DUNGARVAN URBAN COUNCIL

Mr. T. McCarthy (Chairman) presided at the meeting of the Dungarvan Urban Council on last Friday night. Also present: Senator John Butler, Messre. M Clancy, T. A. Kyne, N. Kelly, S. J. Moynihan (Manager), J. Ormond (Acting B.S.), and E. O Dirighe (Cierk). SCHOOLS' SANITARY ARRANGE-MENTS.

The Chairman said he would like the Sanitary Inspector to pay a visit to the schools in the town and Abbeyside; and find out what sanitary arrangements were in them. He understood there were dry closets in them. Mr. Clancy—If an inspection were made it would be no harm.

Chairman—I know that in the C.B.S. they are all right, but I don't know about the others. I'm not saying they haven't, but I think it would be better to have an inspection. be better to have an inspection.

O'Donnell (only one received) for the supplying of milk under the same scheme, at the maximum retail price, was also accepted.

TOWN LIGHTING.

Arising out of the minutes. Mr. It would cost an enormous amount of money if they did all the scheme. The Department suggested big things, but it is the ratepayers who must pay for them. He thought that the roof should be repaired to keep the rain from coming through, but they could never make it suitable for all the things it was used for.

Mr. Kyne said he had a feeling that the Town Hall was essential for the

The Clerk added, in reply to a ques-on by the Chalrman, that it was in Mr. Clancy—They go out at 11 clock, and then we get a reduction

Mr. Kyne—11 o'clock is too early.
People have complained to me about it. I could understand it during the war; there was good reason for it—coal and water were scarce.
Senator Butler—We are back to the old time now and I think there should be an extension. I wonder is the ESB, carrying out in other towns these restrictions.

Replying to the Chairman, the Clerk stated that provision for the Council's share are provided in a average of £6 a month credit in respect of the lighting.

Mr. Kyne—I think a half shour more, until 11 o'clock, would be better.

This was agreed to.

PARKING OF CARS ON THE SQUARE.

Consideration of the protest by residents on the Square to the parking of motor cars in that area, which was adjourned from the last meeting, came before the meeting again.

Senator Butler said he understood that this question of parking cars on the Square came before the Court, when the licence was granted, and a condition attached to the licence was that the cars were to be parked on the Square.

The Chairman thought it unfair to have the cars parked on the Square. He thought they could be parked outside the old cinema.

Senator Butler referred to the minute dirt tests reports which used to come before the Council years ago, and asked were they still being carried out.

The Manager said they were, but the county medical officer of health was getting the reports now.

Manager—I think you can do nothing about it until the next court.

Mr. Kelly held that the Square was the proper place to park them.

Chairman—No matter where they are parked they will be a bit of a

Mr. Kyne said it looked to him that outside the old cinema was the only place where the least annoyance would be caused.

Mr Clancy said this was not a question of the ordinary parking of cars; it was the parking of cars coming to dances. He was in favour of getting the cars shifted. They were causing annoyance, and they should try to minimise that annoyance.

Manager—I'm afraid we can do nothing about it. A suggestion by the Clerk to refer the matter to the Guards, to see if they could do anything about the annoyance, was agreed to.

TOWN HALL IMPROVEMENTS.

The next item on the agenda was the consideration of the letter from the Department regarding the proposed improvements to the Town Hall and in which suggestions were made the Department regarding the proposed improvements to the Town Hall and in which suggestions were made in connection with the improvements.

The Clerk said that the net profits from the hall for the year ending March 31st last was £74.

Mr. Kelly suggested that Mr. Ormond take on the job of carrying out the improvements to the hall, as he was well acquainted with the hall. Senator Butler gave it as his opinion that they could never do anything with the hall. He thought that the best thing would be to build it of from the ground up, if they wanted it to be of any benefit to the hall.

Mr. Ormond—We are advised by this circular to do it.

Mr. Kyne said that if a new roof was not put on the hall they would not have a hall at all.

Mr. Ormonde said that there was a lot of space underneath which could be converted into dressing rooms and a supper room.

Mr. Kyne (to Mr. Ormond)—Can you give us an approximate estimate to do the whole scheme?

Mr. Ormond—I think £7,000 or £8,000 was the estimate before, but it is a mere guess.

Manager—Would the Council suggest an architect to look at it?

Mr. Clancy thought that they suggested that before. The hall was used for many purposes—dances chiefly—and they were held on the top floor. The walls were bad and were held together with iron rods, and vibration at dances was not good for it. If anybody had the enterprise to build a dance hall in the town there would not be so much dancing in the hall.

Replying to Senator Butler, Mr. Ormond said that a Department circular suggested that they purchase

Mr. Veale referred to the concrete kerb in the garden, and said it was a terrible thing that an inspector could come down from the Department and order things like that to be done, behind the backs of the Committee.

