Murphy, who declared that the cattle belonged to him and not to Moore. The animals would not attempt to keep his cattle. He is anything and everything. He is a farmer and a contractor. From the way he is working he is not making an effort to keep the catle on to Mr. Moore's land.

In the second seizure, eight cattle were taken from the land of Mary B. O'Brien, Carrigeen, in respect of annuity arrears of £10 12s. 6d. They were being driven to Carroll's Cross, respass as the cattle got around when he tide is out. Defendant says he did the fencing he could.

The early train from Mallow to Waterford was held up and in place of reaching Dungar-van after 7 p.m. did not come until 10 a.m. Telephone wires were also cut on the Waterford and Dungarvan section. The main road from Waterford to Dungarvan was blocked at Cloncoscraine where two big trees were felled across the highway and traffic had to detour by way of the Strad-

CASTING VOTE DECIDES. APPOINTMENTS AT MENTAL HOSPITAL MEETING.

The casting vote of the Chairman (Very Rev. Canon Walsh, P.P., Tra-more) was the deciding factor in both more) was the deciding factor in both instances when two appointments were made at the monthly meeting of the Mental Hospital Committee of Management on Monday. For the position of stocktaker there were seven applicants, but the issue eventually lay between Messrs. P. Walsh and M. J. Quinlan, each of whom received four votes. The Chairman gave his extra vote in favour of Mr. Quinlan, who was accordingly declared elected. The second appointment was that of a legal adviser in room of the late Mr. A. McCoy, and for this there were two applicants—Messrs. P. J. O'Connor, Junr., solr., Waterford, and Mr. Kiersey, solr., Kilmacthomas. Each legal gentleman again received four votes, and the Chairman gave his casting vote in favour of Mr. Kiersey, who was appointed.

Two men were trapped in a blazing aeroplane and burned to death in the front garden of Judge Meredith's home in Dublin on Monday. A third was seriously injured. The dead men are Lieutenant Arthur Russell and Private Twomey, of the Free State

The aeroplane was piloted by Lieut. Russell, a brother of Colonel Russell, who is to fly the Irish Sweepstakes 'plane in the Melbourne Race, Lieut. EAST WATERFORD PARISH (KILMACTHOMAS) IN A GAELIC NOVEL.

Those who read Irish, and who have lived for any length of time in the united parishes of Kilmacthomas, united parishes of Kilmacthomas, Newtown and Kill, will easily recognise these districts in "Bun An Da Abhann," an original Irish story by Sean O'Ciarsaigh (O'Kiersey), a native of Kilmacthomas, who has been known for over 30 years as one of the most gifted and prolific writers of Irish under various pen-names, and as a propagandist in English in the local and metropolitan Press for the ideals and metropolitan Press for the ideals of the Gaelic League.
"Bun An Da Abhann" is a story of

"Bun An Da Abhann" is a story of the daily lives and domestic amenities, old-time Gaelic piety and reverence for God's Church and her ministers; the joys and sorrows, evictions and other hardships, sympathy and self-sacrifice, sport and love of a group of families in Newtown. Kilmacthomas and the adjoining districts fifty years ago. From the opening chapters, describing Sunday Mass at Newtown Church, the newly ordained priest who celebrated the Mass, and the people's reverence for him and their own priests; the after Mass Land League meeting, and to the end of the 374 pages of the book the reader is gripped by its beauty and pathos, its Irish "pure undefiled" of "Dathaigh Paoraig," and its moving descriptions of types of the splendid Gaelic and Catholic men and women whose like will never again be seen in the parishes of "Bun An Da Abhann." Those who came after them threw away the pearl of great price, the crown of many pewels, and their hands have grasped at the empty air!

The book is published at 5. Nassau Street, Dublin, and costs only 3/-Suirside.

An exciting scene was witnessed about half a mile from Carroll's Cross Station, on Saturday morning, when over fifty farmers attempted to rescue a number of cattle which had been seized shortly before on lands at Castlecraddock and Kill for non-payment of land annuities.

The cattle were the property of Mr. Maurice Dunphy, a well-known farmer, whose lands were visited by Messrs. English and O'Neill, assistants to the County Registrar, at an early hour on Saturday, and 20 cattle

Escorted by a very large force of Civic Guards—over one hundred—in charge of Supt. Dennehy, Tramore, the animals were being driven to Carroll's Cross for entrainment to Dungaryan when the attempt at rescue was made.

