tree about 12 feet long.

Evidence was given by the caretaker that nobody had permission to take the timber. It was worth about 11/-. Defendant said he was putting the goods to graze in the wood when he saw the piece of larch and he brought it home for the fire. There was no notice about trespassing.

Letting defendant off with a caution, the Justice said he would have to give up the practice of taking trees from the wood.

A CAPPOQUIN STREET. (To the Editor "Observer".) Aylesford, Near Maidstone, Kent, 20th Aug., 1934. Sir,—While perusing the issue of the "Observer" for the 11th inst., I was pained to perceive that your correspondent for Cappoquin refers to Allen Street as "Barrack Street."

Surely he is aware of the fact that Barrack Street was re-named Allen Street, some fifty or sixty years ago by the late lamented Mr. William Jones Troy, who, if my memory serves me right, lived a long life of celibate happiness at No. 31 in the street referred to.

I fear that when your correspondent made this unforgettable slip he was up the identical pole whose mysterious disappearance he so eloquently describes and pathetically deplores. Yours faithfully—E. PATCHELL.

THE TAIL THAT TALKS AN INDEX TO THE FEELINGS.

By "PHILOKON."

NO PART of the canine anatomy is as eloquent as the tail, which is an index to a dog's feelings.

If the tail is quiescent, do not touch the dog. He tells you plainly either that he does not wish to have anything to do with you...

The tail is not only useful as the means of an introduction. What a lot your own particular friend says to you every day of his life by the aid of this particular appendage.

Have you ever sat by the side of an old friend as his end approached? The last word of good-bye from him is a feeble movement of the tail...

He knew his lord; he knew and strove to meet; In vain he strove to crawl, and kiss his feet.

Yet (all he could) his tail, his ears, his eyes.

Salute his master, and confess his joys.

The tail also denotes racial character. A ring stern, an abomination in one breed, is desired in another.

AMBITION

(By Thomas Murphy, Dungarvan).

As we pass along life's highway we all have met the man Who has tried all sorts of dodges and thought out every plan To get along, he's done his best good fortune to achieve, No matter what the odds are, to persistence he will cleave.

He still pursues the rugged way, Ambition spurs him on; If he succeeds they call him smart, if not he's worse than wrong! But many useful things he learns as he goes plodding on, Even should he lose or should he gain what his heart's set upon.

To have a goal to fight for is the only thing worth while, Like a great and conquering hero it takes you many a mile; It gives you much to live for, to strive and dare and do— You feel the joy of pushing hard, it builds up life anew.

"The more one gets the more one wants," is very often said, And such things as are easy got have off to trouble led, Yet honest toil brings honest gain when purpose has a grip, For such a man will never let good useful chances slip.

The man without ambition is sure met every day, He'll tell you that he's happy to jog along and play, He cares not how the world wags he doesn't give a jot, But if he only knew the truth he's losing quite a lot.

There's nothing got for nothing, for all things you must pay, And when you choose the things that count no man can say nay; So take the road that's honest, the road wise men have trod, And every good fight fairly won will bring you nearer God.

Recent Cork Shooting

DIVIDED VIEWS AT YOUGHAL COUNCIL.

At Youghal Urban Council, Mr. P. J. O'Gorman, P.C. (Chairman) presiding. Mr. MacNamara proposed the following resolution: "That we condemn in the strongest possible manner the shooting of a number of unarmed men in Cork on the 13th inst., by those who are supposed to be the protectors of life and property, and that we extend our deepest sympathy to the relatives of Michael Patrick Lynch, who was killed on the occasion. We also call for the strictest investigation of the occurrence by the authorities and that we decide to adjourn this meeting of our Council as a token of respect for the memory of the deceased." As they were all cognizant of the facts, there was no need for him to add anything to the resolution.

Mr. Condon, seconding, said what happened was a disgrace to civilisation, but they could not expect better from untrained men. They were a disgrace to the force they were attached to.

LAW MUST BE MAINTAINED.

Mr. Savage said while he deplored the taking of an Irish life by a brother Irishman, at the same time the law must be maintained. He and those with him belonging to Fianna Fail looked upon their President as one of the greatest sons of Ireland since O'Neill.

