The County Library Service and stressed the need for efficient and adequate library provision for the county. He pointed out that the Branch Library at Lismore, now used as County Library Headquarters, had for some years past become too small and unsuited to house the expanding book stock and greatly hampered the efficient working of the Library Service. It definitely could not cope with any further expansion. Besides, the building was structurally unsound and book stock suffered greatly from dampness. The location of the Library Headquarters at the extreme end of the county, increased cost of transport of books to the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the county increased cost of transport of books to the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the county increased cost of transport of books to the majority of centres, besides entailing the unnecessary loss of time by library and the county l report on the general position of the Partition.

A resolution demanding "Repeal of the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, which enacted partition, and the withdrawal of the British forces from the occupied Six Counties of the national territory," was passed at a meeting of the Anti-Partition of Ireland League in Shepherd's Bush, London, on Sunday, December 15th. The meeting, at which the London campaign of the League was launched, pledged itself "to take all constitutional steps to secure the independence of a United Ireland." the administration at U.N.O. criticise Mr. Cahir Healy, M.P., said Ireland was a national and geographical entity, and the population was too small to maintain two Governments. If the wishes of the people of Ireland were consulted, 3,500,000 would vote for a United Ireland, and less than 800,000 might possibly vote for Par-tition. It was the wish of that small minority which the British Government accepted. Lloyd George, when Premier, had no illusions as to what the Irish people desired. He told a delegation from the Irish Convention with a population of 1,280,000, were torn from their motherland by an in February, 1918: "It is quite clear to our minds that no settlement would be acceptable to Ireland upon any basis of the division of the country. It is idle to propose partition now. We must accept the unity of Ireland as a whole. Anything else would lead to failure." TREATY CLAUSE.

The Indian leaders had had conferences at No. 10 Downing Street. Already the British Cabinet had changed its mind as to what the England was inseparable from Partition. There were 5,000,000 Irish of the Mostems, who desired to partition india. Lloyd George and his colleagues assured the Irish delegates in 1821 that Clause 12 meant what it clearly expressed—that the boundary was to be drawn in accordance with the wishes of the people concerned. It was in that belief that partition was exclusively a British responsibility. It was false and mischievous to look upon it as a problem which concerned the Irish alone. Partition, which was unjust to the people of Ireland, was unjust to the peopl Indian proposals meant. They were as it remained there could never be that good feeling and brotherhood between the peoples of these two slands which all men of good will and free Ireland. Was it to be said of them that when they got power they were ready to recant? The Irish hey were ready to recant? The Irish in Britain were organising again, not or party purposes, but to make their motherland a member of the free nations of the world. In England and the latest the lat in Britain were organising again, not for party purposes, but to make their Eire it was one man, one vote; but in Local Government votes. At the same time, thousands who lived in part of a house not separately rated had no votes. It was taxation with-Mr. Healy said he represented more than 30,000 anti-partitionists in Fermanagh, but the Prime Minister democracy in Greece, but not a word about the things that were done in Britain's name behind the iron curtain which concealed her annexation and military occupation of 3,350,000 acres of Irish territory. The mani-fest and blatant continuance of the Imperialist attitude to Ireland made Irish people question the sincerity of the British professions. How could the administration in other countries when, with their full knowledge, the safeguards for the "liberty of the subject" were suspended in the occupied Six Counties? Inside that Imperial bridgehead, protected and sustained by the might of British arms, was a totalitarian regime which began over 25 years ago, when, in open defiance of the wishes of the vast majority of the Irish people the Counties of Antrim, Down, Derry, Armagh, Tyrone, and Fermanagh, torn from their motherland by an Act of the British Parliament, passed solely by British votes. If 1947 was to be the Peace Conference Year let Britain begin at home. The march of events would bring negotiations some time, and if the authorities at

There was nothing likewise repeal. There was nothing Government had to face the problem it would abolish Partition. They had land now but partition, and so long a vote, and in 75 constituencies of Britain the Irish vote would sway the result. Only by the removal of the injustice could the two nations live n happiness and peace.

"OF REBEL DESCENT." The Labour Government were not responsible for the partitioning of Ireland, and they could remove the cause of the strife of a century. It was to the advantage of England as much as Ireland to have a settlement. Ireland owned no battleships and no atomic bombs, but they had a social and national influence in almost every English-speaking country in every English-speaking country in the world Labour, when out of office had been in favour of a united a lamentable "countryiness." country, only that they suffered from a lamentable "contrariness." Nevertheless several attempts were made in the upper reaches to kill fish. At Knocknagree the Guards succeeded in detecting some cases of poaching, and in Kanturk four persons were apprehended by the Inspector. One female salmon was killed by the amounted to approximately 8,000 were destroyed. The Inspector suggested that the Board communicate with their solicitor to see that the date, when final arrangements are to maximum penalty is imposed in such be made to establish a fund for this cases in view of the serious loss entailed by the destruction of potential spawning salmon. Waterkeepers and the Guards frustrated attempts to kill salmon and spears were captured with other illegal gear. Due to a late run of salmon entering the main river and tributaries, the depositing of ova will be late this year. If the rivers remain fairly high no damage can be done. The Inspector applied for permission to have the launch engine overhauled prior to being put driver and waterkeeper to replace John S. Boland, who is appointed lifeboat mechanic. At Lismore Hat-