It is stated that over fifty farmers from the surrounding districts followed the party with the seized animals and within half a mile of the station a herd of cattle were driven determinedly against the police with the object of breaking through the ranks and sweeping the seized animals with them. Following a similar experience on a former occasion, however, the Guards were prepared for these tactics and a number of motor cars were hurriedly driven into the place, effectively

MR DILLON, T.D., ON THE PRESENT SITUATION.

Speaking at Mitchelstown last week Mr. Dillon, T.D., said:—Fifty years ago the words "Remember Mitchelstown" became the triumphant rallying call of the Land War. They drew the men and women of that day closer together than they had ever heen before to face the common enemy who threatened their means of livelihood and their right to their homesteads. An exactly similar threat confronts our exactly similar threat confronts our people to-day. Every expedient enployed by the traditional enemies of our people to destroy the national movement in this country has been in-voked by Fianna Fail to destroy Fine Gael during the last two years. They tried to ban, as Buckshot Forster tried to ban the National League of '81 and they failed (cheers). They tried to prove the existence of plots to overthey failed (cheers). They tried to prove the existence of plots to overthrow the Government by force, and they failed. They tried to pass Coercion Acts wherewith to smash us, and to the extreme credit of the Senate, they failed to get the powers that they wanted in order to proscribe the colour of the shirts which men and women in this country might wear (cheers). And when all the time-honoured expedients had failed, they fell back on the last and most contemptible of all—they set their satellites to start a rumour that there was a split within Fine Gael. It is the old policy of "Divide and conquer." Here in Mitchelstown to-day, I am proud to tell them that they have failed again. Shoulder to shoulder the men and women of Fine Gael, including the League of Youth, are closer together and more united than ever to-day in the shadow of John Mandeville's statue on the ground where Casey Lonergan and Shinnock fell, to pay tribute to their memory and to that of Michael Lynch, who fell in defence of the rights of the small farmers of this country, and to pledge themselves to go forward under the leadership of General O'Duffy to the realisation of their ideal, a united Ireland in the Commonwealth of Nations, with fixty of title and tenure for the people on the land and a Government pledged to provide a decent livelihood and an open market for every citizen of the State, and equal justice for all, whatever his politics, and be he rich or poor (cheers)."

der that law, as well as discharging our duties. It is not in accordance with the law to seize cattle from destitute farmers and sell them behind closed doors (cheers). The taw provides that Sheriff's sales must be public sales, open to everybody, and if they are not open, then the Sheriff who holds them behind closed doors is liable to the owner of the cattle for damages, and should be sued by the owner and made to pay. It is contrary to the most fundamental principles of natural justice that any man should be stripped of these things necessary to preserve his family from collection of the annuities until the economic war is ended. To use the law must follow, and from that state of affairs to anarchy is a short journey. For fifty years the purchasting tenants have paid their annuities regularly, they never repudiated their liability, they never went back on their bargain. But to-day they are deprived of the markets where they can dispose of their produce, and de Valera and Senator Connolly thank God that that market is gone. The Government must make up its mind to have one thing or the other. If it wants to destroy our markets, in accordance with Senator Connolly's pronouncement, it cannot expect us to pay our annuities. If it will recover, our markets there will be no need fer bailiffs or emergency men. The farmers of this country will pay their way, as they always did, and not one in a thousand of them will wish to repudiate the bargain which their fathers and grand-fathers made when they bought out their holdings on the annuity plan (cheers).

RETREAT IN DUNGARVAN.

On Sunday the week's Retreat conducted by the Rev. Fathers Collier and Corr, of the Redemptorist for the women of Dungarvan Parish closed. It had been attended by enormous numbers and at the morning and the evening sermons the spacious Church was thronged to overflowing and the eloquent sermons and discourses of the Preachers were listened to with the keenest attention. The closing ceremonies on Sunday evening, at 3 p.m. were most inspiring. Father Square. Collier preached a powerful sermon on the occasion.

