BY THE AUTHOR OF 'LAPPING.'

Invitation to a Robin.

Come little flutterer, freely come...

Mark 'twixt thy tempests fiercely blow...

Nor couldst thou leave the stormy sky...

BANK OF ENGLAND.

TO THE GOVERNOR, DEPUTY GOVERNOR, AND COURT OF DIRECTORS OF THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

Gentlemen—The interest which I have always taken in the general good conduct and management of the Bank...

To perform intimately acquainted with the true principles of finance, it is unnecessary to explain...

The general utility upon the subject of finance, may be classed under two distinct heads.

The other, that the extension of our paper circulation is the sole occasion of the unfavourable state of the exchange...

The enormous increase which has taken place in our foreign expenditure, the immense sums which have been paid for neutral freights...

Although there is great difficulty in ascertaining the manner in which paper operates upon the exchange...

The new principle adopted by the Court of Directors, that no other limits should be prescribed to the issue of their paper...

ferious evils; the Bank paper in that case, instead of being confined within about twenty millions...

I remain, with all due respect, your sincere Friend, SAMUEL HOARE.

MEMORIAL OF WILLIAM TODD JONES, ESQ. TO HIS MAJESTY, 1808.

RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED TO THE THREE STATES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

CITY OF DUBLIN, MARCH 9th, 1808.

TO HIS MAJESTY, WILLIAM TODD JONES, ESQ.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY, I am with the deepest reluctance that the singular misery of my case induces the most respectful of your Majesty's subjects to intrude upon your Majesty's attention...

I was born a Gentleman, educated a Barrister, and had for many years a member of your Majesty's Parliament of Ireland...

But, May it please your Majesty, and I trust that my determination will appear dignified, and justifiable, this infamous proposition, under the mask of lenity...

May it please your Majesty; my adventures have been secret, malignant, and successful in my oppression, on account of the interest I have taken from my earliest life in the relaxation of the unusual Penal Code of Ireland...

Mr. Richard Bagnwell, having in his history of Ireland evaded the customary historical literary decencies...

Establishment of these statements, your Majesty's humble Memorialist refers to Mr. Jeremiah Murphy, chief Goaler...

May it please your Majesty; at this period chosen by the Earl of Hardwicke for my plebany and unconditional discharge...

Thus, May it please your Majesty, I was deprived of my liberty, my reputation, my pecuniary credit, and my health...

You will not doubt believe, that it was not without much concern that I heard of your most august Majesty's concern in my case...

May it please your Majesty; this Letter from Mr. Saurin, whose words I wish it to be directed and franked to me by Mr. Wickham...

To the Committee of Privileges on the Berkeley Peerage, the Countess of Berkeley was examined at considerable length. The Lord Chancellor took an opportunity of expressing his disapprobation of the publication of a part of the minutes of evidence in this case in some of the papers. The further consideration was ordered for Thursday next.

THANKS TO LORD WELLINGTON.

The Earl of Liverpool rose, in pursuance of notice, to move the Thanks of the House to Lord Viscount Wellington. His Lordship observed upon the plan of the campaign in Portugal arranged by Lord Wellington, and the confident expectation which that Noble Lord had from the commencement of his operations entertained of ultimate success.

Lord Wellington had suggested and acted upon a plan entirely new; he was of opinion that Portugal could not be effectually defended on its frontier, but that the only effectual defence for that country was to be found in front of Lisbon. He had accordingly acted upon that idea, fortified in every possible way the position which he intended ultimately to make a stand, and where he was convinced he could do so with full and complete effect.

return of Wm. O'Dell, Esq. to serve in Parliament for the county of Lincolnc, were of opinion that Mr. O'Dell had been duly elected—and that they were also of opinion that the Petition was not frivolous or vexatious.—The report was ordered to be laid on the table.

Mr. FOSTER brought in a Bill for raising the sum of 2,500,000l. for the service of Ireland.—Read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time on Monday next.

Mr. HOWARTH, from the Exchequer Office, presented an account of the net Receipt of the War Taxes for the year 1810.—Ordered to lie on the table.

BULLION REPORT. Mr. VANSITTART rose, in conformity with the notice he had given on a former evening, to put the House in possession of the Resolutions which he intended to move, when the subject of the Bank Restriction should be brought before the House.

That the right to alter and regulate the legal money of the realm has always been a Royal Privilege—the changes made in the currency being either by Royal Proclamation, or in concurrence with the opinion of the Legislature.

That the Promissory Notes of the Bank of England are engagements to pay certain sums of money, in legal coin—and that for more than a century past, the Bank Company were ready to give cash for such notes, until restrained in February 1797, first by an order in Council, and afterwards by an act of Parliament.

