CLOSE OF THE 33d YEAR'S LIST OF THE LIFE ASSOCIATION OF SCOTLAND.

The Bonus System in Class A, Designed with the view of Reducing the Expense of Life Assurance to the lowest sum consistent with security, has been eminently successful. Annual allocations of Profit are made in the form of Cash Bonuses, applied in part payment of the next premiums of all policyholders who have paid at least six premiums. This yearly Cash Bonus has never to any policyholder been less than 25 per cent. of his annual premium, leaving him to pay only three-fourths of the premium.

According to the Carlisle 4 per Cent. Tables, a Cash Bonus of 25 per cent. of the premium is equivalent in value to a Bonus Addition to the Sum Assured of so much as from £2 10s. to £1 10s. (according to age) per annum for every £100 assured. Such Bonus Additions rank with the highest declared by other Offices, and certainly exceed the Bonuses of many.

The Bonuses in Class B are Unusually Large, being reserved and accumulated for those policyholders who live till the average age of persons of their age at entry—that is, about one-half of the whole number. The year Bonus Additions to the Sum Assured, and have amounted at each of the past divisions to so much as £4 per annum for every £100 assured.

ENTRANTS BEFORE the 33d ANNUAL BALANCE will secure special advantages. APPLICATIONS CAN STILL BE RECEIVED AT THE OFFICE OR AGENCIES. EDINBURGH, 82 Princess Street. LONDON, 5 Lombard Street. GLASGOW, 123 St Vincent Street. DUBLIN, 40 Dame Street. BELFAST, 19, High Street. DUNDEE, 31 Reform Street. AGENTS in Every Town throughout the United Kingdom.

CURE FOR ALL; HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

All sufferers from coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, and irregular action of the heart are earnestly recommended to rub Holloway's searching Ointment well over the throat, breast, and back, as the case may require, twice a day. Invalids may confidently rely upon the beneficial effects resulting from this treatment: the Ointment is the most trustworthy remedy for all internal and external ailments of the throat.

BAD LEGS, BAD BREASTS, ULCERS, ABSCESSSES, WOUNDS, AND SORES OF ALL KINDS. May be thoroughly healed by the application of the Ointment to the parts affected, after they have been duly washed with warm water. Under the action of this powerful Ointment, aided by the Pills, the depraved humors of the body will be quickly removed; even scrofulous ulcers and foul sores, however old or inveterate, can thus be cured.

IN GOUT, RHEUMATISM, AND NEURALGIC PAINS. This Ointment never fails to give relief. If every first application lessens the inflammation and diminishes both heat and pain. This soothing Ointment, by depriving the blood on its route to or from the affected parts, promotes healthy action. In severe and chronic cases the Pills should always be taken, as their purifying alterative and restorative qualities place the whole mass of solids and fluids in a wholesome condition.

THE MOTHER'S FRIEND.—SKIN DISEASES, HOWEVER DESPERATE, MAY BE RADICALLY CURED. Scalds, itches, blotches on the skin, scrofulous sores or king's evil, and such like affections, yield to the mighty power of this fine Ointment, provided it be well rubbed around the affected parts two or three times a day, and the Pills be taken according to the printed directions.

DROPSICAL SWELLINGS, PARALYSIS, AND STIFF JOINTS. Many of the worst cases of the above diseases will yield in a comparatively short time, if the Ointment be diligently applied to the affected parts, and other means have failed. When ever the malady has been long standing the Ointment should be assisted by Holloway's purifying Pills, which act upon the stomach and liver, guarding digestion against falling into that disordered state, which the pain, restlessness, and fever attending these ailments is apt to produce, and which much retards recovery, and sometimes even makes serious the slightest cases.

PERSONS afflicted with these distressing complaints will find in this wonderful Ointment instant means of relief, and all can effect their own cure without explaining their infirmity to anyone. The Pills, if in small doses, greatly assist the Ointment, as they purify the blood, and regulate the stomach.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following complaints:

- |                             |                     |               |
|-----------------------------|---------------------|---------------|
| Bad Legs                    | Itch                | Sore Throats  |
| Bad Breasts                 | Gout                | Skin Diseases |
| Burns                       | Glandular Swellings | Scoury        |
| Bunions                     | Lumbago             | Sore Heads    |
| Chilblains                  | Piles               | Tumours       |
| Chapped Hands               | Rheumatism          | Ulcers        |
| Corns (soft)                | Sore Nipples        | Wounds        |
| Contracted and Stiff Joints | Scalds              |               |

