PRISONS OF IRELAND.

REPORT OF THE INSPECTOR GENERAL OF THE STATE OF PRISONS, JUST PUBLISHED.

[Extracts.]

WATERFORD COUNTY JAIL.—As I consider the success of this county jail much indebted to the interests of the whole country, I am anxious to report the very encouraging advances that the system has made since my last inspection. It is founded upon the principles of strict classification, a rule of silence, general employment, and instruction in useful trades.

On the day of inspection, the following was the detail of employment of the 100 male prisoners: Working at their trades, 26; learning trades, 29; labourers assisting, 35; House duties, 10; 100. The value of the work in the last year was £380 7s 9d; cost of materials, and other outgoings, £683 3s 4d; clear profit, £216 9s 6d.

BRIDEWELLS OF THE COUNTY OF TIPPERARY.—ROSCREA.—I found this prison clean, under a new keeper, who appears to be very anxious to do his duty, but has never been trained to the duties of his office.

TEMPERMORE.—I found this prison almost wholly unimproved, and have taken measures under the provisions of the Prison Act (sec. 87) to supply what is necessary; the house contains on the ground floor, two rooms for the keeper, one day-room for males, and one cell for persons confined for drunkenness.

THURLES.—This is a very large bridewell, containing about 20 cells, 13 of which are prepared for the reception of prisoners. I found it clean, the rough state of the yards and other circumstances exist, however, the work of the new keeper appears to be a respectable man, but wholly untrained.

CASHEL.—This bridewell is extremely ill-planned, and is so inconveniently situated that they are so much water-ground, and of no use for the prisoners; the prison affords a good accommodation, and has been reported to be a chief of police, as a convenient jail, particularly for the purpose of keeping apart persons for further examination; it is kept clean and orderly.

NEW BIRMINGHAM.—This is one of those very small prisons not containing the legal accommodations which were allowed to remain in remote districts requiring a bridewell. Six of the cells are in a separate building, and the whole of the prison is found to be completely insufficient, that an additional building will become necessary.

CORNET LEIGH, 1st Dragon Guards, was landed on the 28th at Devonport, on board a troop-ship, in which he had embarked to join his Regt. in Canada, and melancholy to say expired the same evening, at the Military Hospital, from the effects of sea sickness.

A party of cyprines at Castlbar, last week, rescued with great violence, a deserter of the 87th from an escort of the 23d, who had him in custody.

A STRIKE AMONGST WATERWORKMEN; OR, A MUTINY IN A LAUNDRY.—Friday morning, six women, employed by the Waterworks in the laundry, were at work as usual, when they refused to work, on the ground that they were not to be employed in spinning, knitting, and plain-work.

On the 26th ultimo, an unfortunate man named Thomas Collier, residing near Castlecomer, in the Queen's County, Ireland, was killed by a falling beam in a cow-shed adjoining his father's house.

be felt, viz., to place in the doors of the corridors, iron-railing doors inside of the solid ones, which gives the power to lock up the cells by day, without injuring the ventilation.

A very great nuisance has been removed since my last inspection, by an ingenious contrivance, by which water has been brought into the corridors.

I found everything to approve of in the state and management of the interior, and think that the county possesses a competent Governor, without which no system of useful prison discipline can be carried on.

CITY OF KILKENNY JAIL.—Although this prison is quite inadequate to carry into effect the provisions of the Prison Act, I found that the male prisoners were not found to receive 11 male criminals, and five cells to eight debtors. The females are crowded, and their day-rooms very dark.

LOSS OF SEVEN SHIPS IN THE GULF OF RIGA.—(From the Aberdeen Constitution.) In our last we stated that information of the loss of seven vessels in the Gulf of Riga had just reached us.

WINDWARD MAY 1.—I am very sorry to inform you of the loss of the Regina, in Riga Bay, among the ice. I passed Domesnes on the 23d ult, and proceeded up the bay through a narrow cut in the ice, about a quarter of a mile broad, with a fleet of about 60 sails.

