The Waterford Chronicle

FRIDAY, JUNE 14, 1872

In the House of Commons last night the report of Mr Justice Keogh, on the Galway election petition, was read, and Mr Gladstone moved that the report be entered on the minutes. This having been agreed to, Mr Gladstone further moved that the Clerk of the Crown attend at the bar of the House on Friday (to-day), and amend the return by substituting Captain Trench's name for that of Captain Nolan. After a feeble protest from Sir Colman O'Loghlen, the motion was agreed to. In reply to Sir Selwyn Ebbatson, Mr Gladstone said that the American Government had declined to be a party to any application for an adjournment of the arbitration, as they did not consider that they were the parties to oppose any obstacle to the proceedings of the arbitrators, or to suggest any delay, for their object was to include all questions in the arbitration. It was not correct to say that there was a statement in the letter of Earl Granville to the effect that no application could be made, except a joint application for the adjournment.

The Belfast strike, as it may be called, is likely to prove a great calamity. We learn from the papers that every mill is idle except seven or eight, and of these three will close during the present week. Out of about 830,000 spindles in Ireland devoted to flax-spinning, upwards of 600,000 are in Belfast. Of these 450,000 are now silent, and of the remainder 60,000 or 60,000 will be idle by Saturday next. 25,700 people are out of employment, and on Saturday next, should this deplorable disaster continue, upwards of 30,000 people connected in one way or another with our great staple trade will be unemployed. A strike and "lock-out" on so gigantic a scale has never hitherto occurred in this country, and there seems no immediate prospect of a settlement. The masters have determined that beyond the two shillings per week advance to dressers and roughers they will not go should the mills stand idle for months. They say that they cannot afford to pay more, and several of the employers maintain that they would lose considerably by giving the advance, but in prospect of better trade they wished to keep their hands employed. The dressers and roughers, on the other hand, are apparently inflexible in their determination not to accept the 2s. offered, and because 2,000 workers cannot come to terms with their masters in a matter involving only 1s. a week each of wages, nearly 30,000 men and women, boys and girls, are this day walking idle through the streets of Belfast.

Mr. Gladstone is being again teased as to his religious belief. The Rev. S. G. Potter, well known in Ireland, has him in hand now. "The Globe," albeit an enemy to the Premier, hinted that Mr. Potter was impertinent, whatever that worthy man replies:—"My attention has been drawn to a leading article in your paper of Saturday, in which you seem to censure my 'impertinence' in 'teaching' Mr. Gladstone upon the subject of his religious belief. I beg to say that I in no way criticised Mr. Gladstone: I merely wrote a statement of facts attested by two British officers, and Mr. Dumas, a Greek gentleman, who has written a history of Mr. Gladstone's mission to Corfu, all professing to be 'eye witnesses'! The catechising was by a working man of Sheffield, named Hinchcliffe. Allow me to add that a Rev. H. B. Johnston, a friend of mine, tells me that while he was at Naples, the year before last, Mr. Gladstone was prostrate there before a Roman Catholic altar. The importance of this question to the Protestant public cannot be over-estimated, because, if all this be true, we can see the drift of his pro-Papal policy.

A terrible row has just concluded in Belfast. The General Assembly of Presbyterians called up once more the old question of vocal "versus" instrumental music. They began their discussion at seven o'clock on Friday evening, and they say up until six o'clock on Saturday morning. A local journal thus describes the scene:—"Many ladies mothers, and daughters, had also been out of their beds all night, for the first and we trust the only time in their lives. Any stranger who passed through May-street about four o'clock on Saturday morning might have heard shouts, cheers, and even groans coming out of a church which was brilliantly lighted up, and crowded with a most excited audience. One distinguished orator was menacing his brethren with a secession, with a thorough break-up of the Church, and such allusions were naturally received with a storm of deprecation. Then an eminent ex-Moderator rose emphatically to protest against such language and was loudly cheered. Rev. gentlemen, elders, and ladies of all ages were greatly excited, and the temper of the assembly grew warmer and warmer as the morning advanced. The excitement is described as being terrific when the chairman announced that the number were equal in the division. The chairman said he felt himself unable to give his casting vote either way, and the question stands.

