KNOCKANORE NOTES

DEATH OF MR. PATRICK SHEERAN. A silent gloom was cast over the parish and throughout the entire area of West Waterford when the death was announced, on last Thursday of Mr. Patrick Sheeran, Knockanore. After a short illness and at the youthful age of thirty-nine one of the most prominent figures of his own and surmost prominent figures of his own and sur-rounding districts departed from the midst of his companions. His funeral, one of the largest ever witnessed locally, was a clear proof of the universal sympathy which the news of his death aroused and of the esteem in which he was held with those who tusned out so unselfishly to follow him to his last resting place. His light-heartedness and facility to spin a good yarn, won the affection and esteem of all who were acquainted with him while his knowledge

As an active member of the Cow-Testing Association his face was familiar in all corners of the parish. His advice, in all matters bendering on the latter association. corners of the parish. His advice, in all matters bordering on the latter association was highly valued and caused to a good extent the deep regret, which marked his death. Though a popular figure in all social circles he was particularly outstanding in the untiring interest which he displayed in all organisations, pertaining to the parish and much of his time and zeal was devoted to forward them. However, was devoted to forward them. However, the quest of game was his chief pastime and he gained the admiration of many, as a good shot and a perfect sportsman. In fact there are few tales of hunting exploits of the neighbourhood in which the name of Paddy Sheeran does not find its place.

Two matches in connection with the first rounds of the Minor Hurling Championship were billed for the Gaelic Field, Dungarvan, on Sunday last, viz., Abbeyside v. Cappoquin and Cathal Brughas v. Kilbrien. Only one match, however, was played as

Minor Hurling Championship Commences.

Last Sunday, March 31st, saw the commencement of the West Waterford minor hurling championship when the eight teams entered met victory or defeat in the first round.

Protests From All Over Ireland.

Ever since the announcement was first made, of the intention to close the De La salle Training College, protests and expressions of regret at such a drastic step have been voiced at meetings and through the daily and provincial press day after day. These protests came from the four corners of Ireland. Hereunder we give the views of Mr. Michael O Ceallachain, The Don. Castlerea :-

"Since the first student entered De La Salle (and probably that student was the late lamented and deeply regretted Mr. John McGrath, B.A., C.E.C., I.N.T.O.) till the present authorities had withdrawn a Government grant to that college and till the last student trained in De La Salle had left it the college could claim to be equal and on a level with either the schools of Lismore, Bangor, Clonard, or any other of and at the end of the last century the idea of nationality was low in Ireland and the resurrection came from the colleges—Maynooth, De La Salle, and other colleges, which were then sending forth the future teachers of the country. In 1899 the students in De La Salle established a debating society, held weekly Saturday meetings and at their varying ceilidthe no item was tolerated unless it was Irish. I was a junior student in 1899 and my fellow-students thought me fit to be President of the Literary and Debating Society for the following year. At the opening of the new session in September I started the first branch of the Gaelic League in De La Salle College. The spirit of my fellow students was such that they supported it with enthusiasm. In the college at that time Professor Ahearne was conducting Irish classes but to those classes nobody was admitted event those who had a continuous professor and at the second continuous professor and the late of his aunt, the late Miss Johanna Power, The New House, Kilrossanty Rilrossanty Pat and Thomas Keating Cumann, Fianna Fail also voted sympathy in his bereavement to Mr. Power, who is Chairman of the Cumann.

WATERWORKS. Mr. McConchy said that regarding the Waterworks, the position was that his firm had discussed that matter fully with the contractor. In reply to a letter which they had sent he wrote back saying that he didn't consider he was responsible for he didn't consider he was responsible for any defects in the dam. They replied to this letter stating they considered him responsible, and he wrote back asking under what clause they considered him responsible. In a letter on November 27, they referred him to about a dozen clauses. The contractor then wrote back asking for an explanation of why they considered him liable, omitting any mention of the clauses to which they had referred him. In reply Messrs. Delap and Waller stated that they considered him liable because he was the builder.

