Recent important Invention for all defects of Sight!—Patent Preservative Amber Spectacles and Improved Glasses.

MR. E. SOLOMONS, PATENTEE OF THE AMBER SPECTACLES, AND INVENTOR OF THE IMPROVED LENSES, NO. 172, STRAND, LONDON.

OPHTHYALMIA "BY APPOINTMENT."

Table Excellency, the Lord Lieutenant to their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Cumberland and Duke of Saxe-Coburg, the Duchess of Richmond, and the London Royal Infirmary, for

"CATARACT AND OTHER DISEASES OF THE EYE," HAS the honour of announcing to the Nobility, Gentry, and Public of Waterford and its Vicinity, that after devoting considerable time, labor, and study, he has recently effected a great improvement in Optics, by the application of Amber in the construction of Spectacles, which for weak and imperfect vision are recommended by the Physicians, Surgeons, and Oculists of the various Ophthalmic Institutions throughout Europe, as being superior to the generally used glasses, which are found to injure the Sight, being ground upon philosophical principles, by new machinery peculiarly constructed for that purpose.

Mr. SOLOMONS being now at Messrs. ARDAGH and MAXWELL'S, Mall, Waterford, begs leave to observe that having had 20 years practice in this department of science, he feels confident of giving the most decided and instantaneous relief to the Eyes that are so afflicted, by his PATENT AMBER LENSES and IMPROVED GLASSES, and is proud of the exquisite excellence they possess over all others, which they surpass by their superior refractive property—their freedom from the production of prismatic colors, so possessing the further advantage of modifying bright and strong light, and are particularly desirable on account of their comparative lightness—qualities which admirably adapt them to afford ease and comfort by protecting and strengthening the Eyes when exerted in reading, writing, drawing, or looking at minute and dazzling objects, under exposure, at the same time, to the strong and vivid luminous rays of the sun by day, or lamps or candles by night.

By their adaption to the Sight, the most incalculable benefits will be derived from these Newly Invented "PATENT AMBER SPECTACLES and IMPROVED GLASSES," in which in submitting them to all persons having dim, weak, or inflamed Eyes, or requiring the aid of LENSES, Mr. S. feels confident they will be found to realize their highest expectations, having been honored with the sanction and unqualified approbation of the following, and many other eminent British and Foreign Physicians, Surgeons and Oculists, by whom they are recommended for their superiority over all others:—

SIR HUGH PALLISER. This amiable gentleman and excellent landlord gave a sumptuous fete champetre to his tenantry on Monday at his seat, Castle Palliser. At one o'clock above three hundred sat down to dinner, in which all the delicacies to be procured were united, with stout roast beef, plumb pudding, and not brown ale. The band of the Waterford Staff was in attendance, and dancing having commenced shortly after dinner, it was kept up with unabated spirit while the company remained. How happy should we be if Ireland had many such landlords, who would live in peace, joy, know our wants and sympathize with our feelings.—Wexford Freeman

DROWNED.—Between 5 and 6 o'clock yesterday evening, the body of Henry Wilson, chief mate of the William, which sailed from this port on Saturday last, was found floating in the dock near the Westley-bridge. When last seen, about half-past seven o'clock on Friday night, he was tidy and in company with some unfortunate female, who, with another, was remanded and kept in custody by the magistrates at Petty Sessions, on Saturday, for further examination.

The body was conveyed to Henry-street police-office, where an inquest was held by the Mayor. A valuable silver watch, a purse containing 1s. 6d. in silver, and a knife and key were found on his person. No marks of violence were visible, except some scratches on the face, which he received by falling into the hold two or three days previously. Verdict found drowned. The deceased was a remarkably well-looking man, about 38 years of age, and a native of Merlyth, in the North of England, where a wife and five children live to deplore his untimely fate.—Limerick Star of Saturday.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT.—On Friday last a very melancholy accident occurred on Everton-brow, near Liverpool. Miss Medley, an elderly lady, was taking an airing in a Bath chair, which was drawn by two young girls. In turning out of Shaw-street, to go down the brow, the chair, through some mismanagement of the machinery, acquired an impetus which forced the girls to quit their hold. The impetus thus increased, the chair descended the brow at a rapid rate. Miss Medley was thrown out, and falling on her head, was killed on the spot. Dr. Squires saw the accident, and hurried to the assistance of the unfortunate lady, but all his efforts were, of course, unavailing. The body was conveyed to the coffee-house, and a Coroner's Jury having been summoned, it was afterwards conveyed to the dwelling of the deceased. Miss Medley was the daughter of the late Rev. S. Medley, and author of several poetical pieces.—Liverpool Standard.

