Trusts and Popular Songs.

IT'S a good many years now since the Republican Party was strongly entrenched in the United States. Herbert Hoover was the last Republican president.

It was the party that was looked upon as the friend of the big fellow, the moneyed man and the monopoly. For that reason it was the target for attack from all quarters, including the press and the platform.

The evils resulting from trusts and monopolies were very forcibly brought to everybody's attention, especially during the regime of the Republican President, William McKinley. Later, Theodore Roosevelt (an uncle of the ever-popular Franklin D. Roosevelt) became President and he was a bitter anti-trust man.

It is strange that to-day, or practically since, we hear not a word against the trusts or combines. Indeed, this seems to be the age of trusts and combines.

The individual who writes and composes a song to-day has a poor chance to get before the public. The big music publishers will tell him how sorry they are that they cannot help him.

"You know we have our own song writers, our regular staff. They give us what we want and we do not undertake to publish anything by individuals."

"Well, we see the result. We have had practically no popular song in a good many years. The "regular staff's" production do not seem to hit the mark. Their popular (?) songs are of very short duration, not like the old-timers such as Paul Dresser's composition, "The Banks of the Washaw far away."

"The answer he gave me was to just turn around and laugh an' keep going. But you may be sure I didn't let him go very far."

"As I told you before, Mr. Cronin, I'm like my father, out' Tim Kearns, I'm hasty, hot tempered an' a fighter, an' when the big noise gave me no satisfaction to my quaggin except a laugh, I went for him an' swan' long till I had him laughin' at the wrong side of his mouth."

Tallow News.

Whist Drive.—The weekly whist drive sponsored by the committee of the Gaelic League and held at the Gaelic League Hall on last Sunday night was accorded a full measure of support and some quite intriguing play resulted at a number of tables.

Sympathy.—At a specially convened meeting of Tallow Company, L.D.F., at which there was a full attendance of members, a vote of sympathy was passed in silence to Q/M T. J. Scanlan, on the death of his uncle.

Billiards and Snooker Tournaments.—Quite good progress has been made with the first rounds of the above which are being promoted by the committee of the Temperance Hall.

Hunting.—The Aghish Harriers met at the local centre on Sunday last and had a good day's sport. There was a big field out. The usual big meet of the West Waterford's will take place in Clashmore on St. Stephen's Day.

Home on Holidays.—Home on holidays recently has been Miss K. Hillan, Tinniscant, Villierstown. A member of the British Army Nursing Service, she saw service in the African and European theatres during the war and had numerous interesting experiences.

Eire Og Defeat Cnoc Sion.—Eire Og, 3-4, Cnoc Sion 1-6.—At the Gaelic Final, Waterford, on Sunday before, a fair crowd Eire Og (Kilkenny Co. Champions) defeated Cnoc Sion (Waterford Co. Champions) in a senior hurling change in aid of the Army Benevolent Fund.

He was the back of the neck and jerked him back and then with a right gave him a crack under the jaw. The blow now only knocked him out but it put him spinnin' in through the plat-glass windy, wid me followin' him an' thin landin' on top o' him inside in the big dinin' room o' the hotel.

FOOD PROBLEMS DURING THE EMERGENCY.

How This Country Overcame Them.

INTERESTING LECTURE AT TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

VERY interesting and informative lecture was given at the Dungarvan Technical School on last Friday night. The subject of the lecture was "Nutritional Problems During the Emergency," and was delivered by Professor J. W. C. Jessop, M.D., Professor of Physiology and Histology, Royal College of Surgeons, Dublin.

The lecture was the second in the R.D.S.'s extension scheme, as sponsored by the County Waterford Vocational Education Committee for the season.

In his introductory remarks, Prof. Jessop said that the food of the average person was made up of a large number of items from a variety of different sources. In any given case the articles chosen would depend largely on the pleasure of the individual, and the amount would vary according to his appetite and partly by his purse.

Very broadly, we may say, said the lecturer, "that the diet of a normal person must contain water, carbohydrate, protein, mineral material, and vitamins."