At a special meeting of the Liberal and Conservative Farmers' Club on Saturday, resolutions were adopted declaring that the savage onslaught Mr Justice Keogh had made on the Hierarchy and priesthood of Ireland indicates such deep-seated intolerance that they could no longer co-exist in his impartiality and moderation, and that they would hail with satisfaction his removal from the bench as a graceful concession to the public opinion of Ireland. A petition to Mr Gladstone with that object was agreed to, and it was further resolved to organise a system of collections throughout the two counties to augment the fund for defraying Captain Nolan's costs. Vigorous speeches were delivered by the President and several members, in which Judge Keogh's conduct was warmly denounced, and the character and patriotism of the Irish Hierarchy and clergy vindicated.

Mr Gladstone has replied to the memorial presented by the Irish Liberal members, refusing to release the remaining political prisoners. The letter conveying the refusal was discussed by the Amnesty Association on Saturday, and pronounced highly unsatisfactory—no answer, in fact, to the argumentative appeal put forward by the Association. The discontent occasioned by this decision is intensified by the apparent design in communicating it just as Prince Alfred left the country: Mr Butt purposes bringing the subject before Parliament on an early day.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

In a recent edition of this journal we mentioned the fact that the annual show of the Royal Agricultural Society will be held in some town in Munster in 1873, and at the time we pointed out the fact that Waterford was in every respect suited for such an exhibition. The city is connected by rail with the most important agricultural districts of the West, the South, and the centre of Ireland, and by steamers with the largest districts in England and Wales. Facilities are thus afforded to exhibitors such as cannot be found in any other town in the province of Munster. The advantages accruing to the rich agricultural district, of which Waterford may be regarded as the centre, cannot be over-estimated, and it will not only benefit the farmers but the traders and shopkeepers will find an unexpected stimulus to their business by the holding of the show. The Waterford Agricultural Society and the worthy Mayor of the city have patriotically taken up the matter, and, as will be perceived by advertisement in our columns, a meeting will be held on Monday to further a project which we trust will bring unanimous satisfaction.

JUDGE KEOGH AND OLIVER CROMWELL BURNED IN EFFIGY.

About nine o'clock last night Judge Keogh and Oliver Cromwell were solemnly burned in effigy on the historic hill of Ballybricket, Waterford. Afterwards the ashes were carefully collected and to prevent pollution by casting them into the Saig or scattering them to the winds, they were taken to the nearest cross-roads and there buried. The effigies were removed from a house in Peter's Lane and borne on poles round the city, followed by a crowd of some ten or fifteen thousand persons. One of the city bands preceded the figures displaying most exquisite music, it indeed the "Hogus's March" may under any circumstances be so designated.

When passing the Town Hall the procession halted and Judge Keogh was made to dance an Irish jig, to the great delight of the lookers on, and to witness which there was a general rush amongst the audience before whom the Theatre Royal Company, under Mr Johnson's management, were then performing. We should state that Oliver Cromwell was arranged in Field Marshall's uniform with cocked hat and sword. He wore on his breast several tin medals each representing some city or town—Wexford, Drogheda, &c.—where a massacre had been ordered by him. Judge Keogh appeared in "wig and gown," and certainly if the figures presented anything like faithful likenesses of the originals, neither Judge Keogh nor Oliver Cromwell has much to be thankful for in the way of good looks, for more villainous-looking countenances than theirs we have never set eyes upon. On the breast of one figure was a card with the word "Cromwell" on the card on the breast of the second were the words, "Dully Keogh, so help me." As soon as the procession reached Ballybricket a jury was empanelled and several witnesses were examined, and after an eloquent charge from the Judge, gentlemen residing on the O'Keay estate, and Mr. Cromwell and Keogh were found guilty and condemned to the stake—the first named for having committed sundry inhuman massacres, and Judge Keogh for the offences of which Ireland is cognizant. Both were cruelly beaten before being made to mount the pile of burning tar-barrels prepared for their reception, and we regret to observe that even while being consumed by the flames not one word of pity did we hear, not even from the police, who were present under command of Head Constable Barry—who never once interfered in any way. There was not a single breath of breeze—not one stray word—save a diatribe on Cromwell and Keogh—and at eleven o'clock the vast multitude had returned to their homes.