On Sunday evening the men's retreat opened before a record congregation, and each morning and evening during the week the attendance has been the largest ever seen here. Elequent and forceful sermons ou matters of vital importance to the soul's salvation as well as to temporal affairs are being preached. The confessionals are thronged daily with penitents, while the numbers who approach the altar each morning are most edifying. The Retreat will close on Sunday evening

The fortnight's Retreat has been a credit to the piety and fervent Catholic spirit of the people of the Parish and Movins, of Harvard University, U.S.A. Mr. Goddard, do., and Mr. F. T. Riley. The work is being done at the same spot as that at which the wonderful archaeological discoveries were made a few years ago. From 10 to 15 workmen are engaged and quite a lot of useful work is being done in preparing for the big excavational scheme which is expected to lead to big discoveries of the early inhabitants of these parts.

The Excavating party have their headquarters at the Devonshire Arms, Dungarvan. Prof. McAllister of the National Museum, has also paid a visit recently to Dungarvan.

At the Lismore Gaelic Field on Sunday last, Stradbally and Dungaryan met in the re-plap for senior football honours (Western Division). As will be remembered the teams had to meet three times last year before Dungarvan came out on top. Their first meeting this year some six weeks ago at Dungarvan proved another draw and Following a month of the most miserable harvest weather which came for many a year and which has involved our farmers in serious loss coupled with an extraordinary amount of hard work, we are now being treated to a Michaelmas summer. The continuous heavy rain of the past month has done serious injury. It is extraordinary and this year some six weeks ago at Dungarvan proved another draw and the teams tdavelled to Lismore on Sunday last. The result was a hard fought game in which both sides secured four points, leaving the issue still undecided. The replay is fixed for Lismore on Sunday October 7th.

THIS YEAR'S TRIALS.

By "PHILOKUON."

THE climax of this year's sheepdog trials will be reached on the last three shepherds signified their desire to take part, and important developments followed. National competitions leading up to the International came into vogue. The three countries now have their Nationals and the best twelve does at each are sent forward to the conduct of the accused men, and such reference should not be made so long as the matter is subjudice."

As to the statement that a discussion in the Senate was not desirable, that, pointed out the Chairman, was up to the International came into vogue. The three countries now have their Nationals and the best twelve dogs at each are sent forward to the International. Heretofore, Scottish dogs had predominated, perhaps a dozen or so, supplemented by two or three from England. With 36 competitors in the singles and various He hoped that the fact that the unnetitors in the singles and various other events added, the duration of the International meeting had of necessary to be extended to three days. Another important change was the separation into different classes of farmers and shepherds, and the publication of a stud book helped to complete the good work that is being carried on.

Trials of this description would be of little value if they failed to raise the general efficiency of working sheep-dogs. One of the surest ways to co this is to encourage farmers and shep-herds to breed from the brainest. A stud book serves as a guide to breeders who are enterprising enough to make an intelligent use of its contents. In another direction, the Society is to be commended for its public service. As is well-known, local trials are heid in most districts in the course of the summer, some of which are of an ele-mentary character. Desiring to strengthen these local efforts and en-sure that only the cream shall appear at the Nationals, the Society rules that only dogs can run at these trials that have previously earned prize-winning qualifications at local trials.

At the International, the process of elimination is carried a stage further. Three judges—one from each country—put the dogs through preliminary tests on the first two days, and the twelve making the highest points irrespective of nationality, are reserved for the final trial on the third day. We may take for granted that the survivors are something exceptional, and spectators who are at Cardiff on Saturday of next week will have many thrills before the supreme award is made.

MOTION IN THE SENATE OTHER DAYS RECALLED.

When a motion came up in the Senate last week condemning the action of the special Branch of the Garda in connection with the recent Cork shooting, Senator Connolly, Minister for Lands, said as the matter was subjudice, he didn't think it should be dislussed and with the other Fianna Fail Senators left the meeting.

