This sheet contained a violent and bitter attack on every member of the Irish Christian Front, which meant that the Communist Party was making an attack on the Bishops and priests, as well as on the laymen of the country.

Communists came to tell them that they could make them as pure-souled patriots as they were themselves; that they had come to save the national soul of the people; but their national and political outlook was a matter for the Irish people themselves. The Irish people were quite themselves and the triumph of the so-called Madrid Government. These people would deny that Moscow had anything to do with the civil war.