TRIFLY A CASE OF REAL HARDSHIP.

There is not perhaps in all Ireland this day a more cruelly persecuted man than a certain retired tradesman residing in a parished lane of the Irish Riviera. He cannot walk abroad without having his ears outraged by hearing that this common fellow of the other has been claiming relationship to him! Even eerygymn, we regret to say, have not been above advancing these unfounded claims. But THE MOST DEPLORABLE OF ALL appears to have been an individual who, but for the timely interposition of a lady, would certainly have been well and deservedly castigated. Some days since the hero of our story, who, if he only admitted all the claims to relationship made on him, would number his poor cousins by the hundred, complained bitterly to the Head Constable, Lady Lane; and, to do the Head Constable justice, he seemed to listen with interest and sympathy whilst Mr. McSwitters—let so we shall call the poor persecuted gentleman—was yet relating his tale of woe, he suddenly exclaimed: "Why, there comes one of the fellows. Just now I met him on the Mall. 'Come here, sir,' said I. He came over, and would you believe it? he was so loutish as not to uncover! 'Take off your hat, sir,' said I. He took it off as if by instinct. 'How dare you,' I said, 'claim relationship with me.' With bated breath and whispering humbleness he said, he never did; but, seeing he lied, I was about to chastise him;—he is a mere printer fellow—when

A LADY APPEARED ON THE SCENE, seized him by the arm; and carried him off. I heard her use the word 'cracked' in allusion, doubtless to his presumption; and now, repeated Mr. McSwitters, 'there he comes.' Truth compels us to say that a more condemned countenance than his we have seldom set eyes on. We may here observe that there is a certain other individual, whose amittit has got the better of his discretion, and for whom there is "a rod in pickle." His name we have not heard; but it seems he plays the Highland pipes, and calls himself a doctor.

We have not yet mentioned that Mr. McSwitters candidly admits that his father was a gentleman in the right sense of the term; but it is his proud boast that through the veins of the maternal author of his being there flowed the finest of blue blood; and it is this patriotic fluid coursing through his own veins which raises his soul so far above the common herd amongst whom, through a malignant stroke of adverse fate, his lot is cast. One of these low people—a female—brought him to the Police Court some days since on a charge of abusive language, which appears to have been used, if at all, under great provocation.

It seems that, in a moment of weakness, he led to the Altar Hymenial one every way unsuited to him; but afterwards, on coming to reason, as the only reparations he could make to himself and family, he cast her off. She sued him before the magistrates for maintenance, and by them an order was made that he should pay five shillings a week. Notwithstanding this magnificent allowance, he frequently found her on his door-step half naked and starving; and one day, seeing her in the usual place, he came out to drive her off. Just then he heard the words: "If you were a poor man's wife, I would give you a bit of bread. As it was evident the words were intended for him, he rebuked the speaker, and "one word borrowed another." The result was his being brought before the Mayor. It was not the fine of four shillings he had to pay, but the Mayor's strange language, which wounded his sensibilities: "In other lands," exclaimed Mr. McSwitters, "a gentleman could shoot any one who had insulted him." "We have not reached, and I hope never shall reach, that state of civilisation," was his worship's reply. Now, we ask, is not this downright Communism? But fall comes of departing, however slightly, from the good old "silver spoon system," and selecting our chief magistrates principally because of mere merit and talents. But look out, Mr. Mayor! Some of your brother justices, amongst the rest a gallant son of Mars, have before now been rudely reminded that the days of "rulers who rule, cozzees for oze" have not entirely gone by. Only a few weeks since there was a massive set, the language of which was as certain "to arrest attention" as any that even Judge Keogh could have used; and although the reading of it in the Club was received with bursts of merriment, the persk it challenged laughing loudly, we strongly suspect much of the laughter being due to the fact that the locality know as "the wrong side of the street." It may not be generally known that Mr. McSwitters is a man of extraordinary muscular power, and that once off a time he and Lord Marcus, with other choicest spirits, took a run down from London to Nottingham, and there met "Bendigo," the "Staley Bridge Chicken," and other distinguished members of the prize ring. It was during the encounter with the "chicken," when that renowned bruiser was time after time hurled by the spring of his opponent's arm; and as a stone from a catapult, that Lord Marcus, in a tone of alarm not unmixt with admiration, exclaimed: "McSwitters, you will make your father's honor." We have now to water printer fellow, and his wife, sons of Mars, ladies, &c., and all the other whom it may concern that Mr. McSwitters carries a formidable cudgel and that if they persist in putting forward absurd and unbecoming claims to relationship to him he may at length be provoked to "make work for the coroner."