If a great arguer fastens upon you, the best way to open his hold is to go with him in all his assertions, right or wrong—agree with him in everything. This, if done in a politely sneering way, is an effectual cure. The more you stultify your own previous assertions the better.

CONSECRATION OF THE RIGHT REV. DOCTOR O'CONNOR. (FROM THE COLE ARCHBISHOP OF MONDAY.) Yesterday being the day appointed for the Consecration of this distinguished individual, the Church of St. Augustin, in which the ceremony was performed, was from an early hour densely crowded. So great indeed, was the anxiety to witness Dr. O'CONNOR'S consecration, that though the hour appointed for its commencement was 10 o'clock, the building was almost entirely filled at a few minutes after nine; and every place from which the solemn sight could be seen to advantage was instantly occupied. Among the spectators we observed several who differ in opinion with those of the Catholic faith, led by curiosity to witness a ceremony that has, with no change but, perhaps, a diminution of its splendour, existed from the very first ages of Christianity. All seemed to look upon the proceedings with reverence, and though the ceremonial lasted for a time, in other cases, sufficient to exhaust the patience, it was regarded throughout with the greatest attention.

At a few minutes after ten o'clock, the pealing of an anthem and a host among the multitude announced the approach of the procession. A boy bearing a crucifix accompanied by others with lighting tapers, led the way, and was followed by nearly sixty priests walking two and two in white surplices; after whom came, preceded by taper-bearers, the Right Rev. Doctor Crotty, Bishop of Cloyne, the Right Rev. Doctor Ryan, Bishop of Limerick, and the Right Rev. Doctor Murphy, the consecrating Bishop; after whom came the Bishop Elect, the Right Rev. Doctor O'CONNOR. The clergy took their seats inside a square which was raised for the purpose in the centre of the aisle, and the cross and taper-bearers at each side of the grand altar, which was most brilliantly lighted up. The Bishops having robed themselves at the altar of the right wing, proceeded to the grand altar, where they knelt for a few moments in prayer. Doctor Murphy then took his seat on the platform of the altar, in a richly carved oak chair, and in a few minutes after, Doctors Crotty and Ryan advanced, leading between them the Bishop Elect; whom they presented to his lordship. Dr. Ryan then said in Latin, "Most Reverend Father, our holy Mother, the Catholic Church, demands of you to advance this Priest, whom we present to the holy office of Bishop." Doctor Murphy demanded "whether they had the Apostolical mandate," and Dr. Ryan having replied in the affirmative, his lordship commanded it to be read by the Rev. Mr. O'NEILL; this being done, the Consecrator administered the oath of fidelity and obedience to the See of Rome, after which the examination followed, to each of which questions Dr. O'CONNOR replied, kneeling before the Altar. When this part of the ceremony was ended, Dr. O'CONNOR was led by the Assistant Bishops, Doctors Crotty and Ryan, to the side Altar, where he was arrayed by the attending priest in the Episcopal vestments, Thomas B. St. John, Dean of St. John's, in Episcopal Cincture. He was then conducted to the Altar where, assisted on either hand by the Bishop Elect, he proceeded to read the Liturgy. The Liturgy was then read, all kneeling, and some devout prayers, after which the Consecrating Bishop placed a large volume containing the Gospels on the work and shoulders of the Bishop Elect, who remained all this time prostrate before the Altar.

The First Greater Spiritus was then chanted by the Choir, during which he was anointed on the head with the sacramental chrism. The Grand Preface was continued, after which the 132d psalm was sung. His hands were next anointed and bound up with a linen napkin, in which position his pastoral Crozier, after being sprinkled with water, was given to him between the tops of his fingers.