The Pills and Ointment are sold at Professor Holloway's Establishment, 533, Oxford Street, London; also by nearly every respectable Vendor of Medicines throughout the Civilised World, in Boxes and Pots, at 1s 1/2, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, 11s, 22s, and 36s each. FEATURES OF THE "IRISH DAILY TELEGRAPH." Size.—We may be pardoned for referring with some degree of pride to its size, being the first to introduce into the South of Ireland a large Eight Page Paper, thus giving the "Telegraph" an important advantage over the "Journal" published in the district, an advantage that can scarcely be over-estimated, as it enables us to supply our subscribers with news and reading matter which they cannot possibly find in the columns of our southern contemporaries. How that advantage is utilised is the next consideration, which leads us to look at the "Telegraph" as a FAMILY PAPER.—And a more important feature in connection with a journal cast so early be approached, its mission being one of progress, and its work to teach and guide. How carefully, then, must the parent or guardian study the character of the Paper he admits into the household. It is our aim, and has been our constant study, to make the "Irish Daily Telegraph" an acceptable visitor to every family circle, by excluding from its pages anything that could possibly offend the most fastidious; at the same time adding a new and most important feature, namely, "Ladies' Column." Use Original and Selected Poetry, Fashionable Intelligence, the Monthly Fashions, Household Receipts, Miscellaneous Literary Reading, and an ably written story, not of flimsy or sensational nature, but thoughtful, yet interesting; at once elevating both the mind and morals, and far from believing in the utility of Press for good or for evil, we have, in catering for the public, adopted this course, feeling sure that the "Telegraph" will commend itself to all as a First Class Family Journal.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.—A speciality of the "Irish Daily Telegraph" is its devotion to Agricultural Interests. In its columns will be found the Latest Market Intelligence, Reports of all Decisions on the Land Act, Cattle Shows, &c., and in short all subjects interesting to the Landed Proprietor, the Agent, or the Tenant Farmer.

COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT.—Neither expense nor trouble are spared to make the "Irish Daily Telegraph" the most reliable medium for every description of Commercial Intelligence. The Markets from every part of the United Kingdom being inserted daily, the "Exchange" carefully watched, and the "Funds" closely attended to. Merchants and Traders, Shopkeepers and Farmers, will find the "Telegraph" their best guide, as its Commercial Intelligence is fresh and authentic.

GENERAL NEWS.—As a General Newspaper, the "Irish Daily Telegraph" will bear comparison with the very best of its contemporaries by gentlemen of foreign and home news. Its columns will be found to contain a vast amount of information on all important events, whether local or foreign, keeping the reader apprised from day to day of every thing of public interest in all parts of the world. At the same time, while reading a wide variety of foreign and home news, the reader will find in the "Telegraph" a competent staff of experienced Reporters, and intelligent Correspondents, in every leading town in the South of Ireland, being constantly engaged to furnish reports of every thing of interest. The Dublin correspondence is written by gentlemen of experience and ability, who have access to good sources of information, and give a lively and entertaining resume of leading events. We unhesitatingly, then, challenge criticism on the "Irish Daily Telegraph" in regard to those features which claim it as a first class leading Journal, and confidently assert that it stands unrivalled either as a Family Paper, a Commercial Organ, or as a General Newspaper, in proof of which we may refer to any one of our issues, a perusal of which will at once show that the "Irish Daily Telegraph" is not only the Largest, but the Best Paper Published in the South of Ireland.

SPECIAL TELEGRAMS.

THE GALWAY ELECTION. [SPECIAL TELEGRAM.] (From our Correspondent.)