The tough material, cellulose, which formed a large part of vegetable like cabbage, turnips, parsnips, was also a carbohydrate, but it was largely indigestible in the human digestive tract. It served, however, other purposes in the diet. Fat was the principal constituent of butter and cheese, and was commonly consumed as bacon, and with butchers' meat.

The fats most commonly consumed are of animal origin and can also be extracted from vegetable sources. Margarine and oils used in salad dressings are vegetable products.

Proteins were the principal constituents of such animal products as lean parts of beef, mutton, bacon, and also eggs and gelatine (used in making jellies).

"About forty years ago," said the lecturer, "it was shown for the first time that it was not enough merely to provide the carbohydrates, fats, proteins, and minerals essential for energy and the building up of body tissues. People who had adequate amounts of these materials often suffered from disease, because certain substances, minute quantities of which were essential for health, had been removed during the preparation of, or destroyed during the storage of, the food. These are the materials we now call vitamins."

GAELIC NOTES

(By "TAOBHLINE.")

The Junior Football final at Dungarvan on Sunday last between the Briceys and Newtown produced some thrilling passages but in my opinion the game did not come up to expectations.

"If this vitamin," said Professor Jessop, "is absent from the diet, it interferes with the absorption of calcium from the food, and it is deposited on them from the blood, and is essential for the normal growth and rigidity of bones. If it is defective, rickets occurs. This is deposited on them from the blood, and is essential for the normal growth and rigidity of bones. If it is defective, rickets occurs."

Three conditions are essential for the normal growth: 1, adequate calcium in food; 2, adequate vitamin D; and 3, substance tending to increase the calcium content of the blood.

Prof. Jessop then went on to deal with the main point of his lecture, i.e., nutritional problems during the emergency. He pointed out that restriction imposed during this period of the country, he said, was forced to rely to a much greater extent than in the past on the home-grown wheat as his normally exported cattle, pigs, milk, butter and eggs, it was clear that they were not in any way deficient of a shortage of proteins or fats.

The position regarding carbohydrates was not so secure. He continued, "are potatoes and bread. Of the former there was a plentiful supply, but the problem of cooking them became very difficult owing to the shortage of fuel, especially in the poorer homes of the cities. Before the war wheat that was largely imported, and a very large proportion of the food of the poor, especially in cities, it was here that the problem became most urgent."

The threatened shortage of flour, which arose from the reduced importation, was met by three measures: 1, the growing of home-grown wheat; 2, extraction rate of this flour was increased, and 3, a comparatively small percentage of flour from other sources was mixed with the wheat flour.

These steps succeeded in averting any real shortage of bread. Objections to home grown wheat. Before the emergency many objections were raised to the increased consumption of this cereal on the grounds of unsuitability of Irish wheat for baking. From the point of view of the baker flour should have a high water and high content of gluten. But it is fact that on the Continent excellent bread is baked with flour, the composition of which is different from ours.

Regarding the wheat extraction, the lecturer said that before the war this was usually 70 per cent. to 72 per cent. in case of wheat flour. During the greater parts of the years 1942 and 1943 it reached the maximum figure of 100 per cent., i.e., the entire wheat grain was included in the flour. This meant that the more of the outer layer of the grain was included in the flour, the higher the concentration of a substance called phytic acid.

Trusts and Popular Songs.

ITS a good many years now since the Republican Party was strongly entrenched in the United States. Herbert Hoover was the last Republican president.

It was the party that was looked upon as the friend of the big fellow, the moneyed man and the monopoly. For that reason it was the target for attack from all quarters, including the press and the platform.

The creation of trusts and monopolies meant the doom of the small business-man, the little fellow. That was the cry of many, especially the members of the opposing major party—the Democrats.

The evils resulting from trusts and monopolies were very forcibly brought to everybody's attention, especially during the regime of the Republican President, William McKinley. Later, these evils were brought to the attention of the American people by the anti-trust laws.

It is strange that to-day, or practically since, we hear not a word against the trusts or combines. Indeed, this seems to be the age of trusts and combines. And if America was the cradle of those big-business combinations, she has reared and sent out some stout husky lads of trusts and monopolies to practically every country, and in every line of endeavour.

