THE NORTH WEST PASSAGE.

The Hull Rookingham says: "A very good feeling is prevalent in the country, that government will send out an expedition to attempt the north-west passage in the ensuing summer; indeed, should not that be the case, it is by no means improbable that the United States or Russia (both of whom are known to be secretly contemplating that object), availing themselves of the discovery Britain has made, may accomplish the voyage before us...

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The Financial Measure of the last half century has produced such a revolution in the thinking and the reasoning world, as that which will be effected by the reduction of the newspaper tax in England, the reduction has been near three pence on each paper; in this country, it has nearly been limited to one penny; here, therefore, the change will have a lighter effect...

The subscription, heretofore, to the Waterford Chronicle has been three pence five shillings, yearly; or one pound twelve shillings and six pence, half yearly; under the new system, commencing from the fifteenth ult., it shall be forwarded at the rate of two pounds sixteen shillings, yearly—or one pound eight shillings, half yearly. The Weekly Chronicle, instead of thirty shillings yearly, shall be one pound six, or thirteen shillings half-yearly.

We now come to an important feature in our arrangements. The foregoing scale is intended for such of our friends as prefer paying their respective accounts when they become due, instead of paying in advance; to those who are acquainted with provincial newspapers, we need not say, that our subscribers, with a few rare exceptions, are of the former class; we are naturally desirous that they should become of the latter one, to which, we respectfully beg to say, we must rigidly adhere, will, in some degree, relieve us from the anxiety and expense of repeated applications. The additional charge for credit will barely cover the increased outlay for clerks, postages, traveling expenses, and other incidental charges, all of which are rendered necessary by the delay and difficulty of collecting the outstanding debts. When we state that in a space of time, little exceeding a year, debts of between eight and nine hundred pounds have become due to this establishment—that this large amount is due in various sums, from ten shillings to five pounds—that it is scattered through every portion of this and through a large extent of the adjoining counties—that in some instances a man and horse must be engaged for an entire day in visiting a single subscriber, and that the total loss on the above amount, including bad debts and other contingencies, may be estimated at between eight and nine hundred pounds, we think that few reasonable persons will object to our present regulation, without which we could not possibly meet the heavy expenses of our establishment, all of which must now be met in advance.

The trade must be supplied in future with paper from Dublin, and the Stamp-office will take care that every shilling shall be paid in advance. The clerks' and printers' wages and other items, amounting to about £20 weekly, must be met with ready money, and if upon a single occasion we were obliged to suspend the payment of our daily subscription by our subscribers, at the same instant our paper must become deficient.

We have entered into this somewhat lengthy explanation, to satisfy our friends that our prosperity, we might almost add our existence, as journalists, depends on a strict adherence to the terms of this notice. They themselves will reap the benefit of supplying us with the means of giving them a better article, which they could otherwise have had. Let us assume that we have four hundred subscribers at £2 10s. each, our yearly expenditure is consequently one thousand pounds, by the pernicious system of credit we have to sink this sum for ever, while the only advantage our subscribers gain is, that they severally pay their respective subscriptions at the end instead of at the beginning of the year. Surely this is not placing the journalists and his supporters on an equal footing.

Having stated our financial plans, we may briefly glance at what we propose doing in return. Our increased and increasing inducement shall be devoted to a straightforward advocacy of the principles we have always entertained; our information shall be as early and as varied as any other newspaper in the country can supply, and between parties, as well as individuals, we shall be actuated by a spirit of strict impartiality. We return our thanks for the liberal support we have hitherto met, and we venture to assure ourselves, it will not hereafter be lessened.

truth, founded on the interpretation you arbitrarily affix to the meaning of two names given by you or the public to those acts, but not given by the parliament. You christen them yourself, and you endeavour to fasten untruth upon me because I do not call them by the same names. You call the last one a prevention act. Is it not one for punishment also?

appoint a Tory sergeant to preside; and, through the medium of a Tory sheriff, can select Tory jurors, and grand jurors; these Tory jurors can then apply to have the county of district proclaimed. Tory or Orange policemen can be sent as the ministers of justice. Then, I call upon you to reflect, what will be the condition of the unfortunate peasantry that will be committed to the mercy of such rulers. The poor man must be in his house within one hour after sunset. Again, he must not be out of his house till the sun has risen above the horizon.

leasenic, £1 5s. 8d.; total for October, £5 5s. 5d.—This is our third monthly gale. Amount for three months, £22 7s. 10d. Behold, my dear friend, what, in every good cause, system, purpose, and perseverance can do, will do, and must do. Here we are, a simple, but a brave people, without town or trade, inhabiting (it is true) a lovely and fertile spot of Green Erin; yet in surface extent, and consequent population, among the smallest parishes in this country. However, we count on remitting at least £50 per year Justice Rent until Ireland is what God, nature, and common justice destined her to be.

acts on these motives denials from his own example on former occasions, and violates consistency? The readers of the London papers lately saw an elaborate exposition, in which pains were taken to show the warmth of the commendation generally expressed by Roman Catholics towards the Wellington government in the year 1829. Hear, hear, hear, and I had others. In that exposition I myself, as a journalist, am alluded to. A quotation is given from a letter from London, in which the then Prime Minister and Home Secretary are spoken of in complimentary terms. I was at the time in London, and I dare say I was the author of the letter. I have no doubt at all that it expressed my sentiments; but because I felt grateful to the Wellington government in the year 1829, and because I was a journalist, I was asked to write a paper in 1831, or thereabouts, in which I should mention the late government in terms of praise. I did so, and I have no doubt that I was a fair and honest man. I have no doubt that I was a fair and honest man. I have no doubt that I was a fair and honest man.

RAILWAY FAIR—COUNTY MEETING. (FROM A CORRESPONDENT OF THE EDITOR.) THREE-DAY EVENING—I have had an opportunity of seeing the county from Dublin this afternoon, and regret to say that the arrangements for the fair and county meeting were not so successful as they might have been. The fair, which commenced on Tuesday, and for many years the weather has not been so propitious, and this circumstance was much calculated to give life and spirit to the various buyers and sellers who attended this fair.