In December he wrote stating that he would put the matter in the hands of his solicitor. They wrote on March 14th referring him to Condition 4 of his contract under which were mentioned the conditions consequent to the giving of notice by the engineers to the contractor if they certified in writing that they considered to the contractor is they considered to the contractor of they certified in writing that they considered to the contractor is they considered to the contractor of the contractor is they considered to the contractor of t he had failed to carry out their instructions.

A further reply from the contractor stated that his solicitor did not consider him liable.

Messrs. Delap and Waller would write to the Council and ask them to refer the matter to their solicitors. If he did not complete the work to the Council's satisfaction they could then dispense with the contractor's services, and get the work carried out by a second contractor, at the original contractor's expense. There was about £250 odds against the dam still in the Council's hands, and the completion of the work of pressure-grouting might cost about from £200 to £400 in round figures. The contractor had refused to say how he would put matters right, and Messrs. Delap and Waller would write down to the Council referring them to the clauses on which they could take action. He could either get on with the work or get out. If

Mr. McConchy—We feel, from the engineering point of view, that he is in the wrong. These clauses in this contract are embodied in the Charter of the Council of Consulting Engineers. By his contract he should have built a watertight dam, and he has not done so. We repeatedly told him he had not allowed enough for shrinkage, but he had his own ideas and did not do so. He cannot find any faults in the design.

ideas and did not do so. He cannot find any faults in the design.

In reply to Mr. Byrne, Mr. McConchy said that the accident had occurred within the period of maintenance. Messrs. Delap and Waller felt that the Council had a perfectly good case from the engineering side. As regards the legal side they felt that the Council had a very good case, but that, of course, was for legal opinion.

Mr. Mansfield—What'll be the cost of it?

Mr. McConchy, continuing, said that contractor had entered into two sureties of £3,000. The Council could take action against the guarantors for more than £250.

PRESSURE.

Mr. McConchy said that they could be sure that when the reservoir was fully going they would have ample pressure.

The Council had renewed a lot of services, but they should scrape the main from Deelish to Corraun and scrape and reline it from that on. The whole system should be looked into. The hospital was being built on the highest level practically and this would affect their layout.

Mr. Mansfield—What about the alternative which was mentioned?

Mr. Mansfield—What about the alternative which was mentioned?

Mr. McConchy—I have looked into that and I'm sorry to say it isn't advisable.

Mr. Mansfield—Would you consider it advisable to put in a 6" main from Deelish Mr. McConchy continuing, said he would not advise this. A new main would cost about 15s. for 5,000 yards roughly.

In reply to Mr. O'Dwyer, Mr. McConchy said that it would not be necessary to take up every few yards of the main. It could said that it would not be necessary to take up every few yards of the main. It could be opened every 200 yards.

Continuing he said that the main should pass about 40 per cent. more than it did at present. At present they were getting about 30-35 lbs. pressure at the Council yard, which dropped about about by about 10 lbs. after passing the Creamery. He would advise cutting out the pressure-reducing valve as he didn't think they would have too much pressure for the pre-was another source of complaint and had caused the Council some worry.

Mr. McConchy said his firm had never been appointed for this purpose.

Mr. McConchy said the flooding of the march might be due to the screen not being cleared for a time, although it was all right now, and people had a habit of throwing things behind it. It should also be extended. There should be more water going out of the marsh than was going, and this might be due to an old tidal flap in the old sluices which were to have been dismantled. The place was landlocked and there was a big catchment, and there might be water coming into the Marsh underneath. How long was it since the canal was cleaned?

B.S.—Never, I think.

Mr. McConchy—It's gradually filling in, and getting smaller. It should be cleaned out.

The Sweep.

It is rather a pity that the War should be the cause of upsetting and causing a setback, temporary though it may be, to the progress of the Irish Hospitals Trust Sweepstakes. These Sweeps are perhaps the most successful of modern Irish ventures and are noted all over the world for their fairness and efficiency. Already they have served many useful purposes. They have been of invaluable assistance in aiding the better hospitalization of Ireland, and in equipping Irish hospitals in accordance thousands of others. What a pity that the monster War should interfere with this

However, the Sweeps have come to stay, and we may hope to see them going strong again when the world is set to rights once more. For the present the staff and activities of the Sweep will be curtailed, and this will mean, unfortunately unemployment for many, and the holding up of the large-scale hospital improvements which had been mooted before the war.