That the Notes have hitherto been held in general estimation, in all matters in which the coin of the Realm was heretofore used.

That at various periods, prior to the present time, the course of exchange has been unfavourable to Great Britain, and the price of Bullion has been greatly raised—and that this was usually the case, when extensive military operations were carried on abroad by this country, or when very great importations of foreign grain took place.

That such unfavourable circumstances took place during the wars of King William and Queen Anne; in the years 1795 and 1797 the war produced a similar effect; and, in consequence, an act of Parliament passed in the year 1797, restraining the Bank, for a limited time, from any further issue of specie.

subject to detail, was to be entered for the gratification of his duty. The influence which was now to be submitted to the House, was one as eminently distinguished by the display of talent and valour as any in the history of the country.

There was nothing in the history of the empire more admirable, or more deserving of renown, than the campaign in Portugal—nothing of so much gain, with so little loss—nothing of so much prospective advantage.

The speaker of the loss, because it ought to be considered in the estimate of victory. There were successful of the noblest order, marked with all the strong features of devotedness and heroism, but which the loss seemed to throw a gloom over the glory.

In the brilliant victory of Talavera, in the late victory of Barrosa, the mind was naturally forced to think of the loss, the precious and gallant blood which paid the price of the victory.

There are two sets of men in England: one who think that the sun of British glory has set for ever; the other who think, that that sun never shone with richer splendour. It is impossible to doubt, that those who could despair of our success must also be more rejoiced and more full of gratitude, than those who were more sanguine from the beginning.

But I must be allowed still to look up to the effects of this great effort. I look upon the exertions of our allies—a year at least—has been their success in their struggle against desperate tyrants.

They have gained this, if they have gained more. But they have gained more. They have learned the value of national spirit—they have learned the value of combined force—they have learned the strength of discipline. They have seen the Peninsula the importance of submitting to receive our assistance; and the effects of this lesson are incalculable.

countrymen at home, while those plans were ripening which have led to the perfect fulfilment of the object of his exertions.

General Taitelen, General Ferguson, and Lord G. Grenville, concurred cordially in the motion. Mr. PONSARD thought that Lord Wellington deserved the thanks of that House, and of the nation. He was of opinion, that the campaign was judiciously planned, and ably executed; and that the result had not tended more to exalt the glory than to insure the safety of the country. (Hear!)

The question was then put, and carried sc. sc. The Thanks of the House were then voted, sc. sc. to the Officers, non-commissioned Officers, and Privates, for their eminent services, uniformly performed during the campaign, by which additional lustre had been reflected upon the British arms.

A similar vote was passed sc. sc. to thank the Officers, &c. of the Portuguese army serving under Sir W. Bercford.

The House then resolved itself into a Committee of Supply.

Mr. LORR rose, pursuant to notice, to bring forward the vote for the army extraordinaries, and concluded by moving, that the sum of 6,270,000l. be granted to His Majesty, to defray the Extraordinaries of the army from December, 1809, to December, 1810.

After a few words from Mr. Freemanle, Mr. Percival, and General Taitelen, the grant was voted, and the remaining regular extraordinaries voted.

Lord PALMERSTON obtained leave to bring in a Bill for extending the allowance to innkeepers for the subsistence of soldiers.

The order of the day being moved for the House going into a Committee on the Irish Stage-Coach Bill.

The letter received this morning from our correspondent at Plymouth, announces the arrival of the Intelligenc. Leant. Tinker, with dispatches from Lisbon, which port he left on the 19th. The dispatches, we understand, do not bring any additional news—the French being driven quite out of Portugal, and Lord Wellington not having pursued them into Spain.

The following is an extract of a private letter from Stockholm, dated the 21st inst. three days later than the intelligence received from that capital by the last mail from Heligoland; the transaction it alludes to may lead to events of some importance:—Information has just reached this place, that some French privateers have had the audacity to cut out and capture, at Matruk, four Swedish vessels, and carry them away. This news irritated almost every one; and, tomorrow, or rather to lay this very evening, a messenger was dispatched by Bernadotte to Carlskrona, with orders to Admiral Puke, (name, I do not recollect) to send out a frigate and two cutters, and make reprisals on every French privateer or ship fitted out from Prussia for French account. A war with Denmark is considered as unavoidable; and hostilities, if not already commenced, will, I think, in a few hours.

It is difficult to divine what may be the secret and ultimate views of Charles XIII. and his adopted successor, Bernadotte, with respect to the political conduct to be pursued by Sweden. But at present there is at least an appearance of a determination to support the maritime rights and independence of that hitherto free and independent country.

