

LONDON.

MONDAY, JULY 29.

The Paris Papers of Thursday last arrived yesterday. They contain a letter from the Prussian Ambassador at Paris to the Prussian Consul at Rouen, announcing, that the Emperor of Morocco has fitted out a small squadron, destined to cruise against the Russian, Prussian, and Austrian fleets. His Majesty will therefore, we suppose, be among the number of those who are to feel the weight of the Christian Powers. Spain is fortifying Ceuta in the contemplation of a war with Morocco.

A man of the name of Bertholon has been taken up at Lyons, after having some intercourse with the regicides, returned to Lyons with sinister designs.

The French Funds are rather lower, 67 3-10. We received this morning American Papers to the 6th instant—a very late date indeed.

Lavalette is said to have arrived in Philadelphia—We disbelieve it. But the report affords the Editor of a Boston Paper an opportunity to pay the most fulsome compliments to Messrs. Wilson, Hutchinson, and Bruce, and to lament that the gallant Ney and the accomplished Labedoyere had not been equally fortunate. The Editor characterises the treason of which Lavalette was convicted as merely "a difference of opinion from his oppressors." This, he says, was the only cause of Robbery he might as justly describe as a mere change of property! And yet the American Editor will be offended, perhaps, if any one were to call his patriotism and love of freedom into question. There seems to be a strange want of correct ideas upon almost all subjects in America. Thus, one of the most estimable officers in the American service, a brave and humane man, Commodore Decatur, gave as a public toast lately, "Our Country in her intercourse with other nations may she be always right, and always successful right or wrong!" And this toast the official paper of the American Government calls "a just sentiment, never better expressed—a noble patriotism, never more beautifully illustrated."

Some misunderstanding is said to have taken place between our countrymen and the citizens of the United States on the Lakes. The Philadelphia Mercantile Advertiser of the 1st of July has, in large letters, that things look squally on the Lakes. The Albany Papers have stated, that a very considerable number of sailors had passed through that city on their way to Lake Erie, that the circumstances had attracted little attention at the time, but that it could now be accounted for: the depositions of five Americans, the Lakes, are then given, stating, that they had been fired at, detained, and searched by British cruisers; and that the prey was looking out for deserters from the royal navy.

Trade is dull and distress great in all parts of the United States.—That the same complaint should be general at the same time both in the old world and the new, is not one of the least extraordinary circumstances of these most extraordinary times.

Accounts from Plymouth state, that the Albatron, one of Lord Exmouth's squadron, arrived on Friday, and on Saturday the Queen Charlotte, Minden, Severn, Thames, and Percuss.—The Impregnable and the other ships were in the Sound, ready to join. The Triton transport put into Weymouth on Saturday. As the wind has since come round to the northward, there is no doubt of Lord Exmouth having proceeded on his voyage.

SAUNDAY, AUGUST 3.

The London Journals of Tuesday were due when we went to press. Those of Monday conveyed no intelligence worthy of notice, and other matters must occupy our space.

WATERFORD ASSIZES.

The Judges arrived here on Thursday, between twelve and one o'clock, and soon afterwards opened their respective Commissions; Mr. Justice Osborne presided in the County Court, before whom the following Grand Jury were sworn:

- COUNTY GRAND JURY. John Walker, of Couragh, Tyn. Foreman. Richard Power, of Clahurra. Richard Keane, of Woodstock. Nathaniel Crooke, of Bellinaman. Robert Maclellan, of Bellinaman. Anthony Chatterley, of Salterborough. William Henry Keble, of Derryvone. Arthur Fleming, of Mount Congreve. John Nugent Henkle, of Clonkerran Castle. Richard Ouse, of Capowagh. Percy Scott Smyth, of Headborough. Francis Drew, of Headborough. John Dwyer, of Headborough. Pierce George Barton, of Clonkerran Castle. Henry St. George Cole, of Antrimore. William Barron, of Carrigrohane. Thomas V. Ouse, of Clonkerran. David Heenan, of Slonakill. Nathaniel Crooke, of Bellinaman. John Stevens, of Woodstock. Thomas Boyce, of Tallagh. William Con. Paul, of Ballinacran. Edmund Barron, of Sandborough, Esqrs. Mr. Justice Osborne addressed the Grand Jury to the following effect:— "Gentlemen—As far as I can form a judgment from the appearance of the Calendar, I think I have sufficient reason to congratulate you on the improved state of your County. Some of you, indeed, appear to be distinguished by the characteristics of a continued state of disturbance; but they are happily few in number, and the Law will be found strong enough to punish the transgressors, and to eradicate the remnants of disorder. Of the persons to be tried, many are charged with crimes committed previous to the last Assizes—but there are likewise some in custody for recent transgressions, and I fear that this appearance of perseverance in outrage will be the means of causing mercy to be withheld from such as may be convicted, even for offences of older date. I do not feel it necessary, Gentlemen, to say a word to you in explanation of your functions as Grand Jurors; and I should be sorry to suppose that you need any exhortation from me to urge you to the proper fulfilment of your duty as Magistrates. It is my duty, however, to call your attention to an Act which has lately been passed by the Legislature. You are well aware, that it was hitherto the practice to found indictments merely on the written informations of the prosecutors, without any oral examination, except in doubtful cases. That practice is now changed—and though many are of opinion, that the change is more in form than in substance, yet there is no ground to suppose, that the Legislature meant to cast the slightest censure on the past conduct of Grand Jurors. It is merely required, that, in all cases, you should examine the prosecutors personally. It will not be necessary, in ordinary cases, that this examination should be carried to a great degree of minuteness, as it will be sufficient for you to ascertain that there are good grounds for sending the accused down here for trial. There is no doubt, Gentlemen, but that a little practice will render you familiar with the duties imposed on you—but I would suggest to you, as a method by which your time will be saved, and your business accelerated, the appointment of a single individual of your body to act as the examiner on these occasions—for, otherwise, if every Gentleman on the Grand Jury indulge in the practice of putting separate questions to the witnesses, it will be productive of much unnecessary delay, which may be avoided by the method that I have proposed. I have nothing further, Gentlemen, to observe to you at present, except to recommend to your attention and liberality the various Charitable Institutions, particularly that excellent establishment, the House of Industry, which is the pride, not only of your County, but, I may justly say, of the Kingdom at large. The Fever Hospital, also, is an Institution deserving of your most liberal support. Economy is a virtue which, in ordinary cases, you are particularly bound to practise—but, with respect to these most useful Charities, economy on your part would be downright cruelty, and I have no hesitation in recommending to you to place no limits to your liberality in these subjects, but those which the Law has prescribed."

The first trial which took place was that of Michael Doolan, sen. and Michael Doolan, jun., indicted (not capitally) for having stolen, on the 24th of November last, 50lbs. of tanned leather, the property of Messrs. Christopher and William Hannan, of Tallagh. Not Guilty; discharged. Daniel Gaulting was then put on his trial, charged, 1st, with having, on the 15th of July, 1812, at Croan, fired a loaded gun at one Timothy Coghlan, with intent to kill or maim him;—secondly, with assaulting and injuring the dwelling-house of Timothy Nowlan, at said place, and on same day, and, 3dly, with unlawfully appearing in arms by night. No prosecutor appearing, he was acquitted and discharged. After some time spent in the examination of traverses and baring petitions, the Court adjourned till nine o'clock to-morrow.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 2. The business in the County Court commenced this day with the trial of James Dwyer, indicted for burglariously entering the dwelling-house of Thomas Barry, at Clarkstown, on the 4th of January last—and also for stealing, in said house, two great coats, the property of said Barry.—The only evidence of the identity of the Prisoner was James Doe (an approver); but his testimony appearing suspicious, and not being otherwise supported, the Jury, after a very short deliberation, acquitted the Prisoner, who was immediately discharged. James Moranan, James Mahony, James Parker, James Parker, and Patrick Meade, charged with conspiring to murder Daniel Hennessy, of Killywatermore, were then given in charge to the Jury, and, there being no prosecution, were consequently acquitted, and discharged. (We are unavoidably compelled by the pressure of other matters, to postpone till Tuesday the details of the remainder of this day's proceedings in the County Court. The only criminal conviction was that of John S. O'Connell, for stealing pistols and other articles out of the house of George Boate, Esq. near this City. He is to be transported for seven years.)

