Held on Wednesday before Mr. Troy,

DRAWING UNEMPLOYMENT WHILE WORKING

The Ministry for Industry and Commerce, prosecuted Patk. Drummy, Shandon with making a false declaration at the Unemployment Exchange, while working from 11th to 16th, June

Mr. Farrell, solr., for the defendant Mr. Ryan, solr., in opening the case referred to the difficulty in detecting offenders and said if this man's example was followed by others it would be a case of killing the goose with the golden eggs

Mr. Farrell, pleaded guilty on behalf of his client and read a leaflet from the Department which he held his client read, but was unable to understand. What he understood from it was that he could work after 6 p.m.

Defendant, who at first refused to be sworn, saying that he had pleaded guilty, afterwards took the oath and in reply to Mr. Farrell said he signed as being unemployed. His work consisted of a few evenings a week gardening after 6 o'clock. He had heard from outsiders that he could earn a little. He also read the leaflet produced and he thought from it he could do what he did. If he thought he was doing work he would not have done it. He had a family of five.

To Mr. Ryan-He did not think he was earning an average of 16/- a week from Mr. Cartwright. He worked some days a quarter and other a half accident near Dungarvan. day. If he had understood the Act he would not have done it.

said the summons was in respect ... Lynch, E. Ryan, and M. Hayes. June 16th and the amount involved Justice-The penalty is up to three months imprisonment.

Mr. Ryan-What I suggest is want to go to jail. The Justice said he would adjourn the case to the second January Court, the defendant in the meantime to pay back the 4/2 with 20/- costs.

Mr. Ryan said with regard to costs. There would not be any costs as he stopped all the witnesses. The Justice then imposed a penalty of 20/- together with 4/2 the whole amount to be paid back before the first cardiac failure resulting from the in-February Court.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE Guard Regan, prosecuted Ed.

Noonan, Shandon street, with failure to keep his child at school. The case was adjourned on the uudertaking of the boy's mother to send him to Abbeyside instead of his present school. The same Complainant charged John Sheehan, Davis street, with a similar offence. Fined 2/-. A case against Johanna Connors, Davis street, was dismissed, and one against Patk. Hayes, Loughmore, was adjourned.

PONY WANDERING Guard Giblin, prosecuted Wn:. Crotty, Loughmore, for allowing a pony, his property, to wander on the public road at Kiladangan.

Complainant said that various complaints were received about the pony. Justice-The most I can fine him under this summons is 2/-.

LIGHTS ACT

Giblin, prosecuted Ed. Guard Doherty, Killosera, under the Lights' Act. Fined 2/6.

Guard Enright v. Matthew Cummins, Island, Stradbally, offence. Fined 5/-..

LARCENY OF WHISKEY. Superintendent Walsh, Dungarvan, prosecuted Nicholas Power, Fair Lane, with the larceny of one bottle of whiskey, value 14/6 and one cake, value 2/-, the property of Mrs. Greene, Square. Mrs. Greene, in reply to the Super-intendent, said she had a licensed premises at the Square with a Café idjoining. On November 28th, while preparing a hamper for the Abbeyside Bazaar, she took the whiskey into the Café. The Defendant came in and ordered tea and sausages in the Café. The whiskey was value for 14/6 and the cake 2/-.

Defendant pleaded guilty and in reply to the Justice said it was only a drunken transaction and he was a bit dopey from drink. Mrs. Greene, recalled said the in-fendant did not show any sign of drink when he called first, but did afterwards. Superintendent Walsh said there was nothing previously against the defendant, who admitted the offence to Sergeant O'Shea. He has a pension amount of whiskey missing (about a half a glass) defendant said he spilled some when taking off the cork and added water to make up for it. The Justice adjourned the case to the first Court in January and ordered defendant to pay 10/- compensation in the meantime. When that is done he would give defendant the benefit of the P.O. ACt.

EXAMINATION ORDER Patk. O'Connor, Abbeyside, through Mr. Farrell, solr., applied for an examination order against John Hayes, by the Sheriff, marked nulla bona.

The application was granted for the first court in January.

ALLEGED STONE THROWING. Thomas Sheridan, Shandon, prosecuted Mce. Curran and his son Ml. and Edmond Noonan, and his son, at the Children's Court, with alleged stonethrowing by the youths at plain-tiff's cattle. Mr. Ryan, solr., for plaintiff. Mr. Farrell, solr., for defendants. The case was adjourned for three months on an undertaking given by

Mr. Farrell that the offence would would not be repeated.

Both the youthful defendants and Mce. Curran, denied that there was any stone-throwing or that they ever had catapults.

RECENT MOTOR ACCIDENT.
INQUEST AT CO. HOME.

