THE HORSE THROUGH THE AGES No. 1

CHINA
The horse was introduced into China by Fo Hi nearly 4,000 years B.C. The heavier types of Chinese horses were Mongolian in origin but it is possible that there was a link with the west in the horses of the district of Feighan which were said to sweat blood—a peculiarity shared with the Spanish Andalusian horse. Another possible connection is that both countries had the same stepping horse reminiscent of the modern hackney. The reins were introduced into the Chinese held their horses as shown in the introduction of laws to prevent cruelty as early as 1766 B.C. by Cheng Tang.

Recent Lecture by the County Librarian to Dungarvan Branch Bantracht na Tuatha WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS AND P. H. PEARSE

"TWO FRIENDLY ENEMIES"

In 1905, Pearse was still editing An Claidheamh Soluis, and was consequently obliged to spread his writer's fingers over a very broad literary key-board, keep in touch with every controversial topic, guide and form the opinions of that section of the public who supported his paper.

On April 22nd he wrote: "Poets and others discussed the question of nationality in literature last week at University College. We find Irish quarrel with in Mr. Yeats's speech. Except for the strange infatuation which makes him see a great dramatist in Mr. Synge, Mr. Yeats's views on the position and purpose of his theatre are entirely sane. It might be said that this country, in ten, twenty or fifty years would speak nothing but Irish and there would be no place in it for them. He thought it would be a very good thing for this country if it could resist itself to its own past and become entirely Irish speaking; but still they, dramatists, could only obey the words of the poet who said: 'Let us be merry before we die. With all this we can sympathise. We do not call 'Kincora' or 'On Baile's Strand' Irish literature, but we call them very beautiful and ennobling plays, and we think it better that Irish people should crowd to see them than that they should crowd to see 'The Cingales' or 'Winnie Brook, Widow.' We recognize in the Irish National Theatre the long as it is true to its best instincts, not a danger to but an ally of, the language movement. We thus go almost as far as Mr. Yeats has gone in our recent utterance—there were days in which he put forward lofty claims which Irish Ireland was compelled to disallow."

At the same time Pearse was producing realistic plays. He was squandering his gifts on useless ventures and unsuitable dramatic material.

"While Yeats was alternatively ambitious and donning the various masks (as he himself would call them), of unrequited lover, magician, mystical high priest and 'arrogant and self-important manager, with a combination of snobbery and aristocracy, Pearse had decided to abandon the Editorship of An Claidheamh Soluis and to devote his time to the production of Irish Education which he had formulated in the columns of his paper during a period of five years."

During the years 1908 to 1913, when Pearse was engaged in his educational adventure and before he became totally absorbed in the Volunteer movement, he himself turned play-wright. According to Mary Colum "Sir John Rhys, Dean of Celtic Studies and old Dr. Sigerson were enchanted with Pearse's plays written in Irish. One of these was a passion play acted by teachers and students in the Abbey Theatre, kindly lent for the purpose by W. B. Yeats. It was a minor dramatic sensation so that accounts of it were not only in the London but in the continental papers."

In 1913 Yeats sent Pearse the manuscript of a play by the Bengali poet Rabindranath Tagore, "The Post Office." Pearse shared in Yeats's admiration for Tagore's poetry. "The Post Office" and "An Rí" were produced together by the generosity of Yeats for the benefit of St. Enda's, on May 17th, 1913. Pearse wrote concerning this performance: "Mr. Yeats in a lecture on Rabindranath Tagore, had spoken of Mr. Tagore's school as 'The Indian St. Enda's.' A friend of mine, interested by this, suggested that we should go. Mr. Yeats asked him whether his Theatre could not do something to help St. Enda's. We had hardly time to frame our proposition in words when Mr. Yeats assented to it, and then he did a more generous thing still, for he offered to produce for the benefit of St. Enda's the play of Mr. Tagore—and he invited me to produce a St. Enda's play along with Mr. Tagore's. I understood then more clearly than ever that no one is so generous as a great artist; for a great artist is always giving."