Mr. Kyne—Who passed the money for it?

The C.E.O. explained that one of the things the inspector suggested was to do away with the hedge and the bushes in the garden in order to essen the work for the man employed in the garden, and to put down the

LOCAL HAPPENINGS | NEED FOR EXTENSION OF INDUSTRY

Mr. Lemass at Youghal

THE extension of industry was the key to many of their most pressing problems, being of even greater importance now than before the war, declared Mr. Lemass at Youghal on Monday, when opening three new factories in the area. American aid could only temporarily solve their fundamental, long-term problem, which arose from the fact that they were not balancing their total trade, he added.

The predominant importance of agriculture in their economic system was not questioned, but without manufacturing industry to supplement it an independent economic existence—perhaps even political independence—would be impossible to sustain, the Minister stated. Not even the temporary dollar difficulty should impede their economic progress, which must drive ahead without a stop.

The predominant importance of agriculture in our economic system of agriculture in our economic system was not questioned, but without manufacturing industry to supplement it, and independent economic existence, perhaps even political independence, would be impossible to sustain.

In present conditions the elimination of unavoidable imports was every bit as important as the expansion of exports, and even now insion of exports, and even now industrial enterprise was a step to that

Anybody who wished to understand the nature of the economic problems, with which this country had now to contend must take as his starting point the basic fact that this year imports were running at ninety million pounds per annum, while visible ex-ports would not exceed thirty million ports would not exceed thirty million pounds leaving a gap of approximately sixty million pounds.

That relatively large deficit was a danger signal which could not be ignored. How could we get other countries to send us ninety million pounds of goods when we only gave them thirty million pounds back.

Nobody would give us goods for nothing, and, therefore, those who were sending their goods, here, must be paid somehow.

The answer to that question was, first, that we had other exports to supplement exports of physical

Details of the methods of operation were not yet known, and it would be next Spring before all the legislative and administrative steps in the U.S.A. could be completed, assuming that everything went according to anticipations. If a consequence of American aid was to enable European currencies, including sterling, to become again freely convertible into dollars, our problem would be greatly eased, apart from other benefits which might be derived from it.

Our long-term problem was, however, more fundamental and American aid could not solve it except temporarily. It arose from the fact that we were not balancing our fotal trade.

Even if there were no assistance of the was a farmer and as such he believed that it was a great industry, but one which required a great deal of rejuvenation. "If we could do for farming what has been done for the woollen and rayon industries, it would not give such a low output per man as it does," he said.

Dealing with criticisms that many of the industries were artificial because the raw materials had to be imported, Mr. Stanley pointed out that the textile industry of Britain was totally dependent on imports. During the war that freedom of conversion was stopped, and we got the dollars we needed by drawing on what is known as the Sterling Area Pool, that is to say, the gold and foreign exchange held in Great Britain as backing for sterling and which was regarded as the common property of all countries whose currencies are based on sterling like ours. Textiles have very bright prospects for the future not only in internal trade but also in the development of export, to which, I know, Mr. Dwyer and his colleagues are fully alive.

The industries with which Mr. Mr. Lemass said that the extention of industry was the key of many of our most pressing problems, economic and social. Its importance was even greater now than before the war, because, whereas formerly we could have hoped to maintain some purchases in dollar countries to the amounts which we earn ourselves or can otherwise procure, plus the limited allocation from the Sterling Area Pool.

The two fine factories we inspected would bring joy to the heart of anybody who is responsible for industry and commerce, not principally because of the appearance of the factories nor the happy workers in them, but through the knowledge of the courage that planned them and the

That means that we would have to do without supplies of various kinds unless we could produce them for ourselves or increase our exports to dollar countries to pay for them, or find alternative sources of supply where payment in sterling would be accepted.

The expectation was that the curtailmen of supplies from dollar areas will be for a limited period only if the Marshall Plan for European Aid was fulfilled.

way detrimental to British commercial interests.

The bad old idea that one nation's industrial progress must necessarily mean another nation's loss, is gone. That idea was born of the prolonged economic depression between the wars and of the illusion that a country could escape the consequences of a widespread international slump at the expense of its neighbours. Now it is understood that prosperity to be permanent must be universal, and that the advance to prosperity based on sound economic development of any one country is to benefit all. The British authorities recognise that our determination to expand our manufacturing industry is not merely a natural and inevitable policy for us, but that it will afford them for many years shead an expanding market berefore coming out and nad New Zealand wool going through the death of Mr. Bartholmew Brown, Fernville, Lismore, which took place at his residence on Sunday morning last following a considerable period of ill-health and at a comparatively early age.