The original foundation of the city is by some writers referred to the vyear 155; but its antiquity as a place of any importance cannot be traced beyond the year 155; but its antiquity as a place of any importance cannot be traced beyond the year 155; but its antiquity as a place of any importance cannot be traced beyond the year 155; but its antiquity as a place of action in the south, the general secret of the many successes achieved by this very popular team on every field in which they have played during the past year. This tower was erected in 1003, and is said to be the oldest in Ireland. In 1171 it was held as a fortress by Strongbow; in 1463 a mint was established in it by Edward the IV., and as late as 1819, it was rebuilt and formed into a police barracks. Strongbow was immediately joined by Raymond and his party and, on the following morning received considerable reinforcements from the neighbouring chieftains and was prepared for a vigorous defence. The English were twice repulsed, and twice returned to the attack, when Raymond Le Gros, perceiving a house of timber projecting from the eastern angle of the city walls and supported on the outside by posts, prevalled on his men to make a third attack and direct their whole force against this and direct their whole force against this querter. Successful gardeners plan ahead—that is one reason why they are successful. An early Spring does not catch them unprepared. They have settled beforehand the seeds and bulbs that they intend to grow. They have decided the number and kind of garden tools that are required. Some garden experts have predicted an early Spring, so, like good campaigners, they have purchased their simple tool needs already, and the assurance of July weather in March would not furry them a bit. They are prepared. You, too, may need a spade, a rake, a digging fork or a trowel. A spade saves so much work when anything more than a bucketful of earth has to be removed, a rake save so many backaches and so many minutes that can be turned to productive work, a digging fork is indispensable, for it saves you literally, from cutting away the roots of your horticultural hopes, a trowel is the insparable ompanion of the digging-fork and the ecessary small brother of the spade. Why not get one or more of these tools now at Harpur Bros. and be prepared. Harpurs have everything for the garden at all prices. HARPUR BROTHERS, Quay, Waterford.

At the usual monthly meeting of the No. 4 Lismore Blackwater Fishery Conservators at the Devonshire Arms, Tallow, there attended:—Messrs. R. Grove Annes-ley, chairman; Major Coote, Miss A. TRAMMEL NETS. A long discussion took place on the question of the use of "trammel nets" at Inspector Kenny said it was for the Department to define a "trammel net." It would be very serious if they could use any length they liked, in view of the fact that 700 fish had been taken in six years. Mr. Daly-Are they not allowed to use

GRAND NATIONAL THEY WERE LUCKY. SWEEP AFFECTED BY THE WAR.

ONLY £554,320 SUBSCRIBED.

Ireland's Luck in the Draw The draw on the Hospitals Trust Sweep on the Grand National was held in the Mansion House, Dublin on Monday. The total proceeds were £554,320, and the prize fund amounted to £224,484.

Sir Joseph Glynn said that when war broke out last autumn they had had to consider their whole position and, greatly daring, Hospitals Trust told the Associated Hospitals Committee that they were pre-pared to go on for the Grand National, as pared to go on for the Grand National, as from the results achieved in the Cesare-witch they thought they could make it a success. Of course, they had certain guarantees given by Act of Parliament, which were helpful, but it was bold, in the middle of a war which affected every neutral State in the world, and which affected transport, and the rate of exchange for the Hospitals' Trust to say that they would try to bring off a sweep which, if would try to bring off a sweep which, if not as great as sweeps of the past, might be counted in hundreds of thousands, if not in millions. They had succeeded in doing that.

Hospitals' Trust had agreed to run a sweepstake in aid of the Red Cross, and as a result they had been able to hand to the Irish Red Cross Society for distribution among the various Red Cross Societies a sum of £60,000. They then proceeded to organise the present sweepstake, and in spite of all the factors operating against them—fluctuations in the rate of exchange, etc.—they had never lost heart, and although they could not count in millions, the result reflected the greatest credit on the directors of Hospitals' Trust and those associated with them.