The election of Mr. Lefevre to the Speakership has settled the only question which the Cabinet could carry, or perhaps wished to carry. It was a mere question of numbers, and as such they could manage it as they pleased.

What Mr. Lefevre may do to excel his predecessor in the official duties of yawning and sleeping, remains to be told; but if such virtues would have been ridiculous in such an office in any other time, they may perhaps be necessary purposes in our own.

REFUSAL OF THE CORPORATION OF LONDON TO ADDRESS THE QUEEN.

On Thursday a Court was held in consequence of a requisition received by the Lord Mayor.—To consider the expediency of presenting an address to Her Majesty on the recent trying circumstances which her Majesty has been placed in, and expressing the confidence of the Court that her Majesty will be guided in her councils by such Ministers only as will earnestly exert themselves to procure the extension and confirmation of the liberties and franchises of the people; to acquiesce with the condition of the workmen of the dock; to improve the cause of universal education.

Mr. Aderton in moving the previous question, said he did not forget the insult cast upon the corporation by the late answer put into the mouth of the Queen by those Ministers whom she still retained.

The Morning Herald speaks of this proceeding as follows:—"The result of the discussion in the Court of Common Council, yesterday, can be scarcely more flattering to the self-love of Her Majesty's Ministers, than the failure of their education, and the rejection of the petition of the Corporation of London, to present an address of sympathy for the Queen has been defeated by the votes of an immense majority. The Whigs must feel that the days of their official existence are numbered. Their stock of trickery and mean frauds is nearly exhausted. We trust that they may be expelled from the Council of Ministers, and that the people may be relieved from the innocent Sovereign to any large portion of that unpopularity, which is destined to be their own portion, so long as their names shall be remembered."

There is a degree of baseness to which even the lowest of mankind cannot sink. There is a pinnacle of extravagance and folly to which even the most silly, ignorant, and excitable of mortals cannot be urged. These are truths which are known to all the world, with the single exception of the gentlemen at Whitehall, who govern the proceedings of Sir Matthew Wood, Baronet, Alderman, and Member of Parliament, and of the corporation of London, who live in this Christian land.

The opinion of the Common Council of the city of London, on the 26th inst., was that the Ministers of the Queen of England, through the instrumentality of one of their tools and tools, thought it worth their while to appeal to it. But weak Whitehall fancied it might acquire strength by the support of a Guildhall one degree less weak. Weak Whitehall was mistaken. Guildhall was not one degree, two or three degrees, less weak and silly than Whitehall, and determined accordingly not to have anything to do with it.

It never could have been imagined until now to what base uses an imbecile, profligate, and traitorous Administration could apply the name and character of a British Sovereign. It remained for a bed chamber administration to make Sir Matthew Wood the patron of a Queen Regent of England, and to subject the "vestal throne in the west" to the indignity of a vote, apparently passed against her, by a majority of 46 in the Common Council of the city of London.

Who can deny that in this instance the Common Council of the city of London are in the right? Who can fail to recognise in their conduct upon the present occasion a conclusive proof that within the last few years the character of this corporation has decidedly improved? There was a time when no degree of profligacy, however odious or revolting, provided it was associated with the name of political liberalism, would have sufficed to give it power. There was a time when politicians, calling themselves Reformers, no matter how indistinct the partition which separated them from revolutionists, could have wielded it at their will.

The change is excellent. But in this life there is nothing so good as to be without its ally; and there is great cause for regret that the name of political liberalism, which has driven the Corporation of London to produce this first manifestation of its new character in circumstances which are plainly calculated to give rise to the supposition, erroneous as we believe that supposition would be, that it implies some diminution of dutiful respect and loyal attachment to the Sovereign, is associated with the name of political liberalism, which has driven the Corporation of London to produce this first manifestation of its new character in circumstances which are plainly calculated to give rise to the supposition, erroneous as we believe that supposition would be, that it implies some diminution of dutiful respect and loyal attachment to the Sovereign.