Dublin, Tuesday Evening. The case reserved by Mr Justice Keogh in the determining of the Galway election petition was pronounced upon by the full Court of Common Pleas. Mr Justice Lawson first delivered judgment. He said the questions the court had to answer were, 1st—Were electors who constituted the majority of the respondent in the petition fixed with sufficient knowledge of the disqualification of the said respondent, and should they have acted upon such disqualification and refrained from voting for said respondent? 2nd. Was the petitioner, there being no disqualification on his part, entitled to be declared elected for said county? Captain Nolan's disqualification had been fully established. The judge who tried the petition declared that it was proved before him that undue influence had been practised upon the electors of the county in pursuance of arrangements made by respondent and his agents previous to the election, and that it was also proved that certain prelates of the Roman Catholic Church had by letters and resolutions made known throughout the county by respondent and his agents, aided and assisted in the exercise of undue influence, and further it was proved that many Roman Catholic clergy had by denunciations and threats of temporal injury and spiritual punishment intimidated and unduly influenced the electors. These acts of disqualification were well known amongst the electors, and they voted for the respondent under such circumstances that they were not free to exercise their franchise as they pleased. His Lordship cited the opinions of Lord Denman, Justice Blackburn, and other eminent authorities as showing that voters for a disqualified candidate merely did not oppose any other candidate. Voters were to assist at, and not to prevent the election. A merely numerical majority of votes did not decide an election; but a majority of legally expressed votes, and votes given for a disqualified candidate were as votes given for a dead man. He (the learned judge) did not accept the interpretation of the law as laid down by counsel for the respondent. That disqualification should have been at first adjudged to such a doctrine would allow as valid, disqualified candidates no matter how openly notorious and open. He could not hold that with such an act and avowed illegal influence on behalf of the respondent, that the electors were ignorant of the consequences of their votes. They were not presumed to have a knowledge of the technicalities of law, but they were held to discover a criminal act; and he felt bound, sitting as a judge, even at the risk of giving offence, to call them criminals, whether lay or clerical, who acted as had been proved in behalf of the respondent—criminals engaged in an unlawful combination. To the questions submitted, he (Judge Lawson) answered affirmatively. Justice Morris said he had nothing to alter or to add but his concurrence with the judgment just delivered.

The Chief Justice Monahan said he felt bound to dissent from his learned brothers. He considered it very material to the issue to consider the figures mentioned in the report of the Judge who tried the petition. Two thousand eight hundred and twenty-three voted for the respondent, Capt Nolan; and 658 voted for the petitioner, Capt Trevellick; thus there was a majority of 2,165 of Capt Nolan disqualified. He entertained no doubt but that he could not persuade himself that the 2,000 voters had a knowledge of the disqualification. The County Galway was very large. Many of the voters had not even a knowledge of the English language, and taking the facts as stated in the report to be accurate. That some of the Catholic clergy had done openly acts of indiscretion. Yet he could not come to the conclusion that such a number of voters had a knowledge of the act of disqualification as could bring the numerical majority below the number of votes legally recorded for the petitioner. The Chief Justice cited at length some cases tried under the previous law before parliamentary commissioners, and concluded by giving his opinion upon the questions he had just put. Mr Justice Keogh followed. He fully concurred in the opinion of Mr Justice Lawson, and felt fortified in his judgment by the opinion of Mr Justice Morris. He regretted there should be a division in the Court; but, sitting on that Bench knowing no subordinate other than to his colleagues, he felt bound to give his own opinion. Captain Williams de la Poer Brenchley, elected member of Parliament for the County Galway, under terrible denunciations public and private.

REV. FATHER O'KEEFE'S CASE. [Special Telegram.] (From our own Correspondent.) Dublin, Tuesday Evening. In the action for libel of Father O'Keefe, P.P., for Callan, against Cardinal Cullen, in Court of Queen's Bench, Dublin, to-day, application was made by plaintiff's counsel, to file replications, and to put certain interrogatories to defendant as to the publication of the said libel.

Judgment was to-day given, allowing the replications, without prejudice to the defendant's right to move for leave to file rejoinders. The second application was withdrawn, defendant admitting publication of the alleged libel.

MALICIOUS BURNING OF FOX COVERS. [SPECIAL TELEGRAM.] (From our Correspondent.) Kilkenny, Tuesday. In the county Kilkenny, on Sunday night, a farm labourer named Walsh was seized by the police patrol in the act of firing the fox cover of Lord Clifden in the Gowran demesne. The horse was on fire in two directions. Walsh was in the act of firing in the third place when arrested. Another of Lord Clifden's covers has lately been burned. Nearly a dozen covers in the county Kilkenny have been maliciously burned within the past few months.

STRIKES—AND AFTER!