Yes, the influence of the trusts has been felt not only in business but in professional life as well. Take the subject on which we've been talking lately—songs and song-writers, when the popular song was gladly published. That day is passed.

The individual who writes and composes a song to-day has a poor chance to get it before the public. The big music publishers will tell him how sorry they are that they cannot help him.

"You know we have our own song-writers, our regular staff. They give us what we want and we don't have to undertake to publish anything by individuals."

"Well, we see the result. We have had practically no popular song in a good many years. The regular staff's production does not seem to hit the mark. Their popular (?) songs are of very short duration, not like the old-timers' such as Paul Dresser's composition, 'The Banks of the Wabash far away.'"

"Just Tell Them I Saw Me, etc., or well, say songs like 'Little Annie Rooney,' 'Sweet Rosie O'Grady,' 'Two Little Girls in Blue,' etc. These songs always retain their popularity..."

Whist Drive.—The weekly whist drive sponsored by the committee of the Gaelic League and held at the Gaelic League Hall on last Sunday night was accorded a full measure of support and some quite intriguing play resulted at a number of tables.

The winners were: Ladies—Miss B. Tobin and Miss E. Hartigan tied for first place, prizes divided. Gents—Mr. W. Beecher, West St., 2nd prize, Mrs. Prndergast, West St., miniature prize, Mr. Jas. Barry, West St.

Sympathy.—At a specially convened meeting of Tallow Company, L.D.F., at which there was a full attendance of members, a vote of sympathy was passed in silence to the Q/M T. J. Scanlan, on the death of his uncle.

Billiards and Snooker Tournaments.—Quite good progress has been made with the billiards and snooker tournaments which are being promoted by the committee of the Temperance Hall. Second rounds were anticipated to begin early in the present week.

Tallow Race Committee.—At a recent meeting of the above committee held at the Devonshire Arms Hotel, the report of the stewards who had made a tour of inspection of the course was submitted and approved, and improvements recommended were ordered to be carried out forthwith.

Hunting.—The Aglish Harriers met at the local centre on Sunday last and had a good day's sport. There was a big field out. The usual big meet of the West Waterford's will take place in Clashmore on St. Stephen's Day. This season's meet is expected to be the best since the start of the war and a record crowd is assured in the popular centre.

Home on Holidays.—Home on holidays recently has been Miss K. Hallinan, Tinniscant, Villersstown. A member of the British Army Nursing Service, she saw service in the African and European theatres during the war and had numerous interesting experiences. Her many friends are pleased to see her fit and well following an arduous time.

Eire Og Defeat Cnoc Sion.—Eire Og, S-5, Cnoc Sion 1-6. At the Gaelic Pitch, Waterford, on Sunday, before a fair crowd Eire Og (Kilkenny Co. Champions) defeated Cnoc Sion (Waterford Co. Champions) in a senior hurling challenge in aid of the Army Benevolent Fund. Eire Og was at full strength, including D. Kennedy, who has declared for the team in the coming season. Cnoc Sion were without A. Fleming and P. Dowling. The hurling reached a high standard and there were thrills galore.

FOOD PROBLEMS DURING THE EMERGENCY.

INTERESTING LECTURE AT TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

VERY interesting and informative lecture was given at the Technical School on last Friday night. The subject of the lecture was "Nutritional Problems During the Emergency," and was delivered by Professor J. W. C. Jessop, M.D., Professor of Physiology and Histology, Royal College of Surgeons, Dublin.

The lecture was the second in the R.D.S.'s extension scheme, as sponsored by the County Waterford Vocational Education Committee for the season. In his introductory remarks, Prof. Jessop said that the food of the average person was made up of a large number of items from a variety of different sources. In any given case the articles chosen would depend largely on the pleasure of the individual, and the amount would be governed partly by his appetite and partly by his purse.