Mr. Power—Hear, hear. Mr. Savage—And if this resolution meant any castigation of Mr. de Valera and the Government, take me as dissenting.

Mr. Power said the Chairman gave them to understand at their first meeting that he would keep politics out, but that was entirely politics.

The Chairman said there was no mention of politics, and he asked Mr. Power to confine himself to the resolution before them.

Mr. Power said on behalf of Fianna Fail he sympathised with the relatives of that boy, but they would not take a beating lying down, nor would they allow the Government elected by the people three times to be attacked without defending it.

Mr. Daly said it was sad to see a brother Irishman shot down. He himself was shot down in 1922. As the matter was sub judice they could not discuss it. He proposed they carry on the business as usual. The men condemned were merely doing their duty under the orders of their Superintendent. There was too much of a political tinge about the proposition.

Mr. Beausang, seconded. It was hard to see anyone shot down, but the law must be maintained.

Mr. McCarthy supported the proposition. It was inconceivable that such a terrible happening should occur in a civilised country, and the sympathy of every fair-minded man would go forth to the relatives of the boy killed. A lot of people were talking and shouting about De Valera, but where were they in the Black and Tan days.

Mr. Savage here jumped to his feet and made some heated remark, to which Mr. McCarthy retorted about a "British pension."

The Chairman succeeded in restoring order, when Messrs. Power and Condon created another noisy scene. Mr. Condon asked Mr. Power what was his record as a nationalist, to which he warmly replied concerning a pension, and

Mr. Condon retorted he didn't get it for being under the bed.

The Chairman, after repeated appeals to all parties, again calmed things down, and he appealed to the Fianna Fail members to allow the resolution pass unanimously. Would they divide the Board on a vote of sympathy? The cause of a lot of their internal trouble in Ireland could be attributed to the fact that they were so given to looking back to the past. They should let the dead past bury its dead, make the best of the present, and look forward to the future and work, but there was little to hope for if they didn't all work together for the good of their common country.

Messrs. Savage, Daly and Power, said they could not agree to the passage of that proposition in view of the wording of the opening paragraph. Mr. Daly adding that resolutions of that kind occurring frequently would seriously obstruct the business they were elected to transact.

The Chairman said there was nothing urgent or important before them.

After a further protracted and heated discussion, the question was put to a vote, with the following result:— For the adjournment—Messrs. Farrell, MacNamara, Smyth, Keane, Watson, McCarthy, Broderick, Cashman, Ahern, Condon and the Chairman.—44.

Against—Messrs. Savage, O'Sullivan, Power, Beausang, and Daly.—5. The meeting then adjourned.

Agricultural Conditions

ON 1st AUGUST, 1924.

Weather and Work.—During the first fortnight of July dry and warm weather, with high temperatures, was general. In the third week showery conditions prevailed over parts of the country while intermittent rain and wet days were experienced later. The total rainfall was not sufficient to counteract the parching effects of the dry spring and early summer, so that the crops, particularly turnips, as well as meadows and pasture, showed the effects of the drought. Conditions, however, favoured haymaking, which was carried out with the minimum of time and labour. Other seasonal operations were well forward, and the harvesting of oats had commenced in a number of districts towards the end of the month. Progress had also been made with the carting in of hay and of turf. The pulling of flax began about 20th July. Streams and springs had reached a low level, and the maintenance of a supply of water for stock made demands on farmers' time in several areas.

Pastures and Live Stock.—Upland pastures and light land suffered severely from the continued dry weather, and the herbage available for stock on much of this land was of rather poor quality. The moisture and milder days in the latter half of July, however, had a freshening effect on pastures generally. Live stock were maintained in good health, and in fair condition despite annoyance from flies and, not infrequently, the comparative scarcity of clean drinking water. These factors also had an adverse effect on milk yields, though reports indicated an increase in the number of cows kept. Except in a few areas, pastures carried a normal stock of cattle and sheep; but some districts, usually dependent upon the dairying centres for supplies of young calves, obtained these less freely.