THE NEW CATHEDRAL BELLS.

A number of men are at present employed in the Waterford Cathedral taking down the old bells and making ample room for the new. We understand that the new peal of bells will arrive in Waterford by one of Mr. Malcomson's steamers next week, and when set up they will reflect the highest credit on the city. The subscriptions to these fine bells have been numerous, and in some cases manifold, and we hope to be in a position to publish the full list of the subscribers in our next.

THEATRICALS.—It affords us great pleasure to state that the Theatre Royal (Dublin) Dramatic Company still continue to delight large audiences in the Town Hall. We are glad to find that so accomplished a pianist as Mr. Danvers has been obtained to fill the position occupied so long and so efficiently by our friend, Mr. Kinross. We are common with all who have ever been delighted with the performances of Mr. Kinross on the pianoforte, were truly sorry to find that he was not travelling with the Company during the present tour. He is, however, the gentleman who substitutes him appears to be, as was his talented predecessor, a thorough musician and has, so far, given general satisfaction. Miss Travers sings a favorite ballad each evening, and is almost invariably in error. The same may be said of Mr. Walton's domo singing. On Wednesday evening the new and laughter-provoking Comedy of "The Cleverest and the Next of Kin" was produced for the first time in Waterford. As Roger Champ, Mr. Johnson played his part in such a manner as to keep the audience in one continuous stream of mirth. Mr. Huntley, as the playful Gravelly, was also very entertaining, whilst Mr. Huntley, as Roger's mamma, and Miss Travers, as "the old girl," left nothing undesired. On last evening "The Man in the Iron Mask" was performed. This deeply affecting tragedy was admirably gone through. We do not recollect having ever seen Mr. Sharpe to greater advantage. All through the piece, his "make up" was faultless, and as the masked prisoner in the Bastille he entranced his audience by some very powerful acting. The "Courier of Lyons" will be produced again on Saturday evening, and on Monday evening the great Irish Drama of "Arrah-na-Pogue" will be performed.

NATIONAL TESTIMONIAL

TO MR. MAGUIRE, M.P. On the completion of the Twentieth Year of his Parliamentary Services.

A MEETING of some of Mr. MAGUIRE'S Constituents, convened by the Mayor's Circular, and held at the Chamber of Commerce, Cork, on Thursday, the 15th February last, it was proposed by WILLIAM SHAW, M.P., seconded by JOHN NICHOLAS MURPHY, D.L., and unanimously resolved:—

That for the greater part of a generation Mr. Maguire's time, talents, and energies, have been almost exclusively devoted to the public service, with a zeal that never flagged, and a fidelity that never failed.

That it is therefore, desirable on public grounds to give practical evidence that his constituents and his country appreciate and value his services.

That the subscription to the proposed Testimonial is not to be considered to imply adhesion to any special political or religious views.

That the following are the names of the persons who have contributed to the proposed Testimonial:—

From the Archbishop of Dublin. "In my opinion a national debt of gratitude is due to Mr. Maguire for distinguished services, rendered in and out of Parliament, to our Country and to our Church."