Very broadly, we may say, said the lecturer, "that the diet of a normal person must contain water, carbohydrates and proteins, mineral material, and vitamins." CARBOHYDRATES. Going on to explain the nature of these substances, Professor Jessop said that carbohydrates were of vegetable origin and included such substances as starch and sugar.

Starch was the principal constituent of potatoes, and cereals like oats, wheat and rice, and substances like porridge, bread, puddings, etc., made from these cereals. Milk sugar was an important carbohydrate in the diet of the child. The tough material, cellulose, which formed a large part of vegetables like cabbage, turnips, parsnips, was also a carbohydrate, but it was largely indigestible in the human digestive tract.

Proteins were the principal constituents of such animal products as lean parts of beef, mutton, bacon, and also eggs and gelatine (used in making jellies). Peas and beans are rich in proteins, and flour ground from the whole wheat grain also contains some. A mineral material includes substances like salt, which is present in a relatively small but adequate extent in foods from animal and vegetable sources.

Speaking on the functions of these in the diet, Professor Jessop said carbohydrates were principal sources of energy in the body to provide energy. Any carbohydrate over and above that required for immediate energy needs of the body is stored for future use or converted into fat and laid down in the reservoir of material in various parts of the body.

The most important function of the protein is to build up body tissue. This was particularly necessary during the period of growth of children, but even the adult tissues were being continuously destroyed by wear and tear and they must be replaced. VITAMINS. Mineral materials are generally essential for some special purpose. It is essential for the manufacture of blood. All the fluids of the body, including blood, must contain salt.

"About forty years ago," said the lecturer, "it was not enough merely to provide the carbohydrates, fats, proteins, and minerals essential for carrying on the building up of body tissues. People who had adequate amounts of these materials often suffered from disease, because certain substances, minute quantities of which were essential for health, had been removed during the storage of the food. These are the materials we now call vitamins."

The lecturer then went on to give instances of how people, deprived of certain vitamins, contracted disease. The natives of Eastern countries became the victims of a nervous disease called beri-beri when they changed from their own roughly-milled rice to the more highly milled, polished rice of the European. Again, in the days of sailing ships, sailors were often at sea for several months at a time and could not obtain fresh fruit or vegetables. In many cases they developed scurvy. In both these cases the diet was insufficient for energy requirements and the building up of the tissues, but in the former case (natives of eastern countries) a certain material present in very minute quantities near the outer part of the cereal, and now called vitamin B, had been removed, and in its absence the nerves could not remain healthy.

The European escaped this disease as they got the necessary small quantity from other articles of food. Fresh fruit and vegetables contain small quantities of a material called vitamin C—essential for the making of small blood vessels, and if the necessary minute amounts are not available, blood vessels rupture and bleed very readily, so that the individual becomes extensively even after a slight injury and dies normally from the nose, stomach, etc. These

(By "TAOBHLINE")

The Junior Football final at Dungarvan on Sunday last between the Briceys and Newtown produced some thrilling passages but in my opinion the game did not come up to expectations. Nevertheless a tough hour's play was witnessed, and a draw was a fitting result especially to a large following of black and amber supporters who were on tenterhooks the closing stages.

The Briceys got away to a flying start and they dominated in all departments in the first quarter but the Newtown team showed a slight breeze and the Briceys had to content with a slender lead on the turn-over. In the second period Newtown, who were favoured to win, showed a slight breeze and they dominated in all departments in the first quarter but the Briceys had to content with a slender lead on the turn-over.

"Do" McCarthy, Martin Curran, Nicholas McGrath and Francis Aheane were outstanding for the Briceys and I would like to make special mention of honest, big, Ned Power, who played a star game all through. Maxin Coffey was solid at full-back for Newtown and others to catch the eye were Lonergan, who was more than a match for the Bricey sharp shooter, Nicholas McGrath. Larry Veale was the pick of the forwards but Paddy Fitzgerald did not play to his best form. The replay should attract a big crowd on Sunday next and I hear the Briceys are going all out but they are meeting strong opposition in this Newtown team who claim they did not get a full half-hour in the second meeting on Sunday last.