On Monday an inquest was held at the County Home, Dungarvan, by Mr. T. C. Williams, solr., Deputy Coroner, into the circumstances of the death of Martin Murphy, labourer, Ballinacourty, Cappagh, who a few weeks ago received injuries in a motor car juries described. Mr. Farrell, solr., represented Mr. Wm. Cahill, Ann street, Clonmel, Inspector Prudential Assurance Company, Clonmel.

At the conclusion of the inquest, Mr. Farrell, solr., proposed a vote of sympathy with the relatives of the deceased, and said when the case was fully gone into it would be quite clear that no blame attached to Mr. Cahill.

CLASHMORE MEN ARRESTED AND SENT TO DUBLIN.

On Thursday, December, 6th. Guards arrested two young men-Thomas Lenane, Kilmaloo, Clashmore and John Fitzgerald, Glistenane, Kinsalebeg, on the charge of alleged cutting of wires at Kilmaloo. Both young men were removed under escort 19 Dublin, presumably for trial before the Military Tribunal.

DEATH OF MR. N. COFFEY A respected Newtown parishioner, in the person of Mr. Nicholas Coffey, Ballyshonock, answered the Great Call last week-end, following a short illness and at a comparatively young age. A good-living neighbour, he was well liked by all who knew him, and his demise is a heavy blow to his wife and children, who have much public sympathy in their loss. The funeral to Newtown Parish Church was large and representative. All that was mor-tal of the deceased was laid to rest 1.1 the adjoining graveyard (after the celebration of Mass of Requiem for his soul) amid many manifestation grief.-R.I.P.

Mr. Spreadborough—He has many fine days go by. It was ordered that the sureties be written to.

FREE MILK SCHEME The L.G.D., wrote commenting on the small expenditure on the Free Milk Scheme.

The Secretary stated that the expenditure was lessened since the age limit was reduced from 15 to 5 years. Commissioner—The Superintendent has seen that all entitled to the Free Milk have been given it. It would, he thought, be more reasonable if the age limit was between 8 and 10 years.

CAPPOQUIN SANITARY OFFICER The Department wrote stating that they did not think it was a proper duty for a woman to be appointed to look after the sewers in Cappoquin. The letter referred to the appointment of Miss M. Walsh, who is already water rent collector.

The Secretary stated that the Department's letter did not deal with the part of the letter addressed to them by the Board and which stated that for the past 25 years a woman had been acting, and when necessary to have sewers cleaned employed a man at her own expense. In this case Miss Walsh was prepared to do that. It was decided to ask the Depart

BAZAAR AT TOWN HALL

RECORD SUCCESS

The Bazaar and Prize Drawing in aid of the Abbeyside Church, Renova-tion Fund, was held in the Town Hall, on Wednesday night and was most successful in every way reflecting the greatest credit on the organisers. There was an enormous attendance present drawn form all the surrounding areas.

On Tuesday evening the masquerade Village Band, organised in connection with the Bazaar paraded through the town and was followed by thousands, who declared it was the greatest and most fantastic turn out ever seen in the town. The parade was headed by a large banner followed by some 30 members in multi-coloured variegated costumes and flanked by horsemen, while an artistic model of Abbeyside Parish Church, borne in a gaily decorated car traversed the principal streets. The parade had a triumphal march as they went and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. It was wonderful turn out.

On Wednesday night, the band paraded direct to the Town Hall, and was followed by a vast crowd. The Hall was gaily decorated for the occasion.

Prior to the opening of the proceedings, Very Rev. N. Dunphy, P.P., Abbeyside, thanked the people of Dun-garvan and the surrounding districts for the splendid support they had given them; also the Urban Council for having kindly placed the Town Hall at their disposal, which he said should be enlarged when the Abbeyside people came there again. He thanked the parishioners of Abbeyside people came Also the land done Also the right. "Thanks, dear reader), for it the committee when soliciting gifts,

During the evening the various stalls and side-shows, Roulette tables. Horse-Racing, Hoopla, and the many other money making devises did a brisk trade. The Drawing of Prizes was the big attraction, and the winners will appear in full in next issue.