The Chairman (Mr. T. Westropp Bennett) said he regretted very much the decision of the Government Party to withdraw from the House while that important matter is under discussion. As their withdrawal might he held to be in some sense a reflection on his ruling that the motion was in trials will be reached on the last three days of next week by the holding of the International meeting at Cardiff. The three National trials have already been completed, the last that for England having taken place at Ilkley a week ago. South Wales is looking forward eagerly to the event. Not only is sheep-breeding carried on extensively in the Principality, but the Welsh are also a sporting race, who appreciate clever work by dogs. The excitement is further intensified by the knowledge that last year the championship shield for singles was won by Chip, owned by Mr. George Whitby Chip, owned by Mr. George Whiting of Aberdare, this making a second victory for Wales against the six of England and four of Scotland since the second was in-"It is not desirable that any discus-England and four of Scotland since 1922, when the team system was instituted. The "doubles," which began in 1929, show three victories for Scotland, two for England and none for Wales. Will a Welsh dog be good enought to repeat last year's triumph in the singles?

Although the International Sheep-dog Society was founded at Haddington in 1906, it was not until post-war years that it attained its fullest usefulness. In 1921 Welsh farmers and shepherds signified their desire to take

> He hoped that the fact that the unhappy affair was described as a "riot" would not prejudice the trial of the men who had been charged. The word "riot" had a definite legal conword "riot" had a definite legal con-notation, and one of the facts which position very materially in the coun-riot on the occasion in question. He found that there was ample precedent for ruling in order a discussion at great length in the House of Com-mons, even though the Chief Secre-tary announced that a Commission of Inquiry had been set up. During the Colliery Riots of September, 1893, a members of the administration. There miner at Castleford was shot dead by the soldiers, and the matter was discussed in the House of Commons. It seems worth noting that those riots was no doubt that there were many tenants able to pay in the eighties who did not do so. The campaigners did not take the trouble to dispute it. He provided the background for what supposed to-day there were some who Professor Dicey has written in his could meet their annuities who were 'Law of the Constitution' on the duty of soldiers called upon to disperse an unlawful assembly. It was there that the common law on the subject is authoratively laid down. Other House of broadly at the situation, the condi-commons precedents which could be given were the attack by the R.I.C. on existing then. He had yet to hear of a the people of Ennis, which was discussed in 1888, on the motion of Mr. Parnell, and similar attacks at Cashel and Tipperary in 1890, the discussion on which was initiated by Mr. John Dillon. But the outstanding example was the famous Mitchelstown case. On the 9th September, 1887, the Constabulary fired on civilians at Mitchelstown with fatal results. In spite of the fact that a coroner's inquest was pending and possibly, as Sir William Harcourt said, a higher and more serious tribunal, the discussion on the action of the police occupied the whole day, and it was long after midnight, when Parnell rose to speak, it was clear on all the authorities that the motion was in order. It purported to condemn the action of the police, and not the action of the men who were about to be tried. So far as he was concerned he would do his best to ensure that nothing was said during the debate which might conceivably prejudice the fair trial of these men. A public tumult or affray was a mat-ter of the gravest public importance, and the Oireachtas was the proper forum in which to discuss it.

Mr. Wilson, moving his motion, narrated the incidents that took place in Cork on the date in question, and said the order to fire was not given by the superior officer but was taken on the men's own initiative. He knew no part of common law which permitted any man to fire on another except in defence of his life, and the action of the special constables was repre-hensible, and he was asking that they be brought to justice. He further asked in the motion that no Guard who had not been adequately trained should be allowed to carry firearms. He believed that it was due to inadquate training that the incident took place. In regard to the second part of the motion, he said there was a state of unrest among the farmers. That the Sheriff's work was increasing was a very ominous sign. Farmers did not agree with the Government's point of view that it was political conspiracy that was at the bottom of this, but rather that it was an economic necessity. The cure was not in repression by the use of a seconomic necessity.

They should not misunderstand him in gesting that the Ministers acted with what was known in criminal law as malice propense. It had to be borne in mind that more injury in this world was done by want of thought than by want of heart, and he only wanted to recall these to the Minister s not as a politician. If the Government

That was a fact which farm—large or small—in the Free State where the principal source of revenue was other than cattle. They were told over and over again before they got into power by the present Ministers that the farmers were bank-rupt. Had their regime given them a chance to retrieve their position. He thought that all would have to admit that it had not. What then was the prospect before the country?

