INTERESTING ADDRESSES DELIVERED

MANY matters of vital importance to the farming community were discussed at the Annual Congress of the Irish Dairy Shorthorn Breeders' Congress, held at Thurles, on Thursday last.

Over 300 delegates representing branches of the Association throughout Eire were in attendance.

We were told long since that the British market was dead, but I think, declared Mr. Cairns, you will all agree that it is still a very lively corpse, and not nearly in a fit condition for burial or cremation. Since the present Government came into power they had made commendable efforts to revive old industries and create new ones, and we are all in agreement in wishing them success, but agreement in wishing them success, but the colder industry agriculture fool that the older industries for the fool that the older industries for the fool that the older industries for the fool that it would be to the advantage of dairy farmers if they endeavoured to prevention.