XMAS A PALIMPSEST-

public for the courtesy extended to suddenly occurred to me that Christmas is a veritable, if not a literal, palimpsest. We are told by "knowledgeable gents" of the scholarly world that scribes of the ancient and mediaeval days used to write on parchment with an ink made of gum and bak-galls. This ink, when fresh, could be easily sponged off; but when old, neither sponging nor scraping could quite erase the original writing, though the parchment could be cleaned well enough to allow of its being used again as a writing surface. Such a parchment was called a "palimpsestum," when the second writing was sponged and scraped off and the former writing was again brought to light. This re-rubbing process has led to the r discovery of some classical masterpieces which had been once rubbed and written over by mediaeval persons of no great literary gifts. On the other hand, some splendid works have been found to be written over writings of a less valuable kind. In both these respects, Christmas resembles the palvious, but, in order to justify that apparently brainless reference to the coming Feast, I must point out that. with the annual return of the Christ mas season, there is a rubbing out the dull and dismal records of recent months, and a re-discovery of the joyful moods and hopeful sentiments . f our earlier years. By this process, few that he is believed to have waited un!! of us can fail to find once more the the Glacial epoch was well over bewords, the looks, and even the tones, fore qualifying for that honour, and that used to gladden our hearts when that he took to wife an ancestoress of Yule-tide came round the corner of the wintry months. It is time that many shrunk from the rediscovery of what they have lost, and I sympathise with them; but it is a great thing to have a store of pleasant memories, and it is a pity to let the sorrows of the present blot them out and keep them who were so kind and so self-sacrificing and so mindful of us that we should now and then erase the present and revive the buried past. To let present grief obliterate past joys in a poor bargain. But some may have only gloomy records to recall. The present, then, is the season for writing some kindly things that it will be a joy to re-read at some future time upon the new face of that old parchment. At any rate, I beg leave to hope that the records of the 25th inst., will be under happier auspices, and by: 1, readers of the "Observer," without exception, "continued in our next" everybody! AN AWFUL DEATH.

On Saturday, a young plumber, named Charles O'Leary, went down in a 50 feet well at a farmer's house in Co. Wicklow, to rectify a defect. On the way down the shaft, some of the banking fell in and half way down O'Leary got caught in the ladder he was using with falling debris. Help was summoned and despite every attempt made to rescue him from his Notice to Poultrykeepers. &c. perilous position for the following 21 days and nights, all proved in vain, and his dead body was on the 3rd day quantities of Turkeys, old fowl and taken from the pump.

It is one of the saddest cases of modern times, the agony of the unfortunate man surpassing anything ever heard of.

ppoquin Parachial mprovement Fund.

A Monster Whist Drive and Grand | ners were announced as follows :-Dance in aid of the Cappoquin Parochial Improvements Fund were held in Cappoquin on Sunday night, and both events, we are glad to say, proved highly successful, both from a social and financial point of view.

The events were principally organisthe Officers and Committee of the Society, and both he and Mr. J. P. Olden, acted as Join Hon. Secs. of the entire undertaking, and the remarkably smooth and successful manner n which everything was carried out was a great tribute to Mr. Sergeant's wonderful organising powers in this, as well as in every other important project with which he has been associated in Cappoquin, whether in the cause of sport or charity, for many years past.

The Whist Drive was held in the C.Y.M.S. Hall in Mill street and received an unusually large measure of support, ladies and gentlemen attending in large numbers from Cappoquin, Lismore, Tallow, Dungarvan, Clonmel, Clogheen and other places, the attendance from Lismore being remarkably large for which the promoters feel deeply grateful. Thirty tables (representing 120 players) were occupied at the Whist Drive, and this large attendance was mainly attributable to the valuable prizes offered on the or-

In addition to the eight valuable prizes offered for the Drive, (four for ladies and four for gentlemen), free tickets were issued entitling all the players to participate in a Grand Drawing of Prizes for which ten atspecial prizes, and four further valuable prizes were drawn for at the Miss Rea, Cappoquin. Dance, making 30 prizes in all, the largest number ever before offered at any similar event in Cappoquin.

All the arrangements were admirably carried out by Messrs. M. J. Sargent, Mrs. J. V. Conway, Mrs. Ivy Cahill, Senr., Treasurer, J. E. Crowe, J. V. Conway, Joe Mason, John Single ton, and James Curran, Senr., and 5th-(Large Doll)-Mr J. Foley, Ardafter the Drive all the players were hospitably entertained to a delightful 'Mr P. Coffey. tion, and it is not claimed that even that knowledge is without flaw. It is absolutely impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule that could be applied to all circumstances and localities—except in a very broad sense—because the length of time that a manure will benefit pastures or annual crops must vary with the nature find that there is still sufficient phosphates to a certain crop, and, on analysing the soil after the crop is removed, we find that there is still sufficient phosphates to a certain crop, and, on analysing the soil to grow an annual crops must vary with the nature of the soil, the kind of plants grown the kind of stock that consume the plants and pasture herbage, the rainfall, and, of course, the nature of the soil to grow another crop, it would by no means be certain that the residue was available fall, and, of course, the nature of the manure itself. We know that certain out of one hundred it would pay betfertilisers act beneficially on crops and pastures, but we have much to learn about the manner, not only on the first crop, but also about the changes that must take place in the fertilisers themselves, when they are incorporated with the soil and acted on by soil selves, when they are incorporated with the soil and acted on by soil with the soil and acted on by soil fertility, and it is also the means of bacteria. There is no doubt, whatever, utilising to the best advantage the fer-phosphate, basic superphosphate, etc., we immediately encourage a robust growth of clovers, and that robust growth of clovers and grasses, in itself,

Clovers, once established as a result of top-dressing, are the cheapest of all fertilisers. They add much organic matter to the soil and aid drainage by the decay of their tap roots. They increase the nitrogen content of the soil, and the general bulk of the vegetation 30/35 Cwt. Model Chassis which further enriches the soil in the form of humus

As previously stated, the length of time that a fertiliser will benefit a pasture or crops depends on the circumstances mentioned above.