The two friendly enemies have composed their differences as far as is humanly possible. Yeats sees in Pearse the man of determined persevering action combined with the poet. It is an ideal towards which he himself has at times fitfully striven. Pearse with the tolerance born of the breath of real charity, looks behind Yeats's many masks and sees there a great artist with a generous heart.

Yeats and Pearse, had, on the surface, many things in common. Both were dreamers—poets and playwrights with imaginative creative and sensitive souls. And here the exciting drama of her automatic writing, which must have con-

ARDMORE SOLDIER HOME FROM CONGO
Amongst the members of the 32nd Battalion, who recently returned from duty in the Congo was Corporal Michael Gowen, Ardmore, who looks fit and bronzed following his strenuous duty as a member of the U.N. Forces, Corporal Gowen, who took home a number of souvenirs, including Baluba bows and arrows, is a brother of Sgt. P. Gowen of the Military College, Carrigrohane. KINSALEEG-CLASHMORE RARRIERS
This popular party, who are having a very successful season met at Piltown on Sunday last when a big number of followers turned out. Foxes were very plentiful and one run resulted in a kill.

The annual general meeting of the Clashmore G.A.A. Club took place on Tuesday night last. Full report in next issue.

WEATHER PROBLEMS
The continuation of the bad weather has created many further problems for the rural section of the community. Having experienced the worst harvest for many years, farmers now find that due to the sudden change in weather, they are unable to commence ploughing operations. Many roads in rural areas are in a very bad condition due to continuous flooding, and some cases minor subsidances have occurred.

THE SALMON FISHING SEASON
The salmon fishing season will open in this area on Wednesday next, 1st February. It is hoped that fish will be more plentiful than last year.

A.G.M. OF CLASHMORE GULLD I.C.A.
The annual general meeting of the Clashmore Guild of the I.C.A., was held on Friday last, in the National School. The officers elected were: President—Mrs. B. O'Keefe; Vice-President—Miss Mary Coughlan; Secretary and Press Correspondent—Miss M. J. Russell; Assistant Secretary—Miss C. Russell; Treasurer—Miss Linda Coughlan.

The Secretary read the Minutes reviewing the activities of the Guild in 1960. The members present felt that all had given of their best during the year under review. The various functions had been very successful and enjoyable.

When the Treasurer gave her report the financial position was considered reasonably satisfactory.

After some discussion concerning the annual dinner, to be held in February and the dance to be held later in the year, a small committee was formed to make arrangements for all future dances.

An enjoyable tea was served by the hostesses, after which the Meeting closed.

Watch out—there's 'flu about! And when you are 'One Degree Under' you are in constant danger of falling victim to 'flu germs. But don't worry. Carry 'Aspro' with you. If you feel run-down and out of sorts, take 2 'Aspro' and rest. IF YOU GET 'FLU'... GO TO BED. Take 2 'Aspro' with a hot drink. Repeat the dose every 3 hours. That will bring your temperature down and relieve your headache and muscular pains. There is no finer remedy for the miseries of 'flu' than 'Aspro'. Stay in bed. Don't rise too soon after 'flu' or you may have a relapse. CALL YOUR DOCTOR—especially if your temperature is high.

E.S.B. Speed up Services

HITTING THE HEADLINES

A two-way radio communications system which is playing a big part in speeding up service to over 620,000 customers has now been installed in nearly all of the Electricity Supply Board's 10 administrative districts.

The need for this very extensive communication service was brought about by the large increase in the number of consumers in the past 10 years and in particular, by the extension of rural electrification into the more remote areas.

This nationwide radio scheme which entailed the erection of 90 fixed stations throughout the country and the fitting of 100 service vans with communication apparatus is now in continual operation in all kinds of country ranging from the flat midlands to the mountainous coastline.