We have neither time nor space for detailed commentary upon the debate in the Common Council. The speeches of the members of the Corporation, and of the Ministers, national and patriotic; and if we have occasion to regret that some of them seem to be couched in language less reverential to the Sovereign than we should have desired, it is but justice to remark that there is not one of them but who breathes a spirit of a truer and more genuine loyalty to the Sovereign than has been manifested by those Ministers and their obsequious tools who gratuitously, disrespectfully, traitorously, and exclusively for their own selfish and sordid purposes, exposed the name and conduct of the Sovereign to an unsuitable and as they yesterday underwent.

We have never been among the flatterers of the Common Council of the city of London. While our Liberal contemporaries were describing this body as the second deliberative assembly in the world, we never attempted to conceal our opinion that even in Great Britain there were more than one deliberative assembly, independently of the House of Parliament, that might fairly claim to be as equal with it, whether in patriotism or in intelligence. We do, not, however, so much deplore the civic Parliament of London, or so far undervalue its influence; as to doubt that its refusal, by so large a majority as that of yesterday, to co-operate in the Queen's coronation, is a most honorable and patriotic act.

SUGAR FROM OYAHUTE.—The schooner Ulster came in yesterday from the Society Islands, having brought up a cargo of sugar from Oyahute. We understand that this beautiful little island last year produced 100 tons of this article, and that this year it will be nearly double, as the growth of the cane is in its infancy, the sugar is said to be of very excellent quality. When the settlement at Moreton Bay is thrown open for location, we entertain but little doubt that it will be able to cultivate sufficient cane, in the warm latitudes of the neighbourhood, to supply, not only a few years, but the necessities of sending to a foreign port for a cargo. The canes imported from the Mauritius by Mr. Mayo, and planted at Moreton Bay by that gentleman, are said to thrive well, and will, no doubt, at a future day, be the germ of vast fields of this valuable article of domestic consumption.—Sydney Commercial Journal, Aug. 8, 1837.

THE HIGH COURT OF PARLIAMENT.

His Church directs its members to pray for the high court of Parliament, it is our duty to call your attention to the injunction, in the hope that it will be piously attended to. Perhaps some may be inclined to ask, "What has a Christian congregation to do with debates in Parliament?" I answer, without any hesitation, "Much in many ways."

First, because they occupy, at particular times, much of our daily thoughts and conversation; and it is most necessary that we should be reminded to view and discuss these matters in the spirit of Christian charity and moderation, and depend on our rights and liberties, and our established national religion—in short, our temporal and eternal interests. If God should, for our sin, take away the spirit of wisdom from our national assembly, and turn their counsels into foolishness, alas! what miseries might we not expect? Nay, it needs not, if I may so speak, any active measures on God's part, to bring ruin upon a nation; he has but to leave us to ourselves, and we should perish by our own devices; he has but to withdraw the grace of his Holy Spirit, and at that instant the fierce demon of faction and wild ambition would reign uncontrolled—the wisest counsels would be laughed to scorn—passion would gain the mastery over reason—and every calamity would fall upon a ruined and God-forsaken people.

Secondly, because every transaction of Parliament, be it cause on our part, or on the part of the Government, is a subject which we should be pleased to prosper all their consultations, to the advancement of his glory, the good of his Church, and the safety, honour, and welfare of our Sovereign and her dominions. And, as I have before remarked, we are directed so to pray for our own conscience, or to show forth our charity, but because it is the doctrine of our Church and of our Bible that the prayers of faithful Christians are greatly effectual; and that on them it may depend whether God shall be pleased to assist the consultations of our national council, or whether he shall leave them to themselves. The sacred influence of the Gospel, my brethren, enters, or ought to enter, into every private belief, and to sanctify every transaction of our life. We are far too much accustomed to separate religion from ordinary affairs; we are too much accustomed to view national and political events without referring them, as we ought, to the arbitration of that unseen Being who directs and governs all things. We talk of men and of measures as if the former were the arbiters of the nation's fate, and as if on the latter depended all the objects of our hopes and fears. We calculate on the human support of our political bias, likely to receive, and, according to our own views of their prospects; and we forget that there is One who reigns above, in whose almighty hand is placed the sceptre of all power in heaven and on earth. And when we read the speech of some great statesman, and admire his eloquence, and marvel at the power which he exercises over the mind of men, we forget that we ourselves have a power of speech even greater than his; for that the earnest prayers of faithful Christians have more influence with the Great Disposer of events, than all the eloquence of the most accomplished statesman, if his words flow not from a faithful heart.—Rev. W. Greeley.

