TO DOCTOR LAMERT.

Kingstown (near Dublin), April 1, 1830.

MINE WORTHY SIR - Assured by feelings of gratitude for the very great benefit I received from your inestimable Medicine, the CURABLE BALM OF LIPPE, and various Medicines...

I indeed, I thought all hope of recovering, when I first applied to you, having been under many different kinds of remedies in this town, and those of the Sister Country...

In fact, I feel incompetent to describe the various ways in which I was afflicted, but would just mention, that all those who may be similarly afflicted should cast their eye over this brief detail...

Kind Sir, you are at liberty to make any use of this letter; and any person who really requires a remedy as to its authenticity, by leaving a few lines for your agent's, 28, College-green, or Post Office, Kingstown...

Sold in Bottles, at 4s 2d and 10s 6d each - the Bottle of 10s 6d contains Three and a half of the 4s 2d, of Bottles in One for 20s. Also, a Family Bottle, containing Four and a half of the 4s 2d...

The above most excellent Medicine is sold by several apothecaries of the Proprietors, wholesale and retail, by Messrs Perrot and Hall, 28, College-green, Dublin; Poffick, Piggis, and Co. SECOND MEETING AT THE THATCHED HOUSE TAVERN.

(From a Second Edition of the Pilot.) We stop the press to publish a letter from a correspondent of vast importance.

The meeting at the Thatched House Tavern, of the members connected with Ireland, has been broken up. I enclose you a list of the members who attended, and a copy of the resolutions. Lord Rossmore was also in the room, and the elder Mr. Lambcock, of Ashlona.

Sir John Newport made a report of his interview "by command" with the Duke of Wellington, yesterday. He said that the Duke spoke but two sentences—he said that "he would have sent for Sir John, but that his conversation must be unsatisfactory—the Government had determined to impose all the proposed taxes on Ireland."

Sir John then detailed his reply to the Duke. He told his Grace that the experience of a long Parliamentary life and of some acquaintance with office, convinced him that an attempt to increase taxation in a country where the population at large were unable to contribute from their poverty, would have no other result than to deprive the few who had at present any means of giving employment of those means, and thereby aggravating the distress of the labouring classes without producing any increase of revenue.

Mr. C. DeJoncourt proposed the first resolution, expressive of the severe injury to the agricultural interests of this country, by the new spirit duties, and entered into a detail of the effects such a system of taxation would produce on the resources of the people.

Mr. Neville seconded the resolution, and Mr. P. Sisson supported it in a speech of considerable length. Sir Harcourt Leas rose amidst considerable applause to propose the second resolution, which related to one of the new taxes which Mr. Goulburn contemplated, and which if carried into effect, would inevitably tend to destroy that great organ of instruction in which, under God, the salvation of the country may be looked for.

RESOLUTIONS AGREED UPON.

1. That this meeting has heard with the utmost regret and disappointment, that the Government have expressed their determination to persevere in measures of oppression, against which our constituents and the Irish public have expressed the most decided and unqualified opinion.

2. That considering these measures as likely to prove most grievous and oppressive to Ireland, being injurious to the agricultural interest, destructive to the commerce and manufactures, and destructive of the revenue, we feel ourselves called upon, in discharge of our public duty, to give to these measures our strenuous and uncompromising opposition throughout all their stages.

Sir JOHN NEWPORT in the Chair.

3. That copies of these resolutions be transmitted to all the Members of the House of Commons connected with Ireland, and their attendance be requested to support them in Parliament, whenever the Chancellor of the Exchequer shall bring forward his propositions.

STAMP DUTIES—GUILD OF MERCHANTS.

Tuesday, a Post-Hall of the Guild of Merchants assembled, pursuant to a requisition, on the subject of the proposed assimilation of the Stamp Duties, and the intended bill relative to the Magistrates presiding in the Sessions' Court, in the Guild Hall.

The Master of the Guild in the Chair. Mr. C. DeJoncourt proposed the first resolution, expressive of the severe injury to the agricultural interests of this country, by the new spirit duties, and entered into a detail of the effects such a system of taxation would produce on the resources of the people.

ATHY PETTY SESSIONS—MAY 25.

The adjourned to the Courthouse this day were crowded at an early hour, it being generally understood that the Rev. Mr. Lalor would bring forward his case as complainant against Captain LeRoy's servants.

