

of Portugal, that he was not come to make war upon them, but with a powerful army of one hundred and two thousand men to drive the English into the sea. It is to be hoped that the example of what has occurred in this country will teach the people of this and other nations what value they ought to place on such promises and assurances, and that there is no security for life, or for any thing which renders life valuable, excepting in death.

I have the honour to enclose returns of killed and wounded in the several affairs with the enemy since they commenced their retreat.

I have received the most able and cordial assistance throughout these operations from Lieutenant General Sir Brent Spencer, and Marshal Sir W. Beresford, whom I had requested to cross the Tagus, and who has been with me since the 11th inst.; from Major General Sir W. Erskine, Picton, Cole, and Campbell, Major General Blake and Major General the Honourable C. Colville, and the General and other Officers commanding brigades under their orders respectively.

I am particularly indebted to the Quarter Master General, Colonel Murray, for the assistance I have received from him and the Deputy Adjutant General the Honourable Colonel Penkyn, and the Officers of the Adjutant and Quarter Master General's departments; as also to those of my personal staff, who have given me every assistance in their power.

I am sorry to inform your Lordship, that Badajos surrendered on the 18th inst.

Lisbon, March 6, 1811.

Major General Cole joined Major General Nightingale at Espinhal on the afternoon of the 14th, and which gave us the power of turning the strong position of Miranda de Corvo, induced the enemy to abandon it on that night. They destroyed at this place a great number of cartridges, and buried and otherwise destroyed or concealed the ammunition which they had carried; and they likewise burnt much of their baggage, and the road through the march from Miranda is strewn with the carcasses of men and animals, and destroyed cartridges and baggage.

We found the enemy's whole army yesterday in a very strong position on the Ceira, having one corps as an advanced guard in front of Foy d'Aronce this side of the river.

Immediately made arrangements to drive in the advanced guard, preparatory to the movements which it might be expedient to make to cross the Ceira this morning.

Brigadier General Pack's brigade had been detached in the morning through the mountains to the left, as well to turn the enemy in his position at Miranda de Corvo, as in the view to any other they might take up on this side of the Ceira. The light division, under Major General Sir W. Erskine, was ordered to possess some heights immediately above Foy d'Aronce, while Major General Picton's division was ordered along the great road to attack the left of the enemy's position and of the village.

The 8th division, under Major General Campbell, and the 9th and 10th Light Dragoons, supported the light division, and the first division and the 14th and 15th Royal Dragoons, the 3d.

These movements succeeded in forcing the enemy to abandon his strong positions on this side of the Ceira, with considerable loss. The Colonel of the 9th regiment was made prisoner.

The light troops of Gen. Picton's division, under Lieut. Col. Williams, and those of Major General Nightingale's brigades, were principally engaged on the right, and the 30th regiment in front of the light division; and the troops behaved in the most gallant manner. The Horse Artillery likewise, under Captains Ross and Bull, distinguished themselves upon this occasion. The troops took much baggage and some ammunition cartridges in Foy d'Aronce.

I had been prevented from moving till a late hour in the morning by the fog; and it was dark by the time we gained possession of the last position of the enemy's advanced guard.

In the night the enemy destroyed the bridge on the Ceira, and retreated, leaving a small rear guard on the river.

FOREIGN OFFICE, APRIL 6, 1811.

A dispatch was received this morning by the Marquis Wellesley, from Charles Stuart, Esq. His Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, of which the following is an extract:—

Lisbon, March 23.

The army of General Massena continues to retreat towards the frontier, and every march is facilitated by the abandonment of wounded, the destruction of baggage, and whatever can encumber their movement.

They attempted during the 18th and 19th to make a stand in the Sierra de Monts, but they were driven from that position with the loss of 600 prisoners on the 19th. On the 21st they reached Caliza. The British head quarters were at Pombro on the 18th, and at Algaliz on the 20th. The cavalry and light troops continued in fight of the French rear guard, and the movement of the allied army along the front of the Estrella, which flank the positions in the valley of the Mondego, promises new impediments to their retreat.

The accounts from the frontier of Spanish Biscaya make it clear that the greater part of the French force which came from Andalusia have returned to that province.

Marshal Soult moved in the middle of the month towards Seville at the head of 4000 infantry, and 1500 cavalry. No considerable force has been left in the town of Badajos.

The frigate of Camo Major continued during the 19th, 20th, and 21st. A breach having been effected, the place capitulated on the morning of the latter day. The garrison, in number about 1500 militia, have remained prisoners of war. The French force before the place consisted of 4000 infantry and 500 cavalry.

The advanced guard of Marshal Beresford reached Portleago on the 20th, where that officer was expected on the following day.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FURTHER EXTRACTS FROM THE LISBON PAPERS.

Lisbon, March 13.

By letters from Coimbra, of the beginning of the present month, we learn that Colonel Trant had ordered the inhabitants of Miranda de Corvo, Louza, and their vicinities on the Alva, to be collected in Coimbra, and to the north of the Mondego; with all their effects; as well to prevent their falling victims to the French in their flight; as to deprive the latter of any subsistence in their progress. These people have arrived at Coimbra in great numbers, and are employed in repairing the houses which had been ravaged and laid waste by the enemy.

The corps of Drum, cantoned in Leiria, only left that city on the 9th, at ten at night. They left five to some buildings, certainly to impede the march of our troops, which were very near. The Royal Guards took prisoners 50 of the French, and killed many men and horses.

The theatre of war is receding from us, along the banks of the Alva and the Mondego; and on this account no intelligence has been received hitherto than that we published in our Gazette yesterday.

March 15.

The intelligence that the French halted between Pombal and Miranda de Corvo is confirmed. Colonel Trant occupied Coimbra, and fired along the right bank of the Mondego. Other militia were posted on the farther side of the Alva. Important intelligence was expected every morning.

March 19.

We have received nothing new from the armies since the accounts we published yesterday. The allies were making great marches, some of twenty-four hours, in which they only rested three hours; to give some subsistence to the horses; and the Portuguese infantry accompanied the British cavalry. All the troops marched in the different directions assigned them with the greatest celerity, and animated with the most ardent enthusiasm.

Lisbon, March 25.

This day a letter was received from Figueroa, which states that there had been fighting on the 13th and 14th in Pombal, (which was destroyed), Redinha, and Coimbra, when the French troops followed very closely, and that firing the Coimbra bridge broken down, they attempted the passage of the Mondego; a little above that place; but failed with numerous loss.

Marshal Beresford is gone to join Lord Wellington, but his division still remains at Chamusca, under Major General W. Stewart.
