habits, to be furnished by the Colonel or Commanding Officer of their respective regiments: and, before they are received, it is expected that they shall have previously attained a competent progressive knowledge in arithmetic, comprehending, at least, a perfect acquaintance with vulgar and decimal fractions, &c.

The circle of studies at Wycroft is supposed to have been completed within a period of two years, from the first entrance of the candidate; but on occasions where their progress shall have been interrupted by ill health, or unavoidable obstacles, a prolongation of stay at the college might be permitted.

Students at this department are required to contribute to the college an annual subscription of thirty guineas, serving to lighten the expense of instruction: this is to be deposited in the hands of the Agent in London.

In order to enable them to prosecute with greater facility the practical knowledge of military plan drawing, sketching from nature, &c. &c. each student, during the continuance of the course, is permitted to receive an equivalent to an allowance of forage for one horse, and also the regulated army allowance of lodging money, fire and candle for one room.

They are required to furnish all books and mathematical instruments at their own expense.

After completing their course of studies, we are given to understand that the students intended for examination have been hitherto brought forward for that purpose twice in the year, in the presence of a regular Delegation or Committee from the Board of Commissioners, usually consisting at least of the Commander-in-Chief, the Adjutant and Quarter-Master-General, &c. besides the Governors and superior Officers of the Institution. On such occasions the successful candidates, after passing the ordeal of examination, are provided with adequate certificates, setting forth their respective attainments and qualifications, signed by the individual members of the Committee.

The establishment is at present calculated for the reception of only thirty students, none of whom, by the existing laws, have the liberty of withdrawing from the College, without previous permission from the Commander-in-Chief, obtained through the Governor of the Institution.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT.

The establishment, we find, was instituted with a view to the care and education of young men, under the age of thirteen, who are exclusively intended to embrace the military profession, and who serve as officers in the regular army; and who are denominated Gentleman Cadets.

The principle on which this Institution was originally founded is unquestionably a very liberal one, and highly characteristic of a great and enlightened Nation. Three descriptions of young men, we learn, are admitted at this department under certain regulations, adapted to their peculiar circumstances.

1. The first is said to comprehend the legitimate orphan sons of officers of the regular army and navy, dying in the service; also the sons of officers of the regular army, having the rank of a Subaltern. These are educated, clothed, and supported, under particular rules, at the expense of the Institution, for a period of four years, or until they have attained a certain progress in education to render them eligible to the holding of a commission as Cornet or Ensign.

2. This Class comprises the Sons of Officers of the Navy or Army, not under the rank of a Captain, who each contribute a certain yearly Subscription, apportioned to the rank, &c. of their respective fathers, according to the following scale:

A.	For the son of a Captain on Half pay.	£10 p. ann.
B.	Ditto ditto Full-pay.	£0 ditto.
C.	Ditto Field officer on Half pay.	£0 ditto.
D.	Ditto ditto Full-pay.	£30 ditto.
E.	Ditto General officer	£60 ditto.

3. The remaining Class of Gentleman Cadets are the Sons of Noblemen or Gentlemen, not of the military profession. These pay a Subscription of £100 per annum.

Each candidate must bring a certificate of good conduct from his last schoolmaster.

No young man, we believe, is admitted at the college under the age of 13, nor above 15 years: and a satisfactory document, or certificate, is to be produced of his age, under the signature of the clergyman of the parish where the baptism was registered. In cases where the candidate shall have been born in foreign parts, some other authentic and sufficient testimonial is said to be necessarily expected, to establish the exact age of the party. Moreover, in cases where the young man is less than four feet nine inches in height, the parent or guardian furnishes an affidavit that the candidate is not under the age of 13 years.

Every candidate, we are informed, undergoes an examination to qualify him for admission: and he cannot be received unless he is perfectly master of the Latin and English Grammar, and all the rules of Syntax; also of the first four rules of Arithmetic, viz. simple and compound Addition, Subtraction, Multiplication, and Division; and he must likewise write a very good hand.