Hay.—Practically all the rotation hay and most of the old meadow had been cut and saved under the most favourable conditions, and a substantial proportion had been secured in the haggards. The returns from many of the first-crop fields and old meadows on the better-class land compared favourably with a normal season. The dry weather and also perhaps earlier cutting had its influence on the yields of all classes particularly old upland meadow, and the bulk of hay was below average. The quality of the hay generally was however excellent.

Cereals.—The corn crops looked well during the month and were all ripening earlier than usual. The straw of oats and barley was short but carried fair heads. With normal harvesting conditions yields of grain promised to be of good quality. Straw appeared to be brittle and less resistant to lodging and the broken weather at the end of July had unfavourable results in this respect.

Winter wheat was everywhere strong and very promising. Harvesting of some of the autumn-sown crops had commenced. Spring wheat was also showing up well, but many fields were patchy as the result of the dry weather.

Barley in some areas was not ripening quite as evenly as usual, and lodging had taken place in a number of the crops. The straw was short, and a yield of grain somewhat below that of last year was indicated which, however, should be more than made up by the increased acreage.

Where not already too advanced crops of oats benefited from the rain at the end of July, which assisted the development of the grain. While a fair head was carried, the straw was often short and not infrequently lodged; and over a considerable area there were indications that the yields would be below those of last season. Harvesting operations had commenced in many districts.

Balances of oats from last year in merchants stores and on farmers' hands were almost negligible.

Flax.—In the flax growing areas of the Saorstad the ripening of the crop had been quicker than usual, and pulling started in the third week of July. The fields harvested gave a good bulk, with indications of an average yield of fibre. Some lodging occurred in the heavier crops.

Sugar Beet, Mangels and Turnips.—All the root crops were in need of the rain which fell in the latter half of the month, as the dry spell was having an adverse effect even on beet mangels.

Weather conditions favoured the cleaning of the sugar beet crops, the great majority of which presented an excellent appearance and gave promise of average yields. To a limited extent only were uneven or patchy crops noticed, and, so far, little "bolting" had been reported.

Mangels suffered somewhat more from the drought, which left a number of backward and patchy fields, but the season was by no means unfavourable to the crop where sown in time.

Turnips, where sown early, withstood the dry period and were well forward. Later, and second, sowings only partially survived the continued lack of soil moisture, and the prospects were unsatisfactory. Subsequent sowings were done late in the season and made but little growth until the end of the month when thinning was in progress. The prospects of a fair yield from these sowings will depend upon growing conditions during the remainder of the season.

Potatoes.—Digging of early potatoes had been completed in most districts, and a proportion of the second earlies had also been lifted. Tubers from the earlier varieties were undersized as a result of the dry soil conditions, and yields were often much short of average. Second earlies were also returning less than average, but crops remaining were improved by the rain in the later part of the month. Prices realised for these crops ranged from 24 to 25 per ton.

Maincrops everywhere were healthy but by the middle of July the foliage was showing the effects of the drought and indicated that yields might not equal those of last year. The changed weather conditions towards the end of the month were more favourable to the development of the crop.

Spraying was generally carried out, in many districts two or three times, but in a few areas was not repeated owing to the dry state of the foliage.

Except in a few isolated places, the potato crop has so far this season enjoyed freedom from blight.

Cattle.—Cattle stocks continued generally in good health, though the excessive heat for a period and trouble with flies, occasionally rendered it difficult to maintain condition.

At provincial fairs held during the month stock met a slow trade at values showing an easier tendency, and a proportion failed to clear. The number of fat cattle on offer was sufficient for the demand, which was mainly local, but without any improvement in prices. The inquiry for good class cows and springers was maintained at recent rates, with other classes less in demand.

The following quotations may be regarded as representing the average range of prices realised at provincial fairs during the month for the various kinds of stock mentioned:— Calves under one month 10s. to 21 7s.; Calves 1 to 9 months 21 12s. 6d. to 29 5s.; First-class Stores, 9 to 12 months 23 to 24; First-class Stores, 12 to 15 months 24 to 25 7s. 6d.; First-class Stores, 15 months to 2 years 25 10s. to 27; First-class Stores 2 to 3 years 27 to 29 5s.; First-class Stores, 3 years and over 28 10s. to 240; Fat Bulls and Heifers 23 10s. to 212; Best Fat Cows 26 to 28; Choice Springing Cows and Heifers 210 to 213; Freshly Calved Cows 29 to 212.