The Good will handle the replay and his appointment as referee was agreed to by the two teams concerned. Congratulations to Andy Fleming and McGrath on their selection on the Munster Railway Cup hurling team, as both are worthy of the honour conferred upon them. It was disappointing to find that we got no representation on the football selection and surely Tom Veale (Stradbally) was worth a place in my opinion on the playing eleven. (Sunday, Dec. 9th, at Gaelic Field, Dungarvan, Junior Football Cup. Referee, (replay)—Bricey Rangers v. Newtown, time 3 (S.T.), referee, D. Good.

Munster Council G.A.A.

ANNUAL CONVENTION FIXED FOR WATERFORD CITY.

Rev. M. Hamilton, P.P., Chairman, presided at the meeting of the Munster Council, held at Limerick on Saturday last. The Rev. Chairman ruled out an appeal from Erin's Own Club against Waterford Co. Board for suspending a player for 12 weeks as no rule was quoted. Two other appeals, one against the Clare Co. Board, and the other against the Cork Co. Board, were not in at the clubs concerned were not in attendance at the time they were called.

Because a cheque was not signed in Irish, an appeal by the Construction Corps minor hurling team against the Co. Board was ruled out of order. The Munster Convention was fixed for Waterford City on Sunday, 2nd inst. at 2 P.M. Nominations for officers and motions are to be received by the 12th Feb., and withdrawals are to be notified by the 19th Feb. Father Hamilton intimated that he will not seek re-election as Chairman of the Council at the Convention.

been produced by a sudden restriction in milk intake or by the reduction in the available supplies of cod liver oil, etc. There were reasons, however, against accepting these factors as the complete explanation. Towards the spring of 1943 extraction was reduced to 85 per cent, but calcium was added to the flour (as it was done in England) and in the spring of 1944 a survey made showed there was a considerable improvement in the incidence of rickets amongst the older groups, but no increase amongst the younger children.

Another survey in the spring of 1945 shows that in this country on this time young children under 14 years. There were certain other questions regarding food which had to be considered which might have become urgent, though they did not. When the level of imports fell, oranges and bananas disappeared from the shops. These fruits are rich in vitamin C, and many people felt that an increase in scurvy might follow. If there was, in fact, any increase in the milder manifestations of the disease, he was not in a position to know; but certainly there was no serious outbreak. Two factors may have afforded sufficient protection. Our natural food, the potato, is very rich in vitamin C.

and owing to our habit of boiling potatoes in their jackets, the vitamins are largely preserved in the cooked articles. In the case of younger children, especially those in hospitals, an attempt was made to provide vitamin C in the form of jellies and syrups manufactured from natural sources. The black currant and rose-hip were entirely used for this purpose. BABY FOODS. Regarding baby-foods, he said that the Dungarvan factory (Co-op Creamery) was of great assistance in overcoming the problem of the manufacture of baby foods.

Concluding, the lecturer referred to the relative merits of white and brown bread, and said that wholemeal bread—the kind baked in Irish country houses—was more wholesome. The lecturer was introduced by Very Rev. T. Canon O'Brien, P.P., V.F., Chairman Vocational Education Committee. The vote of thanks was proposed by Dr. M. K. Cusack, Dungarvan, and seconded by Dr. Dooley, Kilmacthomas.

Kilmacthomas Notes.

