At the bottom of Bridge Street, crossing the Liffey into Church Street is Father Mathew Bridge. Commenced in October, 1816, it is built upon the site of the earliest of all the bridges over the river, which carried the travellers from the old walled city until destroyed in 1385. A new bridge was erected by the Dominican Friars in 1428 and stood until 1802. The site of these bridges marks the highest point ever reached by ships entering the port of Dublin. It is claimed that Little John, of Robin Hood fame, once discharged an arrow from here as far as Oxmanton Green, nearly a mile away.
