The news of Mr. Cronin's resignation must have struck a pathetic cord in the heard of many parishioners, both young and old, at home and abroad. Thirty-one years is the better part of a life-time, and thirty-one years well spent in the service of any one community is not to be despised. Not only is he to be congratulated in his efficiency as a teacher but he has also built up a splendid record as a gentleman and a friend and has proved himself on all occasions a patron of descriving charity. Like other heroes of everyday life, teachers are seldom thanked for their work. They are more often associated with the rod than with the object for which the rod is used. Few realise the responsibility and tediousness of their job and how much the parents of a child are indebted to them. They take on where their efforts have exhausted. Mr. Cronin has been noted for his interest in his pupils not only while they were under his care but also when they had left school and were lost in the thoroughfare of life. It must be a consolation to him to remembe it that his sound fundal rental training; has helped men and warrent in all professions. Mr. D. O'Sullivan, M.S.C., F.I.C., Analy St., Cork, furnished his analysis of sample of mud. The analysis stated: The sample consists essentially of a sandy deposit. Its only manurial value lies in its nitrogen content (ol.) per. cent.), and this is practically useless when compared with, say, farmyard manure.

With 'regard to nets for salmon fishermen, the Chairman said that Mr. W. J. Broderick, T.D., was asking two questions in the House on this matter.

Gas Manager—The gas output is increased considerably; the plant is not able to handle it.

Chairman—Merchants are unable to cope with orders for plocks. There are too many restrictions; and if you saw the position of the people in the new houses for want of turf or blocks—it is appalling. Turf should never be sold by weight. You all know what wet turf means.