Until quite recently, says Mr. Primrose Mc onnell, writing in "The New Zealand Farmer," the general opinion was that highly nitrogenous fertilisers, such as nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia, were exhausted in the year of application, although the indirect action continued a little longer. Rothamstead has decreed, however, that the residue of applied nitrogenous fertilisers is held in the soil for some time longer; but I think we may reasonably conclude that, being so easily soluble, their action is of much shorter duration than any other fertiliser. Anyhow the exhaustion of these nitrogen-ous fertilisers will be more rapid in light soils than in heavy ones (clay soils), as is the case with all kinds of fertilisers. Nitrogen, as contained in sulphate of ammonia, is a little less soluble than that in nitrate of soda, but the difference between the two is only small.

PHOSPHATES.

It is pretty generally accepted that phosphates become fixed in the surface soil and except in very light soils, they do not sink to a lower depth than a out nine inches. As to the actual value of the phosphate residues, I am afraid that we do not know as much as we pretend to know. Superphosphate, basic super and basic slag, when applied to arable land, are considered to be exhausted in about three years, and, when applied to pastures, their period of activity may be two years longer. Bone manures, other than dissolved bones, are slower in action, and are believed to have a beneficial action on pastures for at least eight years.

The rate of exhaustion of phosphates in the soil is influenced by the kind of his stock carried, milch cows and young s.o k causing quicker exhaustion than mature fattening stock.

Potash, like phosphates, is said to become fixed in the soil, and is not lost in the sub soil to any appreciable extent. An application is exhausted in about the same time as phosphates.

Lime, when applied in fairly heavy dressings to pastures, gets the credit of having a beneficial effect for at least ten years, and, on stiff soils, some authorities maintain that such an application takes about twenty years to exhaust, which is all the more strange, seeing that lime does not be-come fixed in the surface soil, and in light soils a considerable quantity is washed into the subsoil.

The rate of exhaustion of lime is also i duenced by the kind of stock cared. It is now accepted, however, that comparatively small dressings, applied at short intervals, are much more economical than heavy dressings applied at long intervals. It has been calculated that a dressing of four cwt. per acre is exhausted in about three years. Of course, the rate of exhaustion is more rapid on arable than on pasture land, and other circumstances, referred to above, must be taken into consideration. The rate of exhaustion of lime is also influenced by the nature of the fertilisers applied in conjunction with it. Sulphate of am-monia uses up the lime more rapidly than any other fertiliser in general

In the case of arable land, the exhaustion of applied fertilisers is greatly influenced by the order of the crop-

HOW LONG WILL FERTILISERS BENEFIT PASTURES OR CROPS?

This query came to hand recently, but it is in no way new. The subject of manurial residues has engaged the attention of agricultural experts for some years, and, although we have gained a little in knowledge of this matter, too many of the findings have been conjectural. Analysis may be able to reveal the amount of plant food in the soil at any given time, but it cannot with any accuracy dec.de whether that plant food is or is not available for assimilation by plants.

The knowledge we have gained is mainly the result of careful observation, and it is not claimed that even that knowledge is without flaw. It is the content of the kind of crops grown. Certain plants require certain plants, and, if one kind of crops is grown on the same land year atter year, the soil becomes unduly exhausted of that necessary plant-food. By a rotation of crops the demands on the various plant-food ingredients are more or less equalised, as, for instance: A leguminous crop is a good preparation for a cereal one, mainly because it leaves behind a good store of nitrogen, which has been delivered in the soil free of cost. Also, the roots of plants feed at various depths in the soil, so that, if deep and shallow-rooting plants are grown alternately, the plant food is more evently used up.

Taking all things into consideration.

that different fertilisers have different periods of activity in the soil, varying between one and twenty years.

tilisers that may be applied. Fertilisers are, to some extent, wasted on arable soil in the absence of good cultivation. When we apply phosphates to a pasture in the form of basic slag, super-good environment generally, and on these factors cultivation exerts a great influence. Of course, it would be foolish to depend on cultivation in the absence of fertilisers. Potash in the leads to further improvement, apart soil, more than any other fertiliser, is from the manurial residues that may be left in the soil.