Mr. J. O'Sheehan, official announcer, then gave the aggregate figures of all the Sweepstakes held on behalf of the Hospitals Trust since the start, including the present Sweepstake, but not including the Red Cross Sweepstake. The figures are as follows:

The usual sweepstake on the Derby would not be run, because it had been decided that the risk was too great owing to the short time available—six or seven weeks at the most. The rumours which had been in circulation regarding the future of the Sweep-stakes were largely due, he suspected, to the drastic alterations which it had been found necessary to make in their programme, but he would point out it was hardly possible for Hospitals Trust or the Associated Hospitals' Committee to come to any conclusion as to the future until they could see the figures of the present sweep-The Executive Committee had the figures before it on Saturday, and it was decided that, provided certain alterations were oon, would be advised to go on with the

WATERFORD 200 YEARS AGO

The recent reports of the Poor-law on the wages and condition of the agricultural labourers in the south of Ireland are very the wages and condition of the agricultural labourers in the south of Ireland are very suggestive. We append a few extracts:—
During the last twenty years the increase of the labourers' wages has been both great and general, and it might fairly be stated, the average, to amount to an advance from 1/- to 1/6 per day. In remote parts it may be a little less, and in other instances somewhat greater, as in the vicinity of the principal towns, at particular seasons of the year, as in haytime and harvest, rising frequently to 2/6 and recular seasons of the year, as in haytime and harvest, rising frequently to 2/6 and 3/- per day, and occasionally even higher. Skilled labour also commands a higher rate than the ordinary wages, as, for instance, a competent ploughman will frequently obtain from 10/- to 14/- a week for the half year, but in this is included a house and small garden, valued at from £3 to £4 per annum, for which, however, his employer takes great and contain from 10/- to 14/- a week for the half year. Statement from the Great Southern Railway Company in respect of the recent Court decision following the revision of rateable valuation of the Railway Company's premises. The total amount due by Carrick Urban Council is £324. The company requested payment of the amount by Carrick Urban Council is £324. The company requested payment of the amount from the stipulated wages.—Married men are generally provided with residences on the farm, and unmarried men receive board and lodging and a money payment varying that the transfer of the amount due.

This is a greatly improved state of things from what was formerly the rule. In 1631, a labourer's wages was only 6d. per day, but it is stated by the writers of that period that a sheep could then be purchased for a shilling, and it is a question of doubt but the labourer was better off and more comfortable than at the present day, as the value of the necessaries of life has more than correspondingly advanced. The labourers are careless about the interests of their employers; about the interests of their employers; them: the foregoing statements, from which we about the interests of their employers; little community of feeling between them; a constant struggle about remuneration for labour; the farmer doing as little as he can to promote the comfort of the labourer, and the labourer doing only what he cannot help.—This is not the case, however, with ment to increase the old age pension the workmen of the gentry and higher classes, or on properties where cottages allowance to meet the increased cost of livhave been built. Wherever grazing farms predominate the employment is irregular, and there is a general desire to emigrate. A writer lately describing the state of Ireland, gives the following truthful des-

The Irish peasant is shrewd and suspicious in an extreme degree; he looks on all as his enemies; he dreads his superiors—"et dona ferentes;" his mind has est its energy and elasticity; his heart is hardened against every man, because he is persuaded that every man's heart is steeled against him; when he enters a shop to purchase any article, it is his usual custom to offer one half what he is asked; he is insensible to hope, and therefore it is that so much, perhaps all, of his enjoy-ments are of a negative kind, arising from the absence of evil than from any positive good. But though deprayed and degraded, and very low in the scale of humanity, he is not without intelligence : it is not too much to say, that the mind of the lower orders in Ireland is as acute and as much ightened as that of the same class, under similar circumstances, in any other country. Generally speaking the Irish farmer is generous and hospitable: that is the natural character, but it is not the

The misery of the country is by some tributed to the want of what is called a enant Right Act, to the absence of landed roprietors; by others to the want of manu-actures, and the consequent want of nd the consequent want of loyment, and to the heavy taxses, and that were the evils connected with them amended, the general condition of the country would be improved. There are many instances of liberality and fairness amongst the landowners of this country, and independent of my feeble testimony, the comparative moderation of country, and independent of my feeble estimony, the comparative moderation of tents may be demonstrated by a reference to the more peaceable condition of the people, as compared with the inhabitants of some of the other counties.