HIP! HIP! HIP! HURRAH FOR THE DICKEY. "As therepithody becomes stronger that the petticoat will, ere long, be the imperial standard of Britain, we have felt it our duty, as loyal subjects, to search out such precedents as may tend to secure our gracious Queen against cavil or other impugnation of her royal pleasure upon this momentous arrangement; and we are enabled to show, that bodily habiliments, from time to time, through ages past, have made the distinguishing ensign of mighty nations. To begin with the head-piece, it is necessary to remind the free sons of Britain how the cap became the chosen emblem of liberty, and has continued to be so ever since the days of William Tell. Many centuries back, a mighty revolution was effected in the Persian empire, under the auspices of no greater a personage than a blacksmith, in commemoration of which his APRON became the national banner, and we know not that it has been superseded by any other. The curious in such matters will find the transaction recorded at large in Sir John Malcolm's elaborate history of that ancient empire. Again, whilst the star dard, the raising of which has the talismanic power of rousing the phlegmatic Turk from ease and opium, to rush, scycinair in hand, where the battle is hottest. What but the green BARCHES of Mahomet? And why should not the uplifting of the royal PETTICOAT produce similar effects among the chivalrous spirits of our own land? Away, then, from your regards and unicorns, and all the zoological menagerie of the Herald's office, which not one in ten know one iota about the meaning of. The LION, we see, is fast giving way before the LAMB, and why should one of the dove, horned or cat-headed, remain on the national shield?—The petticoat! Already we see the Chartist flying before it, and Rook-buck, Mole-worth, and Joe Hume crossing and leaping each other for the will be the first to kiss its hem. Let us, therefore, in order of the petticoat as well as of the garter, or the bathing tub? When old Fletcher, of Saltoun, attached so much importance to the BALLADS of a nation, how strange that one of his acuteness should have overlooked the far greater influence of the petticoat; that habiliment which, under all shapes and forms, seems to have been designed and cut out to rule the destinies of men and of nations, from the fig-leaf of Mother Eve to the silken diction of the all-honoured VICTORIA, to whom he health, happiness, long life, and faithful councillors—Amen.—D. E. Mail.

QUEENITE AGITATION—PETTICOAT DIPLOMACY. PARIS, MAY 26.—The old struggles of the white and red roses seem likely to revive in our days between the parties which divide the British nation. The English ambassador at our Court raised a fresh pretension at the fête she gave the other day in honour of Queen Victoria's birthday. Lady Granville had announced that she would receive only ladies dressed in pink and white, and men wearing a rosette at their button-holes. The exigence was rigorously adhered to, and great attention was paid to the rejection of ladies dressed in blue. The object of the prohibition was to exclude the Tories who have assumed blue colours. We are further told that pink has been adopted as the emblem of the Queen's youth, and white as the symbol of Lord Melbourne's candour.—Quotidienne. The Courier Francaise also says that the ladies were all dressed in white or pink.

UNIFORM PENNY POSTAGE.—We yesterday stated that the Chancellor of the Exchequer on Tuesday night intimated that he should, in the course of a fortnight, propose a resolution to parliament to give effect to Mr. Rowland Hill's plan of a uniform penny postage. In making this announcement, Mr. Spring Rice said, "he hoped to have it in his power to propose a resolution founded upon the report of the Committee of the House of Commons, and that it would not be gratifying to learn that the coal pits now being worked in this country have proved extremely profitable, are worked to great advantage, the quality of the coals very good, and the demand more than equal to the supply, especially in the Kilkennault district of the County of Tipperary."