Fashionable Wedding.—At Ballymore, Co. Wicklow, the seat of the O'Mahony, on Thursday morning of last week, the marriage took place of Miss Lady William Beresford, Georgetown House, Kild. Co. Waterford, only surviving son of the sixth Marquis of Waterford, and the Duchess of St. Albans, and Miss Rachel Page, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Page, Upton Lodge, Bursledon, Southampton. Right Rev. Dr. Harvey, Bishop of Cashel, and Emily, assisted by members of the local Protestant clergy, performed the ceremony, and the church which was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion, was filled to capacity by a fashionable attendance of relatives, friends and well-wishers. The bride was given away by her brother, Major Page. She was attired in pale pink satin, with pale pink tulle veil and carried a bouquet of orchids. Her bridesmaid, Dawnay (son of Lady Susan Dawnay and first cousin of the bridegroom) was the best man, and his brother, Brigadier Cross-Power, was the groom's best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at Grange Con by Madame O'Mahony, who is the sister of Mrs. Page, the bride's mother. The O'Mahony was unavoidably absent, being at present in America. Amongst the guests at the reception were: The Duke of Devonshire, St. Albans, the Marchioness of Waterford, Brigadier and Lady Catherine Dawnay, Miss Lindsay, The Hon. Mrs. Cubitt, Miss Clodine Anson, General Blaque, Castlethorne House; Mr. Charles Blaque, Mr. R. de Vere Hunt, Secretary Waterford Hunt; Mr. J. L. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. H. Galloway, Miss Gertrude, Major and Mrs. Carew, etc. etc. Lord William and his bride later motored to Currane House, Portlaoine, where the honeymoon is being spent. On arrival they were given a warm welcome by the employees of Currane House. The bride's brother, Major Page, was a prisoner of war in Germany. Just before the war he married a daughter of the O'Mahony. His active service was spent with Lord William Beresford in the Royal Artillery. Co. Waterford Annual Ploughing Championship Tests (usual three classes) will be brought off at a Mid-Waterford centre on Wednesday, 15th January next, under the auspices of the following Newtown Ploughing Association—the body that sponsored the team that took All-Ireland ploughing laurels last year for the first time in 1938. The programme for this important New Year feature will be advertised in this paper in due course, and will include particulars of the Newtown Ploughing Association's grand annual day (taking place on Sunday, 20th prox.). Waterford Hounds met at Feddan's Cross on Tuesday, 27th ult. Those out included—Mr. R. Russell, M.F.H., Mrs. Russell, Marchioness of Waterford, Miss Lindsay, Brigadier D. Dawnay, Col. R. Dawnay, Mrs. Cubitt, Mr. C. Blaque, Mr. A. Hunt, Mr. R. de Vere Hunt, Miss Walker, Miss Jones, Mr. Carroll, Ballinacree was the first draw, where a brace of foxes gave bounds a lot of cover hunting for an hour. One fox eventually slipped away and was gone some time before bounds got on the line. There followed a very good hound hunt of about 35 minutes on a moderate scent terminating when hounds were stopped just short of Ballinacree Wood. Hounds were then taken to Ballynae Wood, where they soon had a fox on foot, and, running the length of the covert, came out at the Clona end, over the road and left-handed down to the river. Swinging very sharp here, they ran back to the village and down to Moore's Glen, crossed the river at Glenstown and into the cross-channel centre, where they were again hunting in this dense wood, a very tired fox got into a drain under the road and was left. The hunt on Saturday last (1st inst.) was at Kildarmody. Hounds did not find until they reached the far end of the covert at Kildarmody, a fox then taking them to Fairbrook, and was lost pointing for Ballyduff Wood. From the slate quarries there followed a very nice hunt of about 70 minutes, which was stopped at a good scent, hounds turned down for Ballyduff, through this covert and up by Kiersey's farm to the road, where they had a fox on foot, and, running the length of the covert, came out at the Clona end, over the road and left-handed down to the river. Swinging very sharp here, they ran back to the village and down to Moore's Glen, crossed the river at Glenstown and into the cross-channel centre, where they were again hunting in this dense wood, a very tired fox got into a drain under the road and was left. The fox then doubled back for Ballyduff again and on to the Robertstown end of the covert, where hounds marked to ground. The field included the Master (Mr. R. Russell), Mrs. Russell, Col. R. Dawnay, Mrs. Cubitt, Mrs. Cromow (M.H.), Mr. R. Nolan, Mr. R. J. Richardson, Sir E. Goff, Miss Walker, Major Dempsey, Mr. A. Hunt, Mr. Martin Keene, Mr. de Vere Hunt and Mr. J. Power.