Sheep.—Flocks were maintained in good health and condition despite a troublesome period with "maggots" during the very warm weather. For the wool clip, which represented average weights of fleeces, prices ranged from 5d. to 9d. per lb. for washed wool, according to breed and quality, with occasionally higher values. The demand for sheep and lambs continued steady during the month. Top prices for fat sheep varied from 40s. to 45s. and for lambs 25s. to 28s. each on the average.

Pigs.—The number of bacon pigs on offer at the various marketing centres in Saorstad Eireann during July showed an increase over the previous month. The prices for pigs suitable for the bacon curing industry remained fairly steady throughout the month giving an average of from 56s. 6d. to 59s. 6d. per cwt. dead weight; for bacon pigs or approximately 42s. 6d. to 45s. 0d. on the live weight basis. Trade for porkers was of limited dimensions only. Bonhams were in good supply at all centres and met with a steady demand at prices ranging up to 25s. each, though the seasonal shortage of the cheaper feeding stuffs occasionally acted as a check on purchasers. The increases already noted in the numbers of breeding stock were maintained.

Horses.—The trade in horses was comparatively quiet with little demand except for mares draught animals suited to city traffic, and those sold freely up to 23s. each. Young horses of this type returned from 212 to 220. Good farm workers realised 215 to 225, and older ones 28 to 242. Sales of the better class made hunters were recorded at figures ranging up to 2400; but values for secondary sorts were on a much lower level. Good young horses suitable for making hunters were purchased at 225 to 245. Troopers could usually be cashed with little difficulty at from 220 to 227 or occasionally 235 each. Values for useful vanners were around 230.

Milk.—In the earlier part of July the excessive heat and drought had a depressing effect on milk yields and on the supplies to creameries, with, however, some recovery owing to milder conditions. Milk delivered to creameries in June realised 3.7d. per gallon, separated milk being returned to the producers. Milk collected in counties adjacent to Dublin during July for retail sale in Dublin returned 5d. to 6d. and occasionally 7d. per gallon.

ECONOMICS OF DAIRYING.

In a recent survey of milk production in the South-East of England, Mr. James Wylie makes several important points with regard to dairying economy. For instance, he has a firm belief in the value of roots, especially mangolds; for milk cows (in opposition to some lately expressed opinions) and holds that if mangolds can be grown at a cost of 12s. per ton they form one of the cheapest as well as one of the best winter foods. Again, the production of high quality grass and hay is of the first importance both in economy of feeding and in milk yield.

It is quite as important to reduce feeding costs as to increase milk yield and the economic balance which gets the best results in the latter from the lowest cost of the former is a point which is only attained by experience.

Again, the most economic size for the herd for milk production has often been debated. Mr. Wylie says that if the cows are to be fed mainly on purchased cakes and meals a small herd of heavy milkers may be more economical than a large herd of moderate milkers. But if the chief foods are to be grass, hay, and roots a large herd of moderate milkers may yield better net results.

The question of labour costs is also an important one and on the average family farm financial difficulty often begins when extra labour has to be brought in and paid for. The keeping of reliable records of milk production and feeding costs is essential in order to obtain the accurate figure to be placed opposite the value of the milk yield. Of course, the farmer, even the smallest—has to be something of a bookkeeper nowadays, in order to keep going, but undoubtedly a closer system, especially in connection with dairy farming, would help him materially.

WIRES CUT.

WATERFORD-MALLOW TRAIN DELAYED.

For the second time in a few days the train service on the Waterford-Cork system of the G.S.R. has been dislocated, owing to a further deliberate attempt on the part of some person or persons to impede its progress by cutting off communication between stations in the western end of this county.

The train affected was the same as that which was delayed on Saturday, viz. the 7.30 a.m., ex-Mallow, which takes on passengers in addition at Dungarvan station. Instead of reaching Waterford at 9.10 or thereabouts, it did not arrive at its destination until 1 p.m.—three and a half hours later.

Fortunately none of the other trains on the line was appreciably affected, the Rossare express being enabled to make the through journey to Cork following the establishment of pilot working.