The following article, for the information of the merchants and underwriters concerned in the Baltic trade, has just been received:—“LONDON'S COFFEE HOUSE, TWELVE O'CLOCK.—The Lords of the Committee of the Council of Trade have received information, from which there is reason to believe, that a Swedish frigate, the Eurydice, is cruising in the Baltic, under orders to capture all Danish vessels.”

The following letter contains some interesting particulars:—“DOVER, APRIL 26.—The Good Hope, and from Calcutta, had sailed for the Dutch fleet, this morning, for the river. She was taken up as a cartel, and landed at Morlaix the second in command, and other Officers of the late French garrison in the Isle of France. The Chief in command was landed a few days previous to the arrival of the Good Hope, but not suffered to proceed to Paris. The regiment also comprising that garrison, which had arrived at Morlaix, were broken, and the men sent to the depot at Brest. At Morlaix no communication whatever was allowed, except by the Commissary, who came on board for the prisoners, and from his appearance and manner, it was judged that the affairs in France were not so favourable as the French Government could wish, and which is found to be the case, on hearing of the success of Lord Wellington in Portugal. The ship that brought home de Caen was lying at Morlaix, waiting a wind, on the arrival of the Good Hope, they were not even allowed to communicate with her.

“It is not improbable that de Caen will be called to account for the surrender of the Island; as the Second in Command made no secret of his disapprobation of the surrender, and declares loudly that he would not only have defended the place effectually, but would previously have retaken the Isle of Bourbon. The general opinion of the Officers of the British Navy, and others arrived from the Isle of France, is, however, that de Caen will be very well received—at least he was himself confident of a favourable reception, as is shown by the very act of his going to France, when other countries were open to him.”

FROM THE STAR. We have from a letter from Cadix of the 10th inst. which announces a fact more portentous of ruin and final discomfiture to the great cause in which this country has embarked in Spain, than we should consider even the confirmed intelligence of repeated defeats, under other and more promising circumstances. The letter says:—“I am concerned to say that the Cortes have refused to appoint Lord Wellington to the office of Captain General of the Asturias, Galicia, and Estremadura.”

We cannot sufficiently reprobate the pride, the jealousy, the stupidity of the upper ranks of the Spaniards. Nor are they merely afraid of the English—they dread the effects of enlightening their own people. If the Spaniards will neither lead nor follow, what can we rationally expect from them? There is in Spain all the physical materials for forming an invincible army, would the fools and madmen avail themselves of the practical experience of a generous ally, who has not only supplied them liberally with the sinews of war, but offered them the use of her officers to discipline their troops, and to conduct them to victory and glory, and then they Spain herself to ultimate independence.

abilities of Mr. Brough, he was constantly appointed Commander in Chief of all the allied armies—success and victory rewarded the patriotic sacrifice of national partiality, and Europe was saved from subjugation.

How happy should we be to hail the prospect of our Disappointed in every hope that we had formed from the patriotism of the higher orders in that country, that we almost despair.

It has been said, that General Cañanes has arrived in Galicia to assume the command of the army of that province and Asturias. Letters from Corunna to the recent date of the 19th inst. are silent on the subject, and therefore, we presume the account is a misrepresentation. We believe the army of Estremadura will be assigned to that Officer.

The chief cause of the late disturbances in Holland was, as we stated, that horrible law of cruelty and blood, the Conscriptio Law. A vessel arrived yesterday, which sailed from the Dutch coast on Monday night, with several passengers who got on board by stealth. The master states, that he was at Amsterdam on the preceding Saturday, when the commotion took place. Some Conscripts of the Jewish persuasion having revolted, they were, after a considerable struggle, overpowered by the troops that escorted them, and four of them got by way of example to the others. This act of severity occasioned a numerous mob to assemble, chiefly consisting of women, who pelted the French officers and soldiers with stones and other missiles. One officer was severely wounded on the head in the affray. The only act of outrage committed besides, was the cutting adrift some boats in which Conscripts were put for the security of conveyance. A strong French force continued to parade the streets from Saturday, until the time our informant left Amsterdam. No person was suffered to appear abroad, except upon urgent business, or with the permission of the French.

A Morning Paper mentions a rumour of the Danish, and other sailors fled to France, having taken possession of the Scheldt fleet, with which they have threatened to proceed to sea.