Death of Mr. Denis Lyons, Lismore.—The death of Mr. Denis Lyons, Lismore, after an illness of a few months' duration and at an early age, belonging to one of the oldest and most respected families in the district, deceased was an ex-member of the British Navy and had served continuously from his enlistment in July, 1933, to his discharge in the early part of this year owing to disability. Following completion of his training he was posted to the naval base at Gibraltar, where up to the outbreak of war he spent the greater part of his time. During the six years of war he served on several ships. Wounded several times, he had many nerve-racking experiences, particularly in the evacuation of Dunkirk which followed the sinking of his ship he was rescued as the sole surviving member of the crew after nine hours in the water. He received a serious wound in his chest on this occasion, which necessitated many weeks in hospital. After taking part in the Battle of Crete he was transferred to the young man where he received the injury which was the beginning of his ill-health. In a dive-bomber attack on his ship he was severely wounded, and his injuries proved of such a serious nature that he was obliged to remain under medical supervision from that time until his discharge. During the best medical attention and the loving care of his family and relatives, it soon became obvious that the young man would not recover, and on Monday night, after an illness which was borne with true Christian fortitude, he answered the Great Call and was buried in the presence of a large gathering of the general public and again at the interment in the old Churchyard Cemetery on Wednesday, in the presence of another large concourse amply testified to the sorrow and sympathy evoked by his demise. Requiem Masses were celebrated in the presence of his family and friends. The ceremony, with Nuptial Mass and Papal Blessing, was performed by Rev. Fr. J. O'Keefe, O.S.A. (cousin of the bridegroom). Mr. Brendan O'Keefe (cousin) was best man and Miss Kathleen Cotter (sister) was bridesmaid. Both bride and bridegroom are members of well-known families, the bride being daughter of Mrs. M. Cotter and the late Mr. Edmund Cotter, Tinniscart, and the bridegroom is son of Mrs. M. O'Sullivan and the late Mr. John O'Sullivan, Villierstown. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. P. Cotter, and had a charming picture in an ensemble of old rose with accessories to tone and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid was attired in a mustard coloured dress with brown accessories and had a bouquet of pink carnations. After the wedding ceremony, about 30 guests, including the Mayor of Waterford, attended a reception in the Adelphi Hotel. Subsequently the happy couple, whose popularity was strikingly reflected in the very large number of costly and serviceable presents received, left on their honeymoon, which is being spent in Dublin. Mr. and Mrs. O'Sullivan have the best wishes of the countless friends for their future happiness and welfare.

Paging The Ormonde.

Despite the fact that next week's Ormonde programme has nothing sensational to offer, such stars as Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Adolphe Menjou, among the males, and Deanna Durbin, Martha Scott, among the females, should hold interest. Sunday.—A re-issue of Deanna Durbin's early film, "First Love," fills Sunday night's programme. Here is Deanna at her loveliest and best, singing her way through a delightful romantic drama on the Cinderella theme. Miss Durbin gives a very charming and winsome portrayal of a young girl's first love and her ecstatic reveries of many months later. The songs make this picture a first-rate production. It is sheer irresistible entertainment right off the top.

Monday and Tuesday.—There is a double feature for Monday and Tuesday nights. Kansas City Kitty by Joan Travis, is a light comedy, in which the adventures of two girls who take over a run-down music-publishing business form the story. Deanna Durbin is well up to her usual standard, wending her adventurous way, wise-cracking and full of gaiety. A number of popular songs are included. The comedy police court scene in which the wise-cracking and sloop-stick comedy come fast and furious, is the second feature, "The Black Commando," featuring Paul Kelly and Anna Nagel, is a gripping war-time drama.

Wednesday and Thursday.—An excellent picturisation of the famous Stage hit, "Winged Victory," is the mid-week feature. Young personalities from Hollywood are featured, including the 100 members of U.S.A. Air Force, who took part in the original stage version, are included. It should certainly rate as a first-class production. Friday and Saturday.—Features for the close of the week are "Nightly Honourable," starring Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Brod Crawford and Ruth Terry, and "Hi Diddle Diddle," with Adolphe Menjou, Martha Scott, Deanna Durbin, and Sophie Rube. "Nightly Honourable" is a Murder Mystery on a crazy comedy lines. The story deals with the innocent implication of a lawyer's assistant in a murder, which is set against a background of civic double-dealing. The picture is not all laughs; there are some thrills in too. Pat O'Brien takes the leading part.