From the Archbishop of Westminster. "I have great pleasure in uniting with the Bishops and faithful in Ireland in presenting to Mr. Maguire an expression of our gratitude, for his long and faithful services."

From the Archbishop of Cashel. "Through the great credit it has been set on foot by his fellow-citizens in Cork, we may trust that Iriahmen at home and abroad, will cordially join in this Testimonial to their distinguished countryman, as a recognition of public services, not confined to the City or County of Cork, but rendered to the Nation at large."

From the Bishop of Cork. "A Member of Parliament is not a mere delegate to pass over the interests of a restricted locality. His constituents are as one of the representatives of the nation, to promote the general weal of his country."

From the Bishop of Down and Connor. "Ireland is not ungrateful. Other public men may be convinced that if, at a future time, they give to her the benefit of their talent, their eloquence, and their zeal, she will not forget her debt to them."

From the Bishop of Ross. "Any word of approval from me of the useful Parliamentary career of Mr. Maguire could not in the slightest degree add to the well-deserved celebrity inaugurated to him so successfully in his City and in the County of Cork, and which cannot but find a hearty response throughout the length and breadth of Ireland, for in him we have the advocate of Catholic Ireland in Parliament."

From the Bishop of Down and Connor. "No man has behaved, during his long lengthened Parliamentary career, with greater zeal and ability, and more disinterestedness and unflinching labour, for the best interests of his country, and for the personal independence and effective influence among all classes and grades, and I may add, too, with the best results to others, than he has done."

From the Bishop of Elphin. "It is not in Cork only, nor in every part of Ireland, but in every country where the Irish emigrant is to be found, the public career of Mr. Maguire, is admired, and his public services gratefully appreciated."

From the Bishop of Kilmora. "I consider no man deserves better of Ireland than Mr. Maguire."

From the Bishop of Cloyne. "A National recognition, and a national reward are due to Mr. Maguire for his long and useful Parliamentary services."

From the Bishop of Down and Connor. "Ireland is not ungrateful. Other public men may be convinced that if, at a future time, they give to her the benefit of their talent, their eloquence, and their zeal, she will not forget her debt to them."

Unknowing of the soul inspired That thrills throughout the Poet's lines, Ye shut your eyes unto his worth, And curse the light that on you shines.

Avant ye, then. 'Gainst us ye wage A strife that ye can never gain; For ever doomed—how base a fate— To fight 'gainst Thought and Song in vain!

Before the Poet bow you down With shamefast brow and lowered eye, Unworthy as ye are to touch His robe's mere hem as he goes by.

The trial of William Harmer, for perjury in the Godorich divorce case, commenced at the Central Criminal Court on Monday, and was adjourned.

The political aspect of affairs remains in America substantially unchanged. There are evidences furnished by the press in all parts of the country that Mr. Greeley is likely to get considerable support for the Presidency, but no definite calculations can be made until after the regular Republican and Democratic Conventions have been held.

The former occurs at Philadelphia on the 5th of June and the latter at Baltimore on the 9th of July. Reports that President Grant will not run for re-election are pronounced unfounded, and reports that Senator Morton will not support him have also been denied.

Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia, and D. W. Voorhes, of Indiana, have declared against Greeley.

RIVAL EDITORS.—In the Court of Exchequer, on Saturday, Mr. Harrison, on behalf of Mr. William Arthur A'Beckett, moved for a rule to show cause why an attachment for contempt of court should not issue against Mr. Mortimer, who was the proprietor of the Exeter, a weekly paper which had been published in the Strand on premises which had been previously occupied by the Tomahawk, of which the plaintiff was the editor.

It appeared that Mr. A'Beckett has entered an action for libel against the defendant, such libel as alleged being contained in an article in the Exeter of the 20th of May last, setting forth his attorney's letter to them, and holding the plaintiff up to ridicule as the author of a popular piece called "Shilly Shally," brought out at the Gaiety Theatre, such article ending with the words "Mr. A'Beckett will appear again."