The ceremony was during this time disturbed by the breaking down of some seats in the gallery, in consequence of the numbers that were present. High Mass was then sung by the Right Rev. Dr. Murphy, who administered the Holy Communion to Doctor O'CONNOR. After the Ceremony of Consecration was concluded, Bishop O'CONNOR, accompanied by the Right Rev. Drs. Crotty and Ryan, made a circuit of the Church, and bestowed his blessing on the people.

There are few p-rsons in this city with whom the name of Dr. O'CONNOR is not familiar, and to whom his benevolence and unostentatious piety are not fully known. There is not a man amongst the Catholic clergy of the south, more eminently qualified to discharge the arduous duties of the important mission with which he is charged, and few ever carried with them more prayers for their welfare, and sorrow for their departure.

THE ANTI-REPEAL PETITION. We are happy to learn that the Enancipatory Subscription to defend the Election of G. Waddy, Esq., our popular member, is progressing spiritedly. £30 are already subscribed. We expect the list for publication in our next. We are glad to hear that our patriotic Bishop, Doctor Keating, is on the list of subscribers.—Wexford Independent.

THE FACULTY. Who shall decide when Doctors disagree? At the meeting held on Monday at the House of Industry for the purpose stated in our report, upon the occasion of Dr. White's proposal to be fourth physician having been rejected, Dr. Lane made a declaration which, for candour, can scarcely be rivalled, and for truth cannot be excelled, in the whole materia medica. The learned doctor, in defiance of theory, stated, that though two doctors might assist in keeping a person at this side of the grave, yet the co-operation of a third M.D. would inevitably send him to that bourne from whence no traveller returns. We happen to know a little about the profession and such a rational view of the case we never saw taken before. It is very consoling to have a new light thrown on so vital a subject.—Wexford Freeman.

At the fair of Clouraud, Co. Clare, on Friday, there was a large supply of cattle of every description, but there were very few purchases made. Horses were remarkably cheap. Some pigs died from excessive heat.

THE "GREAT" MEETING.—FRANCIS LANDLORDS. The Conservatives are indefatigable in their efforts to procure an audience on Thursday next, to listen to the tale of the grievances of the Irish Protestants, which is to be unfolded by Messrs. Roden and Longford, the Rev. Charles Keating, and other leaders of what once was a powerful party, but which has now become a miserable remnant of a faction. After a postponement of nearly two months, the meeting has been fixed to take place on the 14th. There has been a hoop for recruits in all parts of the country, and the following urgent circular has been forwarded to every loyalist who might be able to obtain the use of a vacant seat for the occasion:—

We, the undersigned, being deeply impressed with a sense of the alarming situation in which the Protestants of Ireland are now placed, and being anxious to co-operate with them for the protection of our religion, and the preservation of our liberties and our property, request your presence (and that of any of your friends who agree in our view of the present posture of affairs) at a meeting of the Protestant noblemen, gentlemen, clergy, and landed proprietors of Ireland, to be held on Thursday, the 14th of August next, at the residence of Mr. Keating, the Chair to be taken at twelve o'clock.

All communications to be made to the committee, No. 25, Grafton-street, who will distribute tickets of admission to the meeting.

After such exertions to collect a crowd, we may be prepared for a great meeting; but an admission can only be obtained by tickets, these will, of course, be perfect unanimity, and the Protestants of Ireland will be represented on the most appreciable and deeply-injured portion of His Majesty's subjects.

Of course the adoption of Mr. O'CONNOR'S amendment on the 14th will be the leading grievance, as it is the first step of potential justice towards Ireland. This will afford a fine topic for the orators. The noble resolutionists could, however, turn it to good account, if they possessed their determination, notwithstanding the change in the law, to pay the persons the full amount of their debts. The fifth of the proposition they will be responsible for; but there is nothing in the altered bill to prevent them from paying the remainder, and thus defeating the object of O'CONNOR to limit the income of the Irish Bishops. He explained an example, viz., he said, he had always held that they had not the right to complete, as the real title papers. It is time to demonstrate the truth of this assertion. If they should avail themselves of any such reduction, they would be acting in violation of their duty to all their former possessors. This would be justly chargeable with a gross violation of principle.—Ibid.

DEBATE AT BRISTOL.