West Waterford News.

Hotel Montraea Dance.—The popular and genial proprietor of Hotel Montraea has very kindly agreed to the holding of a grand all-night dance in aid of the L.D.F. in the near future. This should prove to be the outstanding social function of the year and a record attendance is assured. The District Staff and Mr. Emerson are leaving nothing undone to make it the most enjoyable dance ever held in West Waterford. The best band ever heard in the South L. being organised and the supper will surpass all previous records, while general arrangements will guarantee the maximum of enjoyment for patrons. It will surely be a night of enjoyment and gaiety in ever-popular Hotel Montraea. G.A.A.—All G.A.A. Clubs in this area are already busily engaged making arrangements for the coming season. It is expected that practically all last season's clubs, with a few additions, will again participate in the championships.

Local Functions.—The Geosh Social Club Dance in Mountstuart on Sunday night last was very successful. It was held at the Kinalea, and excellent music and first-class arrangements contributed to the general enjoyment. Mr. Joe McGrath was chairman of the evening, and the success of the function.

In a dive-bomber attack on his ship he was severely wounded, and his injuries proved of such a serious nature that he was obliged to remain under medical supervision from that time until his discharge. During the best medical attention and the loving care of his family and relatives, it soon became obvious that the young man would not recover, and on Monday night, after an illness which was borne with true Christian fortitude, he answered the Great Call and was buried in the presence of a large gathering of the general public and again at the interment in the old Churchyard Cemetery on Wednesday, in the presence of another large concourse amply testified to the sorrow and sympathy evoked by his demise. Requiem Masses were celebrated in the presence of his family and friends. The ceremony, with Nuptial Mass and Papal Blessing, was performed by Rev. Fr. J. O'Keefe, O.S.A. (cousin of the bridegroom). Mr. Brendan O'Keefe (cousin) was best man and Miss Kathleen Cotter (sister) was bridesmaid. Both bride and bridegroom are members of well-known families, the bride being daughter of Mrs. M. Cotter and the late Mr. Edmund Cotter, Tinniscart, and the bridegroom is son of Mrs. M. O'Sullivan and the late Mr. John O'Sullivan, Villierstown. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. P. Cotter, and had a charming picture in an ensemble of old rose with accessories to tone and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid was attired in a mustard coloured dress with brown accessories and had a bouquet of pink carnations. After the wedding ceremony, about 30 guests, including the Mayor of Waterford, attended a reception in the Adelphi Hotel. Subsequently the happy couple, whose popularity was strikingly reflected in the very large number of costly and serviceable presents received, left on their honeymoon, which is being spent in Dublin. Mr. and Mrs. O'Sullivan have the best wishes of the countless friends for their future happiness and welfare.

Death of Mr. J. O'Donnell, Monasterrive.—Feelings of the deepest regret have been occasioned over a wide area by the death of Mr. Jas. O'Donnell, Monasterrive, which sad event took place on Monday evening, November 20th, at the residence of his sister, Mrs. L. Ryan, New Street, Lismore, after an illness of a few months' duration and at an early age. Belonging to one of the oldest and most respected families in the district, deceased was an ex-member of the British Navy and had served continuously from his enlistment in July, 1933, to his discharge in the early part of this year owing to disability. Following completion of his training he was posted to the naval base at Gibraltar, where up to the outbreak of war he spent the greater part of his time. During the six years of war he served on several ships. Wounded several times, he had many nerve-racking experiences, particularly in the evacuation of Dunkirk which followed the sinking of his ship he was rescued as the sole surviving member of the crew after nine hours in the water. He received a serious wound in his chest on this occasion, which necessitated many weeks in hospital. After taking part in the Battle of Crete he was transferred to the young man where he received the injury which was the beginning of his ill-health. In a dive-bomber attack on his ship he was severely wounded, and his injuries proved of such a serious nature that he was obliged to remain under medical supervision from that time until his discharge.