Every week since then the plaintiff alleged that the Exeter contained an article referring to him, Mr. Charles Leadbeater, and Mr. Odger, those gentlemen having also commenced actions against the defendant for libel. The learned counsel contended that those articles were written with the object of deterring the plaintiff from proceeding with his action, and consequently that the defendant had committed a contempt of court.

The reading of the articles referred to by Harrison occasioned considerable amusement. The Court having conferred for a few moments, the Lord Chief Baron said their lordships had carefully read the articles, and did not think there was sufficient in them to justify the application, but there could not be doubt that they referred to the libel. If such articles were at once put a stop to the Court would not interfere. But if they were continued, and an application were again made, he was far from saying that an attachment would not be granted. He hoped after this warning that the defendant would refrain from publishing such a future.

SCREECHING.—A choice specimen of the American "screaming" style of invective and abuse is to be found in the "Franklin Caucasian." The paper supports Mr. Horace Greeley's candidature for the presidency, and vilifies his opponents with an eloquence never surpassed in Billingsgate. The oppositians are denounced as "unconscionable congresses of perjured ruffians," as "itchy palmed, bribe-taking, office-peddling bores and sots," as "blasphemous pickpockets, incendiaries, and thieves," and are exhorted to "tremble at the roar of coming doom."

At the prospect of Mr. Greeley's triumph, the "Caucasian" rises to the following eloquence:—"Clap your hands, ye fathers, because the bread will not much longer be torn from the mouths of your hungry children to fatten a horde of idle savages, the nation's wards, smut-skinned vagabonds, whose only business is to attend convention, spout insolence, vote for the outcroppings of Yankee penitentiaries, slums, and back alloys, and manufacture Southern State constitutions and laws. Flap your wings and scream your shrillest notes of victory, oh terrible Shaggy and fat-headed, let volleys of blazes and festive far-burles crackle and gleam. Let torchlight uod to bonfire, and cannons boom their mighty peals. Let rocks, cataracts, hillsides, calves, oceans, gulls, lakes, and mill-dams, men, women, children, fops, poodles, beasts, birds, and reptiles, all creation, animate or inanimate, burst forth in one tremendous, deafening thundering, ery splitting roar of triumph, joy, and praise. For Caucasian patriotism and common sense have prevailed, and Radicalism, the cunning, the brutal, the bloody, is doomed to speedy and irrevocable overthrow. Glory, hallelujah! Hurrah! Hurrah! Three times thrice thousand cheers and a view-halloo for Horace Greeley and B. Gratz Brown, the philosopher and the statesman—the ticket first suggested and only advocated by the 'Caucasian'!"

The Methodist General Conference assembled last month in New York. The episcopal address presented states that Methodism is one of the grandest accomplishments in the history of the Christian era. One hundred and fifty years ago it had neither name nor place among the institutions of the earth, and it has the largest membership of any Christian Church in Christendom not aided by the State. Its ministers are preaching in every land and in every language under the sun. Its present condition is as prosperous as at any period of its history.—New York Evening Mail.

In the Court of Chancery on Monday, in the case of Fletcher v. Phelps, Mr. John Harris moved for an injunction to restrain the defendant from executing certain works on the lands of Killfin, in the county of Waterford, until he should have paid to the landlord two and a half years' rent due. Applicant did not believe the works proposed would be beneficial to the estate. Motion granted.

In the Court of Probate on Tuesday, before Judge Warren and a special jury, the case of Phelan v. D. Lahundy, which had been at hearing for three days, terminated last evening. It was a suit to establish the alleged will of Michael Lahundy, a farmer and miller, who lived near Waterford, and died in November, 1871. By the will the bulk of the property, estimated at about £2,300, was bequeathed to the Christian Brothers community. Deceased had no children, but his next of kin disputed the will on the ground of undue influence. The jury found a verdict against the will.

The death is at length announced of the celebrated Dr. Biddy Early, who resided near Feale, county Clare, and whose name as a witch had spread over all the south-west of Ireland. She died on the 1st instant, having for some time before repented of her many necromancies. She had buried three or four husbands.