Baron McClelland presided in the City Court, before whom the following Grand Jury were sworn: Alderman John Harbottle, Foreman. Alderman John Deane, H. Ad. Bailey. James Wallace, Thomas Sargent. James Barke, W. M. Ardagh. John Pringle, Arthur Baxter. Henry Acock, Francis Draper. William Barron, Alexander Smyth. William Milward, David Jones. John Harro, William Hunt, and Thomas Brown, Esqrs. His Lordship then very briefly addressed the Jury. The business to come before them was of so slight a nature, that he should have found it unnecessary to occupy their attention, but a law had recently passed the Legislature, with the nature of which it was proper that they should be made acquainted, and more especially so, as erroneous impressions had gone abroad concerning the duties which it called upon them to discharge. By that law, the witnesses for the prosecution are to be sworn in Court, and afterwards examined by the Grand Jury. Formerly, the Grand Jury were guided by Informations in finding or rejecting Bills of Indictment, but they are now to decide upon the evidence of the witnesses themselves. This was the only point in which the duties they have to discharge had been changed. It was not necessary for them to examine every witness who may be sent up to them, but merely to ascertain, that there was a rational ground for putting the prisoner upon his trial. Their privilege extended only to witnesses on behalf of the Crown, not to the examination of those on behalf of the prisoners, and they may stop in that examination whenever they shall be satisfied, that the case ought to undergo investigation before the Court. In their mode of proceeding, they are to be in a great measure guided by what takes place in Court, to weigh the evidence which they hear, and to form their judgment according to it. On the guilt, or innocence, of the prisoner, it is not their province to decide, but merely to say, whether it is their opinion, that he ought to be brought to trial. It would be the duty of the Foreman, or of some one nominated from among themselves, to examine the witnesses, as a general examination may be productive of inconvenience, but every Juror has a right to put such questions as he may deem useful to the elucidation of the case. These important instructions were delivered to the Jury in a manner the most plain and perspicuous, and we regret, that we were not able to take down the precise words in which they were conveyed. If we have erred in any part of the statement, we shall feel pleasure in rectifying any mistake we have made. His Lordship next forcibly recommended economy in the expenditure of the public money. This the times demanded, and the Jury would be careful in not imposing unnecessary burdens. From this principle of economy, however, he excepted the provision for the Charitable Institutions of the City. These required from them the most liberal support, and the distresses which prevailed made their duty to go as far as the laws which regulated their conduct would allow.

The prosecutors, in the few criminal cases on the Calendar, were then summoned, sworn, and sent to the Grand Jury, who speedily found Bills of Indictment against them. The prisoners were arraigned, and ordered to be ready for their trials on Friday. The cases in the City, as we have stated, are few, and one of the most important of them occurred in the County. Catherine Keefe is indicted for aiding and abetting Thomas and James Keefe in the murder of Michael Landers, while serving a Writ. Landers died in the County of the City of Waterford, and it is necessary for those alleged to have been guilty of the crime to be tried within the County where he died. This prisoner was acquitted, on grounds we shall hereafter state.

Before we proceed to what took place on Friday, two circumstances strike us as worthy of notice. The first is the new law with respect to the power of Grand Jurors in finding Bills of Indictment. Almost every law that passes the Legislature has its opponents, because some individual or another may feel himself aggrieved even by what benefits the community at large. New laws are thrown upon Grand Jurors, but new and most valuable powers are lodged in their hands. They can now bring the prosecutor to their tribunal; they can examine him with all their ingenuity; they can determine upon the validity of his testimony, and they can say to private malice or to public corruption, "you have accused an honest man, and we will rescue him from your enmity." They can more fully see into the measure of guilt, and say, "we commit you to the judgment seat where you ought to stand." A trial before a Court of Justice, although an honourable acquittal should be the result, is often attended with unfading ignominy. A Grand Jury can now, more effectually than ever, interpose, and throw disgrace upon the prosecutor. They can put to silence the iniquitous and biased informer, who values life only according to the price he may receive; and they can now more firmly lay hold of criminals. These are circumstances of valuable consideration.

The other circumstance to which we have alluded is the tranquil state of this City. We have the authority of Baron McClelland for saying, that what he had to do was trifling. This situation of affairs here is to be ascribed to the dispositions of the Inhabitants, and to the vigilance of the Municipal Authorities. In Waterford, a peaceable disposition has at all times prevailed, and the governing powers have, perhaps, less to do than in any other City in the British Empire.

The business of the City Court, with the exception of Presentments, closed yesterday. We shall notice the proceedings hereafter, although they were very unimportant and uninteresting. Michael Hannan was convicted of manslaughter, in the case of Edward Plachan, and sentenced to be hanged in the hand, to imprisonment for one year, and to find security, himself in £200, and two securities to £20 each. This subject shall hereafter be taken up. Baron McClelland tried two County Records, which are so worthy of notice, but the substance of them will be published. The business in the County Court is expected to close this day, about twelve o'clock.

Notwithstanding the unseasonableness of the weather, so universally complained of, we understand, that Dominore can boast this season of a more than usually brilliant assemblage of beauty and bon ton. On Wednesday night last, the Ball at the Hotel was the chief attraction, and the other parties might have intervened, had it not been attended. Dancing commenced at half-past nine, and was continued with the utmost spirit until midnight, when the company partook of an excellent supper, in the arrangement of which the zeal, taste, and skill of Mr. Garroway were eminently conspicuous. The lively dance was resumed after supper, and kept up to a late hour, when the company retired, determining, that no other engagement should prevent their enjoying, on Wednesday next, the 7th instant, a repetition of the pleasure they had experienced, when we have no doubt every exertion will be made to ensure an equally select and brilliant attendance. Miss McCauley's entertainments, with new varieties, will be repeated this evening, by desire of the Gentlemen of the Leinster Bar, and an exhibition more universally acceptable has never been offered to this City. Circumstances have not yet been offered for saying this much, but we shall more fully notice the subject hereafter.