The public had gathered so promptly to the proceedings of the last Court day, on this affair, had excited a good deal of interest; and by twelve o'clock, a greater number of Magistrates than usual had arrived in town. Several of the neighbouring gentry had also assembled; and, from time to time, they joined with the group of Magistrates in the Market-square, to partake of their clearing reminiscences of the "modern Amazon."

The Magistrate ascended by the private stairs leading to the Judges' chamber, and remained closeted for a quarter of an hour. At length, about a dozen of their worships issued from the private door, and ranged themselves along the petty jury box, with the exception of Colonel Baggot, Rev. John Baggot, Captain LeRoy, and Mr. Butler, who took their seats under the canopy of that awful tribunal, from whence the dread sentence of the offended laws of the country had been so often pronounced by my Lord Norbury, in his own richly furnished, upon the devoted heads of criminals.

Captain LeRoy stood up, and with much earnestness of manner, examined his two servants. They stated that he had directed them in the morning to cut the boughs, and range them on the grass under the trees, so as not to impede the road; that Master Anthony had been with them shortly before the Priest passed, but he had gone towards the gate at that time, and had given them no directions to annoy the Rev. Mr. Lalor.

"Oh! you sneaked thief!" roared Mary Dunne, rushing towards the table, and making an effort to jump on it. "Wasn't he lying behind the ditch, and bidding you do the Priest?" "No, he was not—he was going to the gate—I didn't see him at all then," replied Blong, rather stonily, considering his assailant—but poor Peter Spittle!—when he heard the ring of Mary's voice, he seemed quite demoralized in the upper story, and his justification props began to totter; in short, his knees were knocking fire out of each other with the dust of terror; but his master, who had been leaning forward, and thrusting his elbows into his breeches pockets, and bending his elbows forward, as he stamped, cried out, "Insolent hussy! how dare you interrupt the Court! Sergeant, put her out!"

The Magistrate ascended by the private stairs leading to the Judges' chamber, and remained closeted for a quarter of an hour. SHIP NEWS.

Adverts have been received by the owners of the barque TOWN OF HOPE, from St. Louis, dated 20th March and 6th April—up to which date the whole of her crew were in perfect health. The colour is reported as generally free from sickness. The ship expected to sail homewards about the 10th April.

RHOCKING MURDER.

On Saturday last an inquest was held at Newtown Castle, near Knockbridge, by John Byrne, Esq., Coroner of this County, on the body of Thomas Brennan, who was found murdered within a short distance of his own house, at a very early hour that morning. It appeared, by the evidence of his wife, that he and she had gone to bed at eight o'clock on the preceding night, and remained awake talking for about two hours, after which she slept till aroused by the singing of the lark, when she found her husband was not in bed. She got up and having awakened a neighbour, named Mr. Sloan, told him of Brennan's unaccountable disappearance, and requested he would look for him, which he accordingly did and returned in a few minutes. He found him lying in a chair near his house. A bundle of brass tied with a rope was on the ground beside him, with a scolding boy, and (horrible to relate) there were four deep cuts on his head. Sloan said, she told him Brennan had gone out gathering brass, but this she denied.

Strong suspicion attaches to a man, named Philip Callan, to whom she was affianced prior to her marriage with the deceased, and who has been seen lurking about the place the day before the murder was committed. A brother of Callan and Brennan's widow was detained in custody for further examination. A very respectable J.P. found a verdict "that the deceased was murdered by some person or persons unknown."—Lour E. Press.

It appears that Mr. Goulburn was catechized on Friday night, by Mr. Gratton, as to his nautical correspondence with the hall porter at the Commercial Buildings. The Right Hon. Gentleman was pleased to observe on the occasion the most profound silence. His long said nothing, but "was grieved," as Jonathan says, that he must have looked a little foolish.

A very curious and interesting experiment I have recently made at the Royal Mint, in the presence of its principal officers. A set of Chinese weights, perhaps the first ever exhibited in this country, was compared with the English standard, and the results were found perfectly correspond with similar comparisons made in China, nearly a century ago, by the Missionaries Dufallo, of scientific memory.—Courier.

A LITERAL TRANSLATION.

At a large party of which Sir Charles Flower formed one, a gentleman, speaking of the universal fate which attend all living creatures, quoted Cicero—"Mors omnibus est communis." A lady seated by Sir Charles, requested him to translate the sentence, which the worthy baronet did, to the great edification of his hearers, by rendering it—"Death is common to all."

SWEARING.

Whether or not it be a crime, by swearing we lose breath and time. 'Tis certain those who do—a their eyes, would damn their mouths, if they were not shambled by the pipe.