The utmost vigilance is employed along the Dutch coast, to prevent the landing or embarkation of any persons from thence. A gentleman from this country has been off the coast several days, without being able to find an opportunity to get on shore, although he had offered extravagant bribes to the Dutch fishermen, to one in particular 200 ducats, to land him. These men ground their refusal on the certainty of their being put to death by a very summary process in case of detection. So suspicious and vigilant was the maritime police, that domiciliary visits took place regularly every night, in all the villages within a certain distance of the coast; and if any soldier or person actually employed at the water-side was missing, a satisfactory account of the cause of his absence was required from the rest of the family, upon pain of imprisonment.

What a horrible picture of tyranny does the foregoing account exhibit; and it is to be believed (no, it cannot be believed) that such a system can long exist, or that it does not carry within itself the seeds and elements of its speedy dissolution.

The Bath Paper we received this morning contains the following article:—“We give the following article on the authority of a Gentleman who has numerous connections in Holland, and who wrote to us a letter that he has just received from a capital house in London, from which we give the extract:—“A Dutch Gentleman, just arrived from Holland, brings a letter dated the 21st inst. from one of the first houses there, which confirms the news of a complete insurrection having taken place from one end of Holland to the other; that 9000 have already been made to bite the dust; and that both the fleets in Amsterdam and Antwerp are in a state of mutiny.”

We are assured, from undoubted authority, that the new Silver Coinage is in great forwardness, particularly dollars, which will be issued speedily; in consequence of which, the holders of the old silver suffer greatly, as many of the shillings and sixpences will fall very short of their present value.—BIRMINGHAM CHRONICLE.

MEMORANDUM. HONORABLE GUARDS, APRIL 27, 1811. In consideration of the distinguished services of His Majesty's 87th (or Prince of Wales's Irish) Regiment, upon various occasions, and more recently in the brilliant action at Barrosa, his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, has been graciously pleased to approve of that Regiment being in future styled the 87th or Prince of Wales's own Irish Regiment, and of its bearing as a Badge of Honour, upon the Regiments Colours and appointments, an Eagle, with a wreath of Laurel above the Harp, in addition to the arm of his Royal Highness.

By Command of the Honourable the Commander in Chief, HARRY CALVERT, A. G. Waterford Chronicle. THURSDAY, MAY 2.

The London Journal of the 27th arrived yesterday morning. The extent of the intelligence conveyed by them, and the ample manner in which it is given in our columns, limit us to a few brief observations.—No mail due.

It is stated in a second edition of the Globe, that Badajos had surrendered to General Beresford. The Courier demerit any telegraphic dispatch had been received at the Admiralty. The paragraph in which the Courier makes this statement was evidently written at an earlier hour than that of the Globe, a circumstance which gives to the latter some degree of probability. Still, however, the Globe may have been misled by the rumour which the Courier contradicts. The Dublin Correspondent of the 26th has the following paragraph:—“We have in our possession a letter of the 16th from Lisbon, which communicates, that, by the latest advices from Gen. Beresford, the enemy had not evacuated Olivença, but it was anticipated. Badajos, according to this account, still continues to hold out, but the object of the enemy was to retain the fortress no longer than for a time sufficient to remove their sick.”

The truth cannot easily be drawn from these inconsistent accounts; but a very short time will remove all doubt, as there is no probability that either Badajos or Olivença would so continue long to hold out.

The Intelligenc gun brig is stated to have arrived at Plymouth from the Tagus; she sailed on the 19th of last month, and brought accounts from Lisbon to that date. In this it is mentioned, that Lord Wellington was herself expressed in Lisbon, (some of the letters speak of his actual arrival) to be present at the Duas, which was to be performed in commemoration of the execution of the Count by the enemy, that the Provisional Government was to attend, that the capital and the principal towns were to be illuminated, and that the British Army was to be encamped in three divisions on the frontiers of Portugal. No event of importance appears to have occurred down to the date mentioned.

The intelligence from the North of Europe, if well founded, promises important consequences. The public will cordially join with both Houses of Parliament in their enthusiastic and noble desire to tribute of gratitude to the allied army in Portugal. The discussion on the report of the Bullion Committee was fixed for yesterday evening. Mr. Harcourt's resolutions were inserted in our last publication; these will, most likely, be supported by Mr. Moore's views in to-day's paper. The letter of Mr. Moore on the same important subject is well entitled to attention.

The Prince Regent has promoted Lord H. Clinton to the command of the 18th, or Royal Irish Regiment, vice Sir James Pultney deceased. The reported capture of the two French frigates in the Mediterranean turns out to be a mere fabrication. The Gentleman, who was said to have bought the account from France, learned it for the first time from a London newspaper.

The Memorial of Mr. Todd Jones, although of a remote date, forms a deeply interesting part of the transactions of the period at which he was imprisoned.