The District radio scheme was first installed in Galway, Athlone, Portlaoise and Dublin No. 2 District on a trial basis. These Districts extending on a line from east to west best represented the different types of terrain served by the Board.

The results were so favourable that it was decided to extend the scheme to all districts as quickly as possible. This has now been done in the Dundalk, Sligo and Tralee Districts and will be completed this year in the Cork, Limerick and Waterford Districts.

In the Waterford District an aerial erected on a 120 ft. mast situated on an 800 ft. high hill near Glenpille, will cover an area extending from Lismore in the west to Arklow in the east and from Thomas in the north to Tralee in the south. This aerial will provide a direct link between the control office at District Headquarters and the service vehicles.

For example, a consumer in a small town, eleven miles from District Headquarters, phoned the Area Electrician from a neighbour's house requesting a visit by an Electrician. The Area Electrician, who has the radio van which was in the neighbourhood. When the consumer returned to his own house, the E.S.B. van was at the door.

The use of radio communication in the carrying out of the day-to-day work of business firms in Ireland is a recent development and this is the first instance of it being used on such a large scale—radio taxis and Garda patrol cars are now well-known and many firms in Dublin have vans equipped with radios. These systems, however, only work over very short distances, and the facilities provided are limited.

The E.S.B. has had short range radio installations of this type in Dublin and Cork cities for a number of years. When they decided to extend these facilities to all country districts it was essential to provide long range equipment and the same principle was taken at the opportunity to provide increased facilities in the form of selective calling, inter-district communication and a three-channel operation.

During the past week several consumers have been struck down with influenza and a few of its incidence amongst juveniles both the Convent and Boys' National Schools have been closed.

BEECHAM EXPAND IN IRELAND

On Monday, January 23rd, the Minister for Industry and Commerce, Mr. J. Lynch, B.L.T.D. opened the Factory and Office Extension of Beecham at Long Mile Road, Drinagh, Dublin, saying:

"I am very pleased to be present here to-day at the opening of this extension to a factory which has made such striking progress since its establishment here in 1954. The increase in employment from 110 to over 230 in the short space of less than five years is an achievement of which the company might feel justifiable pride and is in itself an appreciable contribution to our national economy."

"It is noteworthy that the products of the factory are based largely on the use of native materials, including such items as glucose and blackcurrants as well as glass, ware, packing and print. The name Beecham is, of course, very well known in the pharmaceutical world and the Irish company, through its association with the Beecham group, have the benefit of the research carried out by the parent organisation."

"The initiative displayed by the Company in the range of their production programme speaks well for the enterprise and efficiency of all concerned and I offer them my congratulations and my good wishes for the success of their activities in the future."

In introducing the Minister, Major G. T. Ponsobly, Chairman of Beecham (Ireland) said: "The opening of the new office and factory extension which we celebrate to-day is the third major step forward in the expansion of our company which has taken it from its beginnings in 1938 to an organisation of some magnitude, employing double the number of people that it did in 1955. It is the policy and cordial co-operation of Beecham to utilise Irish raw materials, packaging and printing. A notable example is Ribena, the bottled fruit drink which is becoming widely known and recognised for its unique properties and for which the Wexford crop provides sufficient fruit. The growing of Wexford fruit in Wexford was started by Beecham in collaboration with the Department of Agriculture and represents an additional and very welcome success for farmers, whom we can, and do respond to the right incentive."

Advice to Poultry-Keepers

Have your flocks in full lay during the period JULY-DECEMBER when egg prices are best to do this, rely mainly on GOOD QUALITY EARLY HATCHED PULLETS.

Now is the time to purchase day-old pullets to come into lay in July when egg prices normally begin to rise and to cull your flock and get rid of older and unproductive birds.

A list of hatcheries offering Day-old Chicks for early delivery can be obtained from the Department of Agriculture (Poultry and Eggs Division), 16 Upper Mount Street, Dublin.

Your Poultry Instructor will be pleased to advise you on Culling of Flocks and all other Poultry problems.