Might he digress a little and tell them the tragedy of the Glenbeigh es-tate. Either through conspiracy or inability to meet the landlord's demands in the late eighties no rent was paid by the occupiers. The alien Government of the day proceeded to carry out the law with the same determination the law with the same determination that they now experienced. The English Navy sailed proudly into Dingle Bay, horse artillery, field artillery and a strong force of infantry, supplemented by a great number of the Royal Irish Constabulary advanced by land on the doomed district. Not alone did they dispossess the tenants at a cost far exceeding the value of the fee simple of the property but they have simple of the property, but they burned down every farmstead and every cowshed in the vicinity. One of the tenants told him his story. For fifteen years I lived as best I could on the road side. My father and mother died in one of the hovels called Land League huts that were erected there. I was fifteen times in jail, because my allowance from the war-chest was doubled if I was under arrest. If money then was wanted very urgently by my family I had only to trespass on our farm and they got an increase of pay. The alien Government went further. It set up Divisional Commissioners, with practically unlimited powers over Munster. We disrespect-fully christened them "Pashas." "I wonder" said' the Senator "will the bresent Government, too, copy this ex-

"I speak," said the Senator, "with the full sense of the gravity of the out-look, and I do not want to say one word to embitter the situation, but I only 80 per cent. of the land annuities had been collected up to August 24, and for those due on June 30 last only 50 per cent. had been collected. By reason of the Guarantee Fund the retepayers would have to foot the deficiency that would come about. The farmers would pay their way if they were able to do so. It was not to make political capital out of it that he was taking that attitude that day. Last year the British collected from the farmers £4,500,000, while the Free State collected on foot of half the land annuities £2,00,000, making a total of £6,500,000. Out of that they were allowed in bounties £1,750,000, making a net payment of £4,750,000, making a net payment of £4,750,000 which was £750,000 in excess of the old annuities while the price of agricultural produce was 20 per cent. below prowar.

My. Grosbie said he regretted that the Government Party had left the Ghamber. He wondered if there was one in the House who did not look to the future with forehoding. He was considered to be a bit of an optimist, but he confessed the prospects rather Chamber. He wondered if there was one in the House who did not look to the future with forehoding. SHOTS FIRED: 40 ARRESTED.

On Tuesday the Co. Registrar's assistants visited the farm of Mr. John McCarthy, Ballyshoniken, Effin, in connection with the land annuities collection, found no cattle, but seized a horse and car on the road a couple of hundred yards from Mr. McCarthy's.

The Registrar's assistants and the Civic Guards were accosted by a number of people, two of them on horse-

The latter rode round the horse and car, keeping everyone at a distance; and after a strenuous tussle of ten or fifteen minutes the seizure was abandoned.

At 4.30 p.m. large reinforcements of Guards proceeded there, and at a point a short distance from Mr. Mc-Carthy's the Guards chased a man across the fields, while more Guards ran along the road to intercept the pursued. Two men were captured after a quarter mile run but were soon released.

As the Registrar's assistants and Guards proceeded further, shots rang out, and apparently one of the former ran back to warn others of the party of the fact. They all, however, moved forward, and shouts, shots and the galloping of horses rent the air. There came a further shot.

There was barbed wire on the gate of Mr. McCarthy's house. A number of young men and boys were in the

Mr. O'Dee, rent collector, said that Leahy had been evicted in 1929 and subsequently re-instated.

The Justice—Why were you evicted?

The Justice—Why were you evicted? The boy's father said he was sorry the thing had happened. He knew nothing at all about it.

The Justice (to the boy)—Have you anything t say abut this?

The boy—I took them, sir.

The Justice—Is that all you have to say?

The boy—Yes, sir.

The boy—Yes, sir.

The Justice said he would sent the boy to a Reformatory or an Industrial School, and why should he not.

The father appealed to the Court to give the boy a chance. He had already got a "good trimming."

The Justice—Half the crime in this country is due to the indulgence of parents in not properly correcting their children. This is a very serrous matter and I don't know what to do with him. There was a similar case last year.

The Inspector said that a large number of cars came to the place and offences of that kind should be put as top to by severe punishment.

The Justice said he would give the young fellow a chance with very great reluctance. He had a duty to the public and he was determined on discharging it. If any case of that kind came before him again the culprit would go to an Industrial School or Justice—Industrial School or Justice—Ind