We can most of us remember a time when a strike among workmen was regarded much as it is regarded a revolution in the political world, or as heresy or flat blasphemy are regarded from a political point of view. It was at one time unlawful for men to combine to raise wages, and the Combination Act has only been repealed within our own time: There is now no dispute about the legality of combinations to raise wages, to decrease the period of labour, or for any kindred purposes; but the policy of combination is another matter. Whether the employed classes have done well to combine may be eagerly discussed as a theory; but the general result of combination is a hard and undeniable fact, and it clearly proves that the working classes have, as a whole, profited by the movement; or rather the several independent movements; for more wages or less work, and not seldom for both. The position of the great employed class in the United Kingdom was perhaps never better in the whole course of our political history than it is at the present moment. Trade and commerce are exceptionally active; employment is general; wages are high, and the working classes have not only good pay, but innumerable advantages that their forefathers certainly never possessed, and probably never dreamed of.—And still the movement for increased pay or decreased work goes on. We never can take up a paper now but we see that there is a wages movement here, a nine-hours movement there, or a strike somewhere else. Now, we neither denounce or depreciate this.—The success of these several movements has hitherto showed that they were warranted by the labour market and the law of supply and demand, while the success naturally sets as an incentive to members of other branches of industry which have not participated in the general rise of the prices of labour. But it will be well both for those among the employed who have already gained their demands, and for those who are now striving to gain them to bear in mind two considerations which will briefly indicate. The first consideration is, that the season of prosperity, according to all the teaching of commercial history, cannot last. The present is a time not only of unworked activity, but of over-speculation; and the reaction, if not the panic will inevitably come sooner or later. If we do not have terribly heavy losses and innumerable failures, we shall have dulness; and contracted operations will lead to diminished employment, and to distress among the unemployed, which will be none the less severe because it will follow a season of unexampled prosperity. Just mentioning that the moral of this—preparation for the period of comparative famine—is sufficiently obvious, we will point out another probable effect of the present alarming rise of prices—an effect which, on the other hand, is by no means obvious, it is this—that the largely increased price of labour will have a tendency to diminish production; it will curtail, and confine the operations of many masters with capital inadequate to the increased demands made on it; and it will tend to the bringing over of foreign labour to this country, and to facilitate the obtaining of contracts by our foreign manufacturing rivals. We would adduce facts in proof of these positions, but this would be tedious, and we merely point out to all whom it may concern the probable effects of the present labour movements. It might be thought such very simple points would be appreciated already by our more intelligent artisans, but they do not seem to be. For instance, one of the speakers at a meeting of the Woolwich Arsenal men, said that the concession of nine hours was necessary for the intellectual improvement of our mechanics and artisans to enable them to compete with foreign workmen; but if British workmen require more leisure and more money than their foreign competitors in order to put them on a social and intellectual equality with the latter, surely they must at the same time stand at a considerable commercial disadvantage. This must be clear to the most ordinary comprehension when once fairly stated.

THE SAFETY OF LIVINGSTONE. Wherever colour and liveliness are held in honour the good news that Dr. Livingstone is safe will be heard with satisfaction and delight. Long years have now elapsed since the bold adventurer bade good-bye to civilization, and plunged into the miasmatic swamps, the arid deserts, the fever-plunged marshes of Central Africa. Year has followed year since Dr. Livingstone was last heard of, the accounts of his safety brought to the east-coast by Arab traders proved on examination to be fables, and a universal belief was settling in that the great explorer had shared the fate of the many famous travellers who, like poor Mungo Park, laid down their lives in attempting to solve the great enigma of African geography. Within the last few days, however, telegrams have come to hand from Lieutenant Stanley, the chief of the Livingstone Search Expedition, which leave no doubt that the gallant explorer is safe, and not alone safe, but victorious. He has, it would appear, at last solved the wonderful problem of the source of the Nile; a problem which has occupied the attention of geographers from the days of Herodotus to our own, and which, notwithstanding the labours of Speke and Grant and Baker, still remains one of the unsolved riddles of Nature. What a reputation Livingstone will have in Europe! and assuredly he has well won the laurels which will crown his brow. Heroism such as he has exhibited, in battling with all but insuperable difficulties in the interest of science, is a nobler virtue than the rash claims of the soldier "seeking the bubble reputation at the cannon's mouth."—Evening Telegraph.

DEATH, AND MIRACULOUS RETURN TO LIFE, OF A DISTINGUISHED WARRIOR.

Pat Murphy, a distinguished member of Her Majesty's Militia Reserve, lay on his back, stone dead. At least the neighbours, one and all, whether drunk or sober, said he was dead—"dead as a door nail," or any other description of defunct ironmongery. The time when Pat lay in this deplorable state was twelve, midnight; on Saturday, and the place where he lay—Little Mitchell-street, Waterford—a region as little known to the outside world as the interior of Africa, for foot of the most adventurous stranger has never been known to enter there; and it is only pressure of sternest necessity that even the police profane it by their presence.