On the 26th ultimo, an unfortunate man named Thomas Collier, residing near Castlecomer, in the Queen's County, Ireland, was killed by a falling beam in a cow-shed adjoining his father's house.

HARBOUR COMMISSIONERS.

A special meeting of this board was held on Saturday, the 1st inst., at quarter past 1 o'clock. Mr. John Power was called to the chair, the other members present were, Messrs. Lapham, Williams, Thomas R. Cherry, Barde, Moore, George Courtney, and H. Ridgeway.

Very voluminous reports from the following committees were read and received:—Pilot Committee, Committee appointed to take measures for procuring a dredging machine, Committee appointed to enquire into all the circumstances respecting the bulk Carrier, Quay Committee, Ballast Committee, Finance Committee, and Watch Committee.

A desultory conversation took place about the procuring a dredging machine for clearing the river of mud, and Mr. Williams gave notice that if there was not an immediate prospect of having the machine procured, he would move that a sum of £200 be expended in having it cleared from the quay by manual labour.

A memorial from certain inhabitants of Slieroon was read, requesting the Commissioners to have the Quay at Snow-hill repaired at the expense of the Board, and pointing out the utility of doing so, it being the only Quay at the Kilkenny side of the river; postponed for the consideration of a fuller board.

A letter from Mr. Strangman was read requesting the Board to repair the Quay at the end of Sair-street, and to have a bulk placed there, which was referred to the quay committee.

The ballast committee, in their report, complained of the conduct of the ballast contractor, and stated an instance where he charged for 55 Tons of ballast and only delivered 40 Tons. Referred to the law agent to take proceedings against him.

A letter from the law agent was read, in which he stated that he had examined the lease of the quay at Ferrybank, and that the right to the land quarried on, when it came to the level of the road, was vested in the proprietor of the ground, and that Mr. L. Forrestal had not trespassed by building on the cleared ground.

MEDICAL CONGRESS.

A numerous meeting of the Physicians and Surgeons of Ireland was held on Wednesday in the Theatre of the Royal College of Surgeons. The room was crowded to excess, and there could not be less than 400 gentlemen present. Surgeon Carmichael, President of the College of Surgeons, was elected to the chair. Dr. Mawson was requested to act as Secretary.

The President proceeded to great length to describe many inconveniences to which the profession is liable, as it at present existed, in the separate branches of medicine and anatomy, and the necessity of amalgamating them into one, and the necessity of amalgamating them into one, and the necessity of amalgamating them into one, and the necessity of amalgamating them into one.

Professor Porter moved the first resolution, which was seconded by Sir Jas. Murray.

Doctor Kidd, of Ardgah, said that the medical practitioners of Ireland were bound to come forward at this important moment, and to show their respect for the most modern examination on the body of a person who came by his death under very suspicious circumstances. He did so, and was ordered by the coroner to be paid two guineas for his attendance; subsequently, however, a few farmers, who were cess-payers, and who certainly were not the best judges of the value of a professional man, had a report to be reduced to the order of the coroner to £1. (Cries of shame.)

Dr. Hart seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Dr. Martin, of Waterford, observed that the system adopted by the grand jury in the country, with reference to the mode of paying medical practitioners, was not at all that which the profession would wish.

Dr. Macartney proposed the next resolution, with respect to the union recommended, which he for one, cordially approved of.

Dr. Hargrave said, that he entirely concurred in the necessity of an union, and he was sure the delegates from the provinces would feel the necessity of it.

Dr. O'Beirne moved the next resolution, and explained the distinction between a physician and surgeon, and the qualities necessary for both.

Dr. Jacob could not express the happiness he felt at a prospect of an union among all members of the profession, (hear.)