On the night in question these guardians of the night did, for a wonder, put in an appearance under Head-constable Barry, who, on examining the corpse; said that the cuts and bruises on the head and face; and the blood with which both were covered; did not certainly improve Pat's beauty; but as regarded his being "dead," he was so do doubt, but it was dead drunk. On hearing this heartless observation one indignant female cried "shame," and another of a pious turn of mind said, "Goodness forgive you, Mr. Barry," and all the other pious females present repeated words—"Goodness forgive you, Mr. Barry." Five of the soberest of them now raised the body, four seizing it by the legs and arms and the fifth tenderly supporting the head; and whilst being borne to the hospitable shelter of a neighbour's house; the vigorous plunge which Pat gave, prostrating the five corpse-bearers in the channel, seemed to give some colour to the Head-constable's opinion that the case was not quite so hopeless as had been at first imagined. And now, whilst the injured man is being made comfortable on a luxurious shake-down of straw on a garret through the windows and roof of which the little stars merrily twinkled; and the breezes of heaven blew freely, let us enquire why he was thus made to suffer in the flesh. Alas! it was the old, old story of woman's trustingness and man's treachery.

Pat had been paying his addresses to a poor but virtuous girl, and a celebrated beauty of the locality named Margaret—of a son is familiarly called M'ig—M'her; but as soon as he got the soldier's coat his bosom swelled with pride, and a change otherwife came over the spirit of his dream. He now worshipped at the shrine of another divinity; and Saturday night Miss M'her, whose suspicions had been aroused, and was therefore on the watch, appeared quite suddenly on the scene of meeting between the base deceiver and his new adored. This latter, conscious of guilt, fled on the approach of her rival, and the much injured, and justly indignant Miss M'her at once attacked the wicked destroyer of her peace, leaving him in the pitiable state already described.

We have now only to observe that Pat did not after all depart to the land of spirits unless the whiskey shop can be so called; that he was abroad early next day; and that his countenance did not seem embarrassed by the sundry cuts and bruises thereon, there was nothing whatever to show what a "hair-breath escape" was his.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. The Council of the Royal Agricultural Society give notice that they will receive applications to the 23rd July, from the inhabitants of the principal towns in Munster for the holding of the annual cattle show for 1873. In our last we pointed out some of the advantages of having the show held in Waterford. We trust no time will be lost in making an effort to have this desideratum accomplished.

FANNING INSTITUTION.—A monthly meeting of the governors of the Fanning Institution was held this day, Alderman P. E. Reid presiding. It was agreed that the office of assistant matron should be dispensed with, and that a hall porter be appointed at a salary of £25 a year and rations.

The Alabamian Arbitrators are about to adjourn for eight months.

THEATRICALS.—We mentioned in our last issue that the Theatre Royal (Dublin) Dramatic Company would open their season here on Monday night, June 10. They did so; and, as we predicted, were met by an audience at once large, appreciative, critical, and intelligent. We would, indeed, be much surprised if it were otherwise; for the play-going public of Waterford have never been backward in their appreciation of a legitimate entertainment. As our old favourites, Mr. Sharpe, Miss Saville, Mr. and Mrs. Huntley, Mr. Johnson, Miss Travers, Mr. Whitton, &c., appeared upon the boards, they were greeted with the plaudits of the audience; while those ladies and gentlemen whom we have so long known previously seem already to be winning the esteem of the citizens. We hope to have space next post for a more detailed critique.

Mr Justice Keogh was burned in effigy in Queenstown on Sunday. It is said that by assassinating M. P. The O'Donoghue, who is himself virtually removed from the representation of Tralee, in consequence of his anti-home-rule principles, intends to move an address to the Crown praying for the removal of Judge Keogh from the Bench.

The Duke of Edinburgh left Dublin on Saturday, after having spent a very pleasant week in the metropolis. His Royal Highness arrived on Tuesday morning; he visited the Zoological Gardens and Royal Hibernian Military School in the evening. On Wednesday the Duke, accompanied by the Lord Lieutenant, the Countess Spencer, and a brilliant suite, opened the Exhibition. The Duke attended the Mansion House Ball in the evening. On Thursday he was present at the unveiling of the memorial to the late Prince Consort. On Friday he made an excursion into the county Wicklow; and on Saturday His Royal Highness left Ireland.
